Workers Act For Full Pay Jan. 1; Draft 5-Point Plan

5-Day Week and 30-Day Leave Included in Program.

Two Federations Take Offensive

Recall of Compulsory Retirement Laws Also Sought.

Full restoration of Government salaries by January 1 was made the spearhead last night of a broad movement for employe betterment, embracing five salient proposals for Civil Service reform.

Following up minor White House concessions to worker demands, two strong nationally organized groups took the offensive again in parallel legislative programs for repeal of economy act slashes.

On the one hand, the American Federation of Government Employes announced nothing less than a five-day week, recall of compulsory retirement laws and restoration of 30 days annual leave will be acceptable to aroused employes.

Demands Pay Boost.

In agreement with major objectives, the more conservative National Federation of Federal Employes held back from any broad indorsement of pay increases, pending action on full salary restoration demands.

But both organizations, long rivals in the Federal employe field, drove home in unison on their mutual insistence that Congress go the President one better and restore the 5 per cent cut the first of the year, six months in advance of the President's intentions.

As opposed to the A. F. G. E. program, carrying the backing of the American Federation of Labor, the national federation trimmed its sails toward achieving in the next Congress a salary classification for the entire Federal service.

New Survey Unlikely.

Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary of the national federation, appointed representatives of her group last night to contact the Department of Labor, to ascertain on what basis the President informed newspapermen full salary by January is not in prospect.

"Employes generally have the erroneous impression the President has ordered another departmental survey of living cost data based exclusively on Federal worker living conditions," she said.

"Although he did this last session, it was not required by law, and we have no information such a procedure again is in prospect. In the first place, there is not time for a thorough study, unless it already has been made.

"We will ask Labor Department statisticians to clear up this point at once, so we may know definitely

Razor Wounds Official of Navy

F. S. Curtis, 65, for almost 30 years chief clerk in the Navy Department, was in critical condition at Casualty Hospital last night, his face, arms and neck slashed by a razor he allegedly wielded himself.

Attracted by groans she heard over an open telephone from Mr. Curtis' apartment, in the 100 block of Maryland avenue northeast, a switchboard operator found him in the bathroom in a weakened condition from loss of blood. The tub was full of water.

Mr. Curtis was taken to the hospital. He left no notes. His wife was out of town.

Navy Secretary Swanson and Assistant Secretary Roosevelt dispatched Lieut. Comdr. C. A. Broaddus, medical officer, to the bedside.

A native of Mount Vernon, Ohio, Mr. Curtis came to the Navy Department in 1891. He has a sister who works for the War Department.

Vienna Seizes Nazis 'Glorifying Assassin

Vienna, Nov. 1 (AP).—While Austria today paid solemn tribute to the slain Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, Nazis placed flowers on the grave of his assassin.

Police, it was reported, made many arrests on the grounds that the wreaths placed on the grave of Otto Planetta, Nazi, executed for slaying Dollfuss, were accompanied by political inscriptions.

3 Drown as Dam Bursts.

Guanajuato, Mexico, Nov. 1 (AP).—At least three persons perished today, many houses were destroyed and a large area flooded by the bursting of a dam recently constructed by the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co.

'Slump Ended,' Ford To Build Million Cars, Spend $145,000,000

Prosperity Schedule For 1935, Big Expansion Plan Speeded.

Detroit, Nov. 1 (AP).—Henry Ford's announcement today that his company would turn out "1,000,000 cars or better" in 1935 to fulfill his belief that the Ford Motor Co. was "out of the depression," will involve an outlay of $415,000,000, company officials reported tonight.

Here is what Ford officials say their 1,000,000-car program is expected to cost the company in its dealings with 6,008 agencies throughout the United States:

1. Freight bills for the movement of raw and finished materials will approximate $74,000,000.

2. The sum of $100,000,000, the biggest item in the Ford budget, will go into the production of automobile bodies by Detroit body-building companies.

3. Steel, iron and nonferrous materials will take about $75,000,000, and $53,600,000 of this sum will go to buy steel in the open market. The nonferrous metals of aluminum, copper, lead, tin and zinc are budgeted at about $12,000,000.

4. Tires will take $22,500,000, with $6,000,000 for crude rubber. And another $32,000,000 will go for the finishing of the bodies. Lumber requirements are listed at $3,000,000.

The beginning of large-scale production is planned for December, when 87,000 men will be on the pay roll. The company said Detroit would supply all the labor requirements.

HENRY FORD.

The automotive industry received the Ford announcement without official comment.

It was pointed out by other sources, however, that with the bulk of production concentrated in the low-priced field dominated by Ford, Chevrolet and Plymouth, consumer demand for 1,000,000 Ford cars next

Oil Concerns' Seizure Begun In Manchukuo

Tokyo, Nov. 1 (AP).—Heedless of protests from foreign interests, Manchukuo is going ahead with preparations to put into effect its proposed oil monopoly.

The Hsinking government already has taken steps to eliminate the Standard Oil Co. of New York and the British Asiatic Petroleum Co. from distributing and retailing operations in Manchukuo, it was learned today, despite representations from the United States, Great Britain and the Netherlands.

In moving to take over the two companies' extensive facilities, Manchukuo officials notified them the monopoly would be instituted "in the near future" and that "in all probability the present marketing and selling system will be greatly changed." Previously native agents of the two concerns were instructed to come to Hsinking to confer on their status under the new monopoly.

Protests at Manchukuo's action have been based on the charge that it violates the open-door policy enunciated in the nine-power treaty, while the new government, in its defense, has flooded the Japanese press with statements purporting to show the necessity for stabilizing national life and the promotion of cultural development."

Son of President Accused in Spain

Madrid, Nov. 1 (AP).—A "serious affair," involving Luis Zamora, son of President Niceto Alcala Zamora, who is serving his obligatory military period at Jaca, will result in his summary court martial, Premier Alejandro Lerroux announced today.

The boy's father agreed that he should be prosecuted to the full extent of the military law, the premier said after today's cabinet session.

Meanwhile, it was reported tonight that two revolutionists, convicted by a military court, were to be executed at dawn. One was charged with having hurled a bomb at a truck carrying dynamite. The explosion killed 35 soldiers. The other killed five guards and a lieutenant at Leon.

U. S. Prepared To Meet Japan In Naval Race

Will Build to Maintain Ratio if Parley at London Fails.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

The United States is prepared to maintain the 5-5-3 ratio of the Washington naval treaty by building five ships for every three constructed by the Japanese if the present efforts at naval disarmament fail and the Tokyo government terminates the existing limitation treaties.

This was learned yesterday in a high quarter, where it was stated that this Government would stand firmly for a differential between the sea power of Japan and the United States, even if such insistence meant the breakdown of the naval conversations now in progress at London.

The position of the American Government was revealed as the United States, Japanese and British delegations met together for the first time in London to discuss a solution of the problem projected by the demand of the Nipponese that they be given equality of fleet strength in all future treaties.

Accord Seems Unlikely.

What happened yesterday at London along with the revelations here cast a further shadow of gloom over the prospects of the three powers reaching an agreement. The Japanese at London quickly repudiated reports that they would accept a formula giving them equality over a period of years.

This government, however, is prepared for a break-down of the naval conversations, it was explained officially here. Although the United States made the greatest sacrifices at the Washington and

Hugh Foster, Alabama Banking Leader, Dies

Union Springs, Ala., Nov. 1 (AP).—Hugh Foster, 63, prominent Alabama banker, and until recently managing director of the Jacksonville, Fla., branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, died yesterday at his home here.

Foster, deputy governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta several years, later was transferred to Jacksonville and remained there until ill health forced him to resign recently.

Thousands Trudge Long Stairs As N. Y. Strike Halts Elevators

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Thousands of office and factory workers in the congested garment center trudged down long flights of rarely used stairs tonight as a strike of building employes tied up elevator service.

James S. Bambrick, president of the Building Service Employes International Union, Local 32B, asserted that the walkout had completely tied up elevators in 240 midtown buildings and impaired service in 285 others. Most of the structures are 20 stories or higher.

Strike leaders of the union, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, also said owners of 51 buildings already had signed contracts agreeing to the union's terms. This was disputed by the New York Real Estate Board, controlling most of the structures in the area affected.

Real estate board officials said they had heard no report of any building owner assenting to the union's demands for recognition as the collective bargaining agent and for a 40-hour week at a wage of $35.

Bambrick charged that building service employes, including watchmen, janitors, carpenters and maintenance workers, were kept on their jobs from 84 to 100 hours weekly for monthly wages of $40 to $50.

Union leaders estimated that 7,000 of the 8,600 building employes in the strike area had joined the walkout. The strike call covered the territory from Fourteenth to Forty-second streets, between Fifth and Ninth avenues.

Captain Kills Self Aboard Ship at Sea

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 1 (AP).—J. B Cohan, marine superintendent of the South Atlantic Steamship Co., today announced the line had received a radiogram that Capt. W. H. Walker, of the steamship Georgian, had died from a self-inflicted bullet wound aboard his vessel at sea.

U. S. Deficit For '34 Tops Billion Mark

The Federal deficit for the current fiscal year yesterday passed the billion dollar mark and reached a figure almost three times as great as a year ago while President Roosevelt and his aids concentrated on drafting next year's budget.

The "red ink" difference between expenditures and receipts since July 1 stood at $1,026,788,998, almost paralleling the emergency expenditures of $1,105,872,438.

Simultaneously, gold receipts of more than $2,000,000 brought total gold assets in Government hands to $8,001,062,974. It was the first time they have passed the 8,000,000,000-mark.

Hopkins Confers.

Harry L. Hopkins, Emergency Relief Administrator, whose budget estimate for the next fiscal year is the most uncertain, yesterday lunched with the President and later conferred with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director.

Just how high the relief figure will go is conjectural, but Hopkins is insistent upon an adequate amount to care for all needy unemployed. In this attitude he is understood to have the stanch support of Roosevelt.

The largest item of emergency expenditures since July 1 was for relief to the unemployed, accounting for $458,581,063.87.

General Expenditures.

General expenditures amounted to $1,129,101,226, and receipts were $1,208,184,66. A year ago receipts were but $927,643,126. The deficit at this stage last year, however, was but $481,906,629.

Next to relief, emergency conservation work has taken $132,117,415 and public roads $168,257,847 this year.

Accurate estimates on the budget for relief requirements probably will not be obtained until near the end of the year, or shortly before the budget is transmitted to Congress.

Since the resignation of Lewis W. Douglas as budget director, none in the Administration has raised his voice against a large emergency budget.

Business Watchful.

Big business, however, is keeping a close watch on the drafting of the new budget, and is demanding a sharp reduction in emergency estimates with the aim of obtaining a balanced budget within the near future.

Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, last night in a radio interview said that a recent "sharp increase in bank deposits is a forerunner of a pick-up in business.

"The money is in the banks now," he said. "History shows that money never remains idle indefinitely. In fact, there is no historical precedent for money remaining idle as long as it already has."

'Intellectual Distinction' Is Noted in Comedians

Newark, N. J., Nov. 1 (AP).—President Harvey N. Davis, of Stevens Institute of Technology, believes that some comedians, among them Charlie Chaplin and Will Rogers, possess an "intellectual distinction" which great men lack.

"We find men in laboratories who make great discoveries in a highly specialized line," he says, "whom we can not designate as having distinguished minds."

U. S. to Appeal Verdict In Petroleum Code Suit

Oklahoma City, Nov. 1 (AP).—Instructions to appeal a decision of Federal Judge Edgar S. Vaught involving the "orderly development" clause of the NRA petroleum code, to the United States Supreme Court were received today from the Attorney General's office in Washington.

Wade Loofbourrow, assistant district attorney, said the Government's brief probably will be ready in 30 days.

Post-WJSV Election Service

News of the elections from all over the country will be broadcast next Tuesday night by the Washington Post and WJSV, of the Columbia Broadcasting System, cooperating to give earliest possible returns as they come in from the voting precincts. First returns will be on the air at 6:30 p. m., followed by flashes at frequent intervals.

Raymond Clapper, nationally known political writer of The Post staff, will be heard in a nation-wide broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System's nation-wide network, at 10:30 p. m., election night. Bob Trout, ace announcer of the Columbia staff, will be stationed in The Post news room from 6:30 p. m. until the early morning hours directing the broadcasting of election news periodically. He will present Post political writers in interpretative comments on State elections.

For early flash returns listen to The Post and WJSV Tuesday night. For complete election returns read The Washington Post Wednesday morning.

Jones Defies Reed to Back RFC Charge

By Robert C. Albright.

Charges that Reconstruction Finance Corporation money has found its way into the hotly contested Pennsylvania campaign were repeated last night in the face of firm denials from the RFC high command.

Senator David A. Reed, Republican candidate for reelection, clung to his story that three Pennsylvania firms made 6 per cent Democratic campaign contributions to get RFC loans. He says he was "sure of his facts." Names of the concerns remained undisclosed.

Reed absolved Chairman Jesse H. Jones and members of his Washington RFC staff of responsibility for the incident, as wires between Washington and Pennsylvania were kept busy in a brisk interchange between interested officials and the Republican Senator.

Jones Denies Charge.

Jones told reporters here that the charges, which dropped with a loud bang on the Administration doorstep, "can not possibly be true."

"I got in touch with the Senator this morning by telephone and stated to him that any such procedure would be in violation of criminal law and that I wanted the information for the Department of Justice," Jones said.

"The Senator advised me that he would not give the source of his information now, but would furnish me with further facts upon his return to Washington after the election."

The RFC chairman said Senator Reed gave no reasons why he could not furnish at once the names of the firms and the facts in the case.

By long-distance phone, however, the Republican senatorial candidate said he had given assurances to the companies involved that he would make no immediate use of their names.

He said it would be "improper" to make the information available to anyone until the firms have arranged to refinance their loans, made on a six-month basis, or have assurances that someone else will take them over.

Certain, Says Reed.

Reed said the information had come to him several weeks ago, and he has had ample time to check the accuracy of the facts in question. Of their verity, he said, he is certain.

Chairman Jones was just as emphatic in doubting "there is anything to it."

Asked if he had investigated the general charges, Jones replied:

"We haven't thought it necessary."

But in the next breath the chairman disclosed agents in the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh offices have been checking on loans.

In his original allegations, Senator Reed said he thought one of the three loans was for $120,000.

President Off Tonight To Vote at Hyde Park

Accompanied only by Assistant White House Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre, President Roosevelt will leave Washington late tonight for Hyde Park, N. Y., where he will cast his vote on Tuesday for the straight Democratic ticket.

When he return in the middle of next week he will know the make-up of the next Congress, and whether the New Deal has gained or slipped in its hold upon the electorate. One of the last to confer with him yesterday was Postmaster General James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman.

Kroger, Former Grocery Magnate, Is Dead at 79

Asheville, N. C., Nov. 1 (AP).—William Kroger, 79, who, with his brother, R. J. Kroger, of Cincinnati, founded the Kroger chain of grocery stores, was found dead in bed today in his room at a hotel here.

Hotel employes discovered the body. Dr. J. L. Carroll, county coroner, said that death was the result of an attack of angina pectoris. The former grocery store magnate in recent years had divided his time between Asheville and Florida.

McDonald Questioned For Hours on Ambush; Refuses to Tell Motive

Limited Police Force Opens Gates to Crime

Lone Patrolman Guards Entire 12th Precinct in Late Hours of Night.

What is the exact truth about crime conditions and about law enforcement in the Nation's Capital? In a series of articles, of which this is the first, The Post undertakes to answer this question.

A lone foot patrolman guards the lives of thousands of citizens and millions of dollars' worth of property in the Twelfth Precinct from the hour of midnight until 8 a. m.

That is the picture drawn by Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown to illustrate the inadequacy of his personnel to afford proper protection to the citizens of the Capital.

In the past Maj. Brown preferred to minimize the inability of his men to patrol the city properly, feeling that wide publicity of the condition would be the equivalent of an invitation to criminals to ply their trades here.

But now he believes that the most effective method of combating the situation is clearly to acquaint the populace with the problem with which the Police Department and the citizens are confronted.

Maj. Brown is an ardent expo-

Insull Blames Self in Crash, Absolving 16

Chicago, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Samuel Insull, white-haired monarch of a destitute financial empire, today absolved 16 codefendants of responsibility for his fall from power.

Tears rolled down his ruddy cheeks as he testified in Federal court, where he and his associates are charged with mail frauds aggregating $143,000,000.

Insull protested that he was pursuing the "same economic theories as President Hoover and John D. Rockefeller, sr.," when his utilities empire collapsed two years ago.

"If I feel some embarrassment sitting here," he said, "I feel it infintely more for these younger men who have no responsibility whatever in this situation.

"If the prosecution will excuse me, these defendants have no more to do with this case than you have. These men were pot in any way responsible for what happened."

Fifteen Lose Pleas.

Judge James J. Wilkerson yesterday turned down pleas of 15 codefendants that they be freed on directed verdicts of not guilty. Insull and his son, Samuel, jr., made no plea.

Floyd E. Thompson, Insull's attorney, asked him what happened four days after organization of Corporation Securities Co. in October, 1929, with 1,250,000 shares of stock.

"That was the famous black Thursday," Insull replied. "There was a tremendous break in the market."

"What was the attitude of the Nation's business leaders about this?"

"They felt—we all felt—that it was purely a stock market episode and would have no decided effect on the country. John D. Rockefeller, sr., who had not made a public statement in 18 years, declared on October 30, 1929, that the fundamental condition of the country was sound and that he and his son would keep on buying stocks."

Insull also referred to President

La Roe Denies That Freed Prisoners Committed Subsequent Crimes.

A public challenge calling on United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett to produce facts in support of his criticism of the District parole law was issued yesterday by Wilbur La Roe, jr., a member of the parole board, as other agencies carried on their anti-crime drive.

Garnett, in a formal statement, declined to enter "into a newspaper controversy" with La Roe, but pointed out that the latter's letter to him was given to the press before it reached his office.

This was the second attack on the United States attorney as a repercussion to his address Monday night at the mass meeting in the Mayflower Hotel.

Amos A. Steele, probation officer of the District Supreme Court, made a sharp retort in a previous formal statement, intimating that the number of nolle prosses by the United States attorney's office tended to encourage crime.

Other Developments.

Other developments in the organized onslaught on law breakers in the District were:

District officials invoked fire escape regulations to force owners of buildings to remove barricades which police said had been used for protection of gambling operations.

A committee to investigate charges of malpractice among attorneys was named by F. Regis Noel, president of the District Bar Association.

The organization group engaged in selecting members of a permanent committee on criminal justice selected seven of the nine members but withheld their names until a report is made to the Committee of 40 Monday afternoon.

The committee named by Noel will seek to determine whether collusion between attorneys and criminals has encouraged crime in the District. It was given the name

Willa Cather, More and O'Neill Are Mentioned for Nobel Prize

Stockholm, Nov. 1 (AP).—Willa Cather, American novelist, and Paul Elmer More, American essayist and editor, were rumored today with Eugene O'Neill, American playwright, as the possible winners of the Nobel Prize in literature, soon to be announced.

A long list of persons, however, have been mentioned as possibilities. The list includes H. G. Wells, of England; Johannes Jorgensen, of Denmark, and Olof Dunn, of Norway.

Miss Cather won the Pulitzer Prize in 1922 for her novel, "One of Ours." She was awarded the Prix Femina Americaine in 1933 for "distinguished literary accomplishments." One of her greatest successes was "Death Comes to the Archbishop."

Mr. More was literary editor of the New York Evening Post from 1903 to 1909 and edited the Nation from 1909 to 1914. He published the "Life of Benjamin Franklin" in 1900. One of his most recent books is "The Catholic Faith," printed in 1931.

Mr. O'Neill, whom many regard as having changed the trend of the American theater, wrote such successes as "Ah Wilderness," "The Emperor Jones," "The Hairy Ape," "Mourning Becomes Electra," "Desire Under the Elms," "Strange Interlude," and "The Great God Brown."

Youth, 21, Improving After 4 Days of Talk

Kansas City, Nov. 1 (AP).—Lloyd Huffey, 21, brought to a hospital for observation because of his continuous talking for four days following an automobile accident, was proceeding at reduced speed today.

Huffey interspersed his talking with periods of rest. Physicians said they believed he would recover without aid of medicine.

Police Press Gambler on Reason Why He Was 'on Spot.'

Balks at Breaking Underworld Code

Takoma Man Evasive or Mum to Queries, Says Prosecutor.

Firing questions in relays, police last night attempted to learn from Edward "Mickey" McDonald, gambler, what he knows about the killing of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route agent.

McDonald, in front of whose home at Takoma Park, Md., Wilson was shot by two men early on the morning of October 23, is believed to have been the intended victim of the shooting. Law enforcement authorities reason that he must have some idea of who wanted to take his life, and they declared they proposed to find out.

Gambler Mentioned.

There he was confronted by Stedman Prescott, State's attorney for Montgomery County, Washington detectives, Baltimore detectives and Montgomery County officers.

Working singly and in pairs, the officers flung question after question at McDonald. He either gave evasive answers or refused to answer, it was said.

After five hours of questioning, Prescott emerged from the room and said:

"McDonald is sticking to the rules of gangdom and disclosing little."

The questioning went on through the dinner hour and into the night. After about eight hours of grilling McDonald was returned home, it was said.

May Seek Habeas Corpus Writ.

McDonald was not under arrest in that no charge had been placed against him.

While Prescott would make no statement other than that the officers had "learned little," it was reported from other sources that information had been obtained that threw some light on the crime. The nature of this information, however, was being carefully guarded.

Detectives were particularly interested in establishing a motive for the killing. McDonald's activities have been devious and police are trying to learn of his movements prior to the killing. These, McDonald, presumably, refused to disclose.

Seek Basis of His Fear.

Police want to know specifically why McDonald was marked for death.

They want to know why he kept his home under flood lights at night.

They want to know why he maintained a bodyguard.

Meanwhile, the investigation was pursued in other directions. The search for Marie McKeever, sweetheart of Robert Mais, escaped killer, was continuing. John (Slim) Dunn, alleged member, with Mais, of the Tri-State gang, still was in jail, where he has been questioned concerning reports that he knew something of the Wilson killing.

Authorities still are guarding carefully the identity of a witness who is said to have told them he saw two white men shoot Wilson.

3 Injured Here In 20-Foot Fall

Slab of Concrete Knocks Them From Scaffold.

Jones B. Smith, of Relay, Md., and James Weade, 31, of Catonsville, also lineman, suffered cuts and bruises and were discharged from the institution after treatment.

Police said the men, engaged in electrification of the terminal, were trying to chop out a small section of conrete when the large section fell. Sundry, whose home is in Baltimore, was caught under it while the others fell clear. They dropped about 20 feet.

Tire Price Increases Slated by Industry

Akron, Ohio, Nov. 1 (AP).—Prices of automobile tires took their biggest price increase in years today as major producers apparently abandoned this industry's old-time practice of "savage competition."

The average increase will be about 18 per cent, although on a few lines of unusual sizes the advance cost to the consumer will range as high as 75 per cent, tire men said.

Hines Sees Hint Of Compromise On Bonus Issue

Calls on Roosevelt, Thinks Legion May Rest on Interest Voiding.

Hint of a compromise on the controversial bonus issue was dropped at the White House yesterday by Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, the Veterans' Administrator, after a conference in which he reported to President Roosevelt on the recent convention of the American Legion in Miami.

"I have an idea," Gen. Hines declared, "that the executive committee of the legion will ask for the forgiving of all interest on bonus loans rather than press for full payment of the bonus."

This statement immediately stirred Washington headquarters of the legion high command, which was overridden on the bonus question at Miami. Furthermore, it provoked speculation on the possibility that a compromise, less obnoxious to the White House than cash payment of the bonus, may be sought by the veterans.

Committee Action First.

Resolutions "recommending" both cashing of the bonus and the elimination of all interest charges, both past and future, were approved overwhelmingly at the Miami convention. Before the annual drive on Congress is launched, however, the legislative program goes before a meeting of the legion's executive committee at Indianapolis, November 24-25.

Until then, National Commander Frank N. Belgrano, jr., telephoned from San Francisco, "Any talk about our plans will be pure guesswork and unworthy of consideration."

His statement which was dictated to Washington last night, apparently in response to Gen. Hines' remarks, declared:

"A number of unauthorized and inaccurate statements have been made to the effect that the question of payment of the adjusted service certificates would be relegated to the background in the American Legion program.

No Relegation.

"I want it to be known that no action taken by the convention will be relegated to the background, and certainly not one on which the American Legion expressed itself so emphatically as adjusted compensation."

While sentiment at Miami appeared to indicate "the boys are quite determined to get their bonus," Gen. Hines reported, on the other hand, that "certain members feel that the interest is all that they can get." The inference was that, whereas a Presidential veto of the bonus seems certain, Congress and Mr. Roosevelt might be more amenable to the cancellation of interest.

Gen. Hines said the President expressed no opinion on the action of the legion. It is apparent, however, that Mr. Roosevelt attaches considerable importance to the danger, from his viewpoint, of Congress again getting out of hand on the veterans question and will exert all his influence toward tempering their demands.

The fact that the legion "recommended," instead of "demanded," cashing of the bonus is understood to be the basis of Administration hopes the issue will not be fought to a finish. Mr. Roosevelt is maintaining close touch with all developments, and only recently conferred with Louis Johnson, a past commander of the legion, on the Miami meeting.

Future Interest Huge.

The amount involved in refunding of interest accumulated against loans on the bonus certificates was estimated roughly by Gen. Hines at $250,000,000. This does not take into account, however, the huge future interest total that would be lost to the Government if no further charges were made for loans.

The maturity value of certificates in force now is placed at $3,496,000,000, against which veterans have borrowed $1,596,000,000. Under the law allowing them to borrow up to 50 per cent of the certificates, the total loan value of certificates outstanding is $1,748,000,000.

Since the bonus is payable in 1945, the dropping of interest would cost the Government the $250,000,000 in interest already accrued, plus 3½ per cent on loans outstanding for ten years. It has been the contention of the legion that veterans who have borrowed $500 on an average certificate of $1,000 would have virtually nothing left after interest had been deducted from the remaining $500.

Elimination of interest would permit a veteran who had not exercised his borrowing power to obtain 50 per cent of his certificate immediately without impairing the balance.

At the legion headquarters it was explained that both payment of the bonus, which would involve $2,206,000,000, and the remission of interest necessarily will form part of the legislative program. The executive committee, it was explained, however, has authority to determine what shall be "must" and what shall be "secondary" on that program.

Transportation Aid Is Named by Roper

Labert St. Clair, New York Expert, Appointed.

The appointment of Labert St. Clair, of New York, as transportation assistant to Secretary of Commerce Roper was announced yesterday.

Mr. St. Clair has specialized in rail and motor transit for 15 years, especially on its coordination with other forms of commerce. He is the author of a standard history of all types of land, water and air transportation used since civilization's beginning.

"We can not possibly have a return to permanent prosperity in the United States until the efforts of transit and other business groups are properly coordinated," Secretary Roper said. "To this end I am seeking to strengthen our personnel."

Between You and Me

By Raymond Clapper

ALL of us Washington correspondents will have to hang our heads in shame. Here we were hunting for news, running furiously around corners looking for a man biting a dog. And what happens right under our inattentive eyes? Why the chairman of the Republican National committee goes after Wall street and the bankers with a red-hot poker.

President Roosevelt had done it so often that it ceased to be news. He changed his tactics and landed back on page 1 again by shaking hands with the bankers. Promptly the Hon. Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National committee, also made a leap for page 1 by changing his tactics and going after Wall street.

Mr. Fletcher, whose election as chairman of the Republican National committee last summer was hailed by some as a Wall street victory, gave the bankers a sound verbal spanking. The other night he said:

"In spite of the secretly prearranged stage play between Wall street and the White House at the recent bankers' convention, followed by formation of an All-American bankers' team to play for the Administration, the Republican party does not, and will not, abandon its insistence upon a return to a stable currency and a balanced budget."

That from the chairman of the Republican National committee, and all of us muffed it! It makes us reporters out to be just a lot of journalists.

Carroll Miller, a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, is the first commissioner in the whole history of the I. C. C. to come from Pennsylvania. He is a brother-in-law of Joseph F. Guffey, Democratic candidate for the Senate in Pennsylvania.

Pennsylvania is the great producer of anthracite. Anthracite is having tough sledding because high freight rates drive householders to use substitute fuels. That throws Pennsylvania miners out of work. Application was made to the Interstate Commerce Commission to reduce freight rates. This, it was argued, would reduce the cost of anthracite, encourage consumption and put Pennsylvania miners back in the mines. That would help Guffey in his election fight because the mining counties swing a hefty vote in Pennsylvania. Guffey never overlooks a bet, and presumably he was hoping the commission would come through before election day. Sure enough it did.

But Guffey's brother-in-law voted against the reduction. And he offered a dissenting opinion declaring that this was an unwarranted whittling away of railroad revenues, a demonstration of the futility of piece-meal revision of rates, and simply giving encouragement to a vicious circle.

Chicago has two rival newspaper publishers, Col. R. R. McCormick, of the Chicago Tribune, and Col. Frank Knox, of the Daily News. Both are Republicans. Both are swinging at the Administration with sledgehammers.

Secretary of Interior Ickes, who comes from Chicago and has an impish streak, was the first in the Administration to seek to aggravate the rivalry of the two publishers, referring to them as the "Political Colonels," and potential rivals for the next Republican Presidential nomination.

When the subject has come up on some recent occasions, Mr. Roosevelt is said to have remarked in a studied off-hand manner that "Ickes tells me both colonels are out after my job."

Harry Hopkins is growing weary of attempts of political candidates to exploit his relief expenditures. Asked about one State situation in which party leaders have attempted to take a hand, the sharp eyes of the young relief administrator flashed, as he retorted:

"Relief is being run from this office, and from nowhere else."

New York Democrats have been talking about urging President Roosevlt to make a radio talk for the New York State ticket when he goes to Hyde Park to vote. But the latest word is that since Mrs. Roosevelt has been campaigning in the State, some of the Democratic leaders feel it might be bringing the White House family too strongly into the fight, with the chance of stirring up a reaction. Republicans already are charging that it is unfair for the White House to take such an active part in the New York State campaign.

Those favoring extensive construction of grade crossings as a public works project have found a new argument arising out of the effort of the railroads to speed up schedules by using streamlined trains and by stepping up their old equipment to faster time. One railroad executive says that the danger of streamline trains, constructed of lighter material, is in grade-crossing accidents. Heavy old-style trains provide automatic safety for passengers by their great weight and also by the fact that baggage cars forward of the coaches give an additional safety buffer. The fear is that the new-type trains will not withstand the shock of collision as satisfactorily from the passenger's point of view.

As the greatest danger lies in grade-crossing accidents, the speeding up of schedules and introduction of the new-type light equipment might be said to wait in part upon elimination of these dangerous intersections. But this seepding up is essential to recapture lost passenger revenues. Hence, grade-crossing elimination becomes a positive factor in rehabilitation of the railroads.

"Why," he said, "they treated me very respectfully."

Jones Calls on Reed to Back Pennsylvania RFC Allegation

000, but then the Senator didn't fix it at exactly that figure," he said.

Incredulous of claims that political contributions were required as a prerequisite to loans, RFC officials steadfastly pointed out the illegality of advancing money on any other basis than need, sufficient collateral, and ability of the borrower to pay.

From the very first, Reed cleared Jones and his Washington organization of implication, holding his charge "in no way reflected upon the honesty and integrity" of the Washington officials.

"I am quite certain that Mr. Jones and the RFC organization are functioning efficiently and honestly," the Senator was quoted as informing the RFC by telephone.

"The skullduggery was conceived and carried out in Pennsylvania after loans had been properly approved in Washington."

Directed at Reed.

The investigators specifically were instructed to inquire into alleged "excessive" expenditures by Reed and outlays by all other candidates. Gov. Gifford Pinchot, who has thrown his support to the Reed ticket, announced his cooperation.

Fighting fire with fire, Senator Reed also has turned over information to Home Owners Loan Corporation officials alleging irregular practices in certain Pennsylvania branches.

The Reed charges tied into repeated Republican national committee claims that the Democrats are "buying votes" through State distribution of AAA benefits, and advance White House announcements of State "surveys" and contemplated beneficial moves by the Administration.

To this, the National Civil Service Reform League yesterday added the charge that "an unhappy combination of partisan political selection of administrators of relief and the practice of confining the selection of the supervisory staffs exclusively to relief beneficiaries" had resulted in "wasteful and inefficient handling of relief projects all over the country."

Pinchot Answers Byrnes.

From Greensburg, Pa., Gov. Pinchot was quoted last night in Associated Press dispatches, in answer to a letter from Chairman Byrnes, of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee.

"From your letter, it is clear you have been informed that I am holding something back," Pinchot replied to Byrnes, the dispatches stated. "I am holding nothing back."

He made a countercharge that investigators for the Senate committee turned over to a Philadelphia newspaper official documents they had uncovered.

He concluded by saying he regarded it "as most unfortunate that undoubtedly without your knowledge or approval, a committee of the dignity and the importance of yours should have been made use of by politicians for the purpose of influencing votes in the coming election."

From Scranton, Pa., the Associated Press quoted Senator Reed in a campaign speech as denying excessive expenditures, with the statement:

"I don't want any public office if I have to buy it."

A. & P. and Unions May Reach Truce Today in Dispute

Cleveland, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Leaders of labor unions aligned with the chain grocery industry were ready tonight to place before their memberships a truce plan designed to end strife between the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co and organized labor.

Adoption of the plan, drawn up when reprentatives of both factions met before the National Labor Board in Washington, depended on acceptance by the A. & P. board of directors in New York and the local unions involved.

Decisions of both parties were not expected until tomorrow or later. They will be sent first to the Labor Board, which will announce the result.

Directors and division presidents of the chain failed late today in New York to arrive at any decision regarding the strike, but John A. Hartford, A. & P. president, announced that conferees would return to Cleveland to continue consideration of the problem.

Upon the action of both parties depended the reopening of some 300 A. & P. stores, closed when the company decided to withdraw from the Celeveland market rather than fight further against the forces of organized labor.

Merriam Holds Lead of 5 to 2 In Straw Vote

Final Count of the Digest's Poll Shows Sinclair Far Behind.

New York, Nov. 1.—Gov. Frank F. Merriam, of California, led his Democratic opponent, Upton Sinclair, by 2½ to 1 in the Literary Digest poll on the gubernatorial contest in that State, the magazine's final tabulation of returns showed tonight.

Gov. Merriam, Republican candidate for reelection, was 5 to 1 ahead of Raymond L. Haight, Progressive-Commonwealth Party nominee.

The final tally showed:

	Number for.	Percentage for.
Sam Darcy, Communist..	584	0.4
M. C. Dempster, Socialist	142	0.1
R. L. Haight, Prog.-Com.	16.890	11.69
F. F. Merriam, Republican	90.060	62.31
Upton Sinclair, Democrat	36.857	25.5
Total	144.533

Returns from all of the larger cities, except Fresno and Sacramento, showed a majority for Merriam. No other candidate obtained a majority in any large community, an analysis of returns showed.

The Riverside community's returns showed 82.53 per cent favoring Merriam, his best showing in the poll. Sinclair was credited with 41.23 per cent of the returns from San Pedro, the port of Los Angeles, the greatest share he received in any city.

Grand Jury Probes Fraud Charges

San Francisco, Nov. 1 (AP).—Moves to forestall possible illegal voting in Los Angeles by indictments and by challenging thousands of registrants got under way today as the time approached for settlement at the polls of the epochal fight for the governorship of California.

Resuming its investigation of asserted illegal registration by thousands of persons in the southern metropolis, center of Upton Sinclair's strength in the primary, the Los Angeles County grand jury was presented with 52 indictment forms. Fifty witnesses were called.

Deputy Prosecutor Daniel Beecher announced he expected grand jury action on the indictments shortly.

These developments came upon the heels of a State Supreme Court decision blocking attempts of the Republican State attorney general to bring mass disqualification of persons who allegedly had registered illegally in Los Angeles.

They followed closely also charges by Sinclair supporters that motion picture magnates were threatening dismissal to employes who would vote for Sinclair, Democratic nominee for Governor.

Beecher and his investigators were inquiring into a charge by David Sokol, Democratic worker, that Katharine Hepburn was "an example" of an employe "so threatened" by the film executives.

Overshadowing election campaigns in the other Western States, the California fight reachd such intensity that campaign organizations of both Sinclair and Gov. Frank F. Merriam, the Republican nominee, announced they would have "watchers" at the polls.

Jurors on Coast Indict Buron Fitts In 'Girl Market'

Los Angeles, Nov. 1 (AP).—Perjury indictments were returned today against Buron Fitts, State's district attorney, and his sister-secretary as a sequel to the Hollywood "girl market" case.

The indictments were based upon statements by Fitts and the sister, Mrs. Bertha Gregory, before a grand jury which investigated the case in 1931.

Fitts, who a few years ago sent his predecessor, the late Asa Keyes, to prison on a bribery charge, had been under investigatoin for three months by the county grand jury and a special prosecutor. The district attorney has called the inquiry a political move.

Fitts' financial affairs as well as his connection with dismissal of charges in the "girl market" case reputedly were looked into by the grand jury.

Bankhead Act's Repeal Is Sought

Rumblings in the South over operation of the Bankhead cotton control act crystallized yesterday in the declaration by Chairman Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, that he would demand repeal of the measure at the next session of Congress, the Associated Press says.

Meanwhile, a referendum will be conducted among growers themselves on continuance of the compulsory plan through 1935. The vote will be taken before the first of the year.

Smith, describing the Bankhead act as a "heartbreaking disappointment," said he would advocate an acreage regulation plan with "reasonable inducements." The veteran South Carolina Senator also asserted he would demand modification of the tariff laws, declaring the Smoot-Hawley act "has done more to bring about unrest and disrupt the nations of the earth than anything else."

Massachusetts Strike Calls Out Troops

West Warren, Mass., Nov. 1 (AP).—Fifteen State troopers were called by the selectmen into West Warren late today to suppress an outbreak, in which one man was hurt, at the Ohio Carpet Co. mill, where a strike is in progress. Mill windows were smashed and automobiles overturned in the rioting.

Troopers drove back about 300 pickets and sympathizers to let 40 workers out of the mill, in which they had been prisoners for two hours.

Aviation Bases To Defend U. S. Urged on Board

Rep. Mark Wilcox Asks Adoption of Plan and Air Department.

Construction of a network of 20 air bases, at a cost of $200,000,000, as the primary defense of the United States and its island possessions was urged yesterday by Representative Mark Wilcox (Democrat), of Florida, before the Federal Aviation Commission.

Mr. Wilcox based his plan upon the idea that once an air attack was launched nothing could prevent the destruction of its objective, and the only defense is to be in position to take off immediately and destroy the enemy's own bases. He advocated a Department of Air, or, "at least," a unified air service.

The Representative would have bases located on both coasts and in Panama, Puerto Rico, Hawaii and Alaska.

He suggested as possible sites Portland, Seattle, Spokane, San Diego, Los Angeles, San Francsico, on the West Coast, and Miami, Norfolk, Atlantic City, Boston, Portland, Me., and a location on Long Island on the Atlantic seaboard.

Also appearing before the commission yesterday was E. R. Armstrong, head of the Seadrome Ocean Dock Corporation, of Wilmington, who urged Government financial aid in construction of seadromes to facilitate transatlantic flying. Mr. Armstrong said public works funds should be used for building the floating docks, and declared efforts are being made to interest the French government in an international corporation to develop the sea landings.

Opposition to the use of PWA funds in building airships to be operated by private companies, a proposal previously made before the commission, was voiced yesterday by Secretary Ickes.

He also reiterated opposition to PWA financing construction of the seadromes.

Plane Repairs Delay Pacific Hop to Saturday

Honolulu, Nov. 1 (AP).—Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, here for the final lap of his Australia-to-California flight, announced tonight repairs to his plane would require at least 48 hours, probably delaying the take-off until Saturday. A leaky oil line was discovered today shortly before the time set for his start. Repairs will necessitate removal of a wing.

When the defect was found, Kingsford-Smith and his navigator, Capt. P. G. Taylor, announced a 24-hour postponement of the 2,408-mile overseas flight to Oakland, Calif.

Eckener Offers Ocean Air Mail Service to U. S.

Plan for Pacific Flights Also Being Studied by Postoffice Heads.

(Associated Press.)

Plans which would send mail from the United States winging across both the Atlantic and the Pacific, to Europe on the one side and Asia on the other, are under consideration at the Postoffice Department.

The department desires to cooperate insofar as possible in both. Legal experts pointed out yesterday, however, that certain barriers were set up in the new air-mail law which would block contract letting in either case, unless there be competitive bidding.

In the transatlantic proposal, submitted by Dr. Hugo Eckener, the Zeppelin expert, a method of cooperation has been suggested which might be acceptable.

Two firms, the Pan-American Airways and the Inter-island Aviation concern, have approached the department with proposals for flying the mail across the Pacific to Hawaii or the Orient. The Inter-island company already is handling mail in the Hawaiian Islands.

Dr. Eckener's proposal to Harllee Branch, the Second Assistant Postmaster General, was that the department cooperate in the establishment of a four-month experimental service across the North Atlantic.

Branch pointed out that the department would not be able to grant any contract for such a service. Eckener responded with a suggestion that the mail be handled at the regular foreign mail postal charge, with those who wished their mail to be handled by air to pay 25 cents a half ounce additional for the air-mile service. The surcharge would go to the Zeppelin company.

Branch evidenced interest in the idea and suggested that Eckener make it in the nature of a formal, written offer so that it might be studied by legal experts of the department.

Eckener's plan contemplates the eventual development of a service which would provide regular four-day departures of the dirigibles across the Atlantic. The crossings would be made in 50 hours.

Jersey-to-Germany Flights Set for 1935

Philadelphia, Nov. 1 (AP).—Dr. Hugo Eckener, Zeppelin expert, announced today he would begin trial flights early next summer between Lakehurst, N. J., and Friedrichshafen, Germany, in the hope of inaugurating scheduled transatlantic dirigible service soon afterward. Addressing a luncheon, Dr. Eckener said:

"If we can prove the practicability of the Zeppelin for transatlantic travel, with fixed schedules and under whatever weather conditions exist at the time of our experimental flights are made, I am certain the public will be convinced of its stability."

In a new dirigible now under construction, he said, he hopes to make the eastbound flight in 48 hours, and eventually reduce it to 42 hours.

The trial flights will be conducted on a ten-day schedule, with a possibility, he said, of making triangular flights between Rio de Janeiro, Lakehurst and Germany.

Assailant of Girl Hunted by Hundreds

Lexington, N. C., Nov. 1 (AP).—Several hundred men, many of them armed, combed the countryside near Thomasville today for a colored man accused of attacking a white girl at pistol point.

Three suspects were taken before the victim at the Thomasville jail, officers said, but were released when she failed to identify any one of them as her assailant.

Parole Official Dares Garnett To 'Give Facts'

Former Justice A. A. Hoehling was named chairman. Other members are South Trimble, jr., vice chairman; John E. Larson, secretary; Col. Edward S. Bailey, Stanley F. Brewster, Seth W. Richardson, Bloitha V. Laws, Richmond B. Keech, Stanley Fischer, Oliver Gasch, David L. Grantham, Henry B. Hazard, Phillip Herman and H. Stanley Hinricks.

"We are going to try to clean up the bar, too," Noel said. "All the fault of the crime wave may not be with the criminals."

La Roe in his letter to Garnett said he was issuing his challenge "in the best of spirit and in the hope of revealing the truth" although he admired the United States attorney's work.

"I am going to challenge you to name any instance where any prisoner released by the parole board has committed a serious crime or subjected any resident of the District of Columbia to serious injury since the time of his release by the board," La Roe wrote.

Four "Serious" Charges.

"My memory tells me that of all the 175 prisoners released by our board only four have committed crimes that could be called serious, there being one case of robbery in another jurisdiction, and three cases of joy-riding in the District.

"In only one of these three latter cases has there been a conviction. If your records show any other instances where our parolees have committed a serious crime, the information would be deeply appreciated by this board and by the general public, and might help to clarify your statement that 'the indeterminate sentence law and the easy parole of prisoners are directly responsible for the prevalence of crime in Washington.'"

Replying, Garnett said: "I will not enter into a newspaper controversy over whether or not easy and early parole and the probation of housebreakers and robbers are deterrents to crime.

"My position on this subject is known to the public and, in any event, all good citizens should be able to agree that the laws should be strengthened so that crime may be made less attractive, more easily discoverable and more certainly punished."

Landlords Face Penalty.

Action against owners or landlords whose buildings were allegedly used for gambling purposes was revealed in a report by Col. John W. Oehmann, building inspector, to Capt. Hugh P. Oram, director of inspection.

Last Friday the District Commissioners ordered police to report gambling raids to the building inspector so that inspections might be made to uncover any violations of building or fire regulations.

The building inspectors reported to Capt. Oram he was helpless to proceed against landlords because of heavily barred doors, such as those used in gambling places, unless there had been a structural change in the building requiring a permit.

The fire regulations were invoked against barricades at 1317-19 New York avenue, where a raid was made a fortnight ago, and against 1510 H street. The respective owners, according to District officials, are John O'Donoghue and Frederick A. Sterling.

The barricade was said to have been removed at the New York avenue property after the case had been carried to Police Court and a notice had been served on Sterling.

Trio Arrested In Gaming Raid

Police continued their drive against District gamblers and made another raid yesterday afternoon when Sergt. George Deyoe with four men from the gambling squad and Deputy Marshal Thomas Ott invaded a small wooden house in the 1300 block of C street southwest and arrested three men.

They had been watching the place since officials of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing complained a week ago that Government employes were placing bets there during working hours.

Displaying a search warrant from United States Marshal Needham C. Turnage, the squad seized gambling paraphernalia valued at $200, including a croupier's stick and numbers slips and arrested three men who said they were Daniel Bresnahan, white, 36, of the 1300 block of C street southwest; Edward Leony, white, 61, of the 200 block of Eleventh street southwest, and Clifford Luckett, colored, 34, of the 400 block of Cullinane's court southwest.

Limited Police Open City Gate To Criminals

nent of the police school of thought which believes that the greatest deterrent to crime is the presence in a neighborhood of uniformed policemen. Their very presence, he believes, prevents more crime than any batch of crime statistics which could be marshaled to show criminals that they will be caught eventually.

In the instance cited by Maj. Brown, that a lone policeman guards 8 square miles of territory bounded by North Capitol street, New York avenue and the District line. In the area are tens of thousands of inhabitants and millions of dollars' worth of property, in residences, stores and industries.

True, he points out, there are two radio cars which augment the vigilance of the patrolman, but their time is occupied in answering emergency calls. In that precinct, there are, in addition, two patrol cars, which are used also for emergency duty.

If a holdup and shooting, for instance, should occur in different sections of the precinct at about the same time, the only police protection is in that lone patrolman.

Apart from whatever emergency service the radio and patrol cars may afford, they are frequently called into other precincts whenever a series of crimes or accidents occur which engage the effort of the meager forces in the nearby districts.

Limited on Coverage.

It is a physical impossibility, Maj. Brown points out, for that single officer to cover the precinct. At best, he can cover only a small fraction of the area on his eight-hour tour of duty, which is occupied principally by observing business houses and residences, watching for suspicious characters and frequently questioning prisoners whom he has arrested for investigation.

Even if the eight men who are in the radio and patrol cars could give all their time to strictly patrol duty, Maj. Brown says, the area would still be greatly underpoliced.

This patrolman is on duty during the time, which statistics show, the greatest amount of major crimes, principally robberies and housebreakings, are committed.

Lacks Adequate Force.

Asked why a greater force is not on duty during these hours, he pointed out that he had not the necessary personnel. He presented this analysis of police protection in the precinct during the day:

Total personnel, 57.

Special duty—clerks, wagon drivers, &c., 12.

Total available for partial duty for 24 hours, 37.

Total on radio and patrol cars, 20.

Number available for foot patrol, 17.

These foot patrolmen were apportioned on the following tours of duty: 8 a. m. to 4 p. m., ten men; 4 p. m. to midnight, eight men, and 12 midnight to 8 a. m., one man.

The reason for the presence of more men on the streets during the day and evening is that much of their time is occupied in assisting school children at intersections, interviewing witnesses for presentation of cases to the courts and grand juries; testifying before the grand jury and the courts, and working special details.

University Vigilantes On Guard Against Reds

Los Angeles, Nov. 1 (AP).—Vigilantes selected by students patrolled the campus of the University of California at Los Angeles today while Dr. Ernest C. Moore, provost and vice president, issued an appeal to universities and fraternities throughout the Nation to "become active helpers of the United States in its day of difficulty" with radical agitation among students.

The vigilantes came from ranks of athletes who met in the drizzling rain in Westwood Hills last night, and vowed to purge the campus of radicalism "with force if necesary."

But It Takes 30 Years for U. S. Expert to Solve the Holes!

Out in Ohio and Wisconsin, the Department of Agriculture has a couple of fellows whose business is to worry about holes in Swiss cheese.

They worry if the cheese out there has too many holes, like a honeycomb, or too few, say, one or two to a slice. They worry about the distribution of the holes, and their size.

For by the number and distribution of holes, Swiss cheese is known. A good cheese has holes in moderation, about the size of a dime or a nickle, and evenly distributed. A poor one hasn't any holes at all.

The man who knows as much about Swiss cheese as any man in America is Dr. L. A. Rogers, chief of the Department of Agriculture's cheese laboratories. He's the boss of the fellows out in Wisconsin who worry about the holes.

Studying Cheese 30 Years.

For more than 30 years Dr. Rogers has been studying cheeses. He's got so now that he knows more about making cheese than the Swiss.

Holes in cheese are principally a matter of microscopic animals, bacteria, if you prefer. First, there's a sphere-shaped organism called streptococcus thermphiles, which operates at high temperatures, breaking down sugar into acids. Then there's lactobacillus bulgaricus which goes to work after the cheese has cooled and streptococcus has quit making more acid.

Lastly, there's the rod-shaped propionibacterium shermanii, really more responsible than any of the other bacteria for holes in cheese because in growing it gives off carbon dioxide gas. The gas gathers in bubbles. Slice a Swiss cheese bubble and you have a hole.

Made It by "Instinct."

The Swiss, according to Dr. Rogers, make cheese by instinct, more than anything else, by rule of thumb, as it were. They've been making it for centuries. They rear their bacteria in the whey, and add the whey to the milk.

If everything goes all right—if, according to Dr. Rogers, other bacteria don't get into the milk, upsetting their calculations—the cheese turns out to be good and is shipped abroad. If, on the other hand, the cheese gets too much streptococci, or not enough propionibacteria, the cheese is bad and is kept in Switzerland for home consumption.

The principal reason why the Swiss cheese makers are so well thought of here, Dr. Rogers says, is because only the best of their production is sold for export. American cheese manufacturers, he says, make just as good cheese as the Swiss, and just as much of it. The trouble is, he says, the poor American-Swiss cheese is sold here as domestic, the good as imported.

Outswiss the Swiss.

As a matter of fact, Dr. Rogers believes the Department of Agriculture can make good Swiss cheese with greater frequency than the Swiss. It has replaced the rule of thumb by science.

In the basement of the Department of Agriculture Building, Dr. Rogers has his cheese laboratory. He sees 1,000 pounds of milk start on its way to becoming cheese there every day.

But instead of letting its bacteria grow in the whey, topsy-turvey, he cultivates them, knows their number and strength, understands how many to put in each kettle of milk, and when.

This information the department passes on to its men out in Ohio and Wisconsin so that they, stationed in factories with microscopes, bacteria cultures and the like, can show the Swiss who are working as cheese makers there how to get the holes just right.

Borah Envisions Ruin Of Sugar Beet Industry

Idaho Falls, Idaho, Nov. 1 (AP).—The Department of Agriculture, Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, asserted tonight, "will wipe out the sugar beet industry if it is not fought every inch of the way."

Borah, in an address in behalf of the Republican State ticket, referred to a reported proposal to transfer from Idaho to California 12,000 acres of the sugar beet allotment of the Amalgamated Sugar Co.

NRA Board Pay Set at $12,000

Williams, Whiteside and Hillman to Decline U. S. Checks.

Pay of members of the NRA administrative board was fixed at $12,000 a year, by President Roosevelt yesterday.

In addition to the five full members, the schedule was expected to apply to the two ex-officio members, Leon Henderson, economic adviser, and Blackwell Smith, legal adviser.

It was said Government checks will be declined by three board members, Clay Williams, chairman, and Arthur D. Whiteside, industrialists, and Sidney Hillman, paid by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, who resigned recently as NRA administrator, received $15,000 a year.

Bad Weather Downs British Fliers Again

Athens, Nov. 1 (AP).—Cathcart Jones and Ken Waller, flying back to London from Melbourne, returned to Tatoi, near here, today a few hours after taking off this morning on what they intended to be a nonstop flight.

For the second successive day they were forced back by bad weather over Italy.

Lindy Suspect Denies Condon Identified Him

Hauptmann Asserts 'Jafsie' Did Not Say He Got Ransom.

Flemington, N. J., Nov. 1 (AP).—A denial by Bruno Richard Hauptmann, suspected slayer of the Lindbergh baby, that Dr. John F. Condon, intermediary in the ransom negotiations, had identified him in the Hunterdon County Jail as receiver of the $50,000 ransom money, was announced today by Hauptmann's counsel, James M. Fawcett.

While Fawcett, in New York, was making public the details of Dr. Condon's jail visit to Hauptmann, Harry Whitney, who said he was chief investigator for the defense, issued a statement here indicating he would fight to upset the order of Attorney General David T. Wilentz, barring him from visiting Hauptmann in the jail.

Whitney is not an investigator for the defense, Fawcett said today, but is merely in charge of Mrs. Hauptmann's business affairs.

Promises a Surprise.

"Mr. Wilentz is due for a surprise," Whitney said when he heard the attorney general had told Sheriff John H. Curtiss he was not to permit him to see the prisoner. It was Whitney who announced yesterday that Hauptmann had extended an invitation to Dr. Condon to come here again to talk to him so that he might "prove my innocence."

"Mr. Wilentz has the power to issue such an order at the moment, as he has never been challenged," Whitney said. "This I expect to see changed within a short time. The tactics of the attorney general have been petty in the extreme, he having gone so far as to deprive Mrs. Hauptmann and her baby of their personal belongings until yesterday.

"He has tied up her personal funds. This, too, will be changed.

Banks Hold Up Money.

Mrs. Hauptmann later said it was true she had been deprived of her personal belongings until yesterday, and added that personal funds in New York banks were still withheld from her by order, she said she understood, of the attorney general.

Fawcett said Hauptmann's denial that Dr. Condon had identified him was obtained yesterday in an interview which Bernhardt M. Meisels, associate defense counsel, had with the prisoner. Hauptmann said Dr. Condon did not say he recognized Hauptmann, nor did he look as if he recognized him.

"The only time I saw Dr. Condon was at the police station at Greenwich street and in the Bronx district attorney's office, and the jail," Hauptmann was further quoted as saying.

Death for Kidnapers Asked.

Columbus, Ga., Nov. 1, (AP).—The death penalty will be proposed for kidnaping in Georgia. John R. Thompson, jr., Muscogee County Representative in the State Legislature, said today he would propose a bill at the 1935 General Assembly.

Indiana Frees Eight; Presses Dillinger Quiz

Barce Had Expected Three Arrests; U. S. Joins Jail Break Inquiry.

Indianapolis, Nov. 1 (AP).—J. Edward Barce, assistant attorney general, tonight sent back to Crown Point the eight "witnesses" he gathered up there Tuesday for questioning in connection with John Dillinger's escape from the Lake County Jail.

Barce said the "witnesses" were free to return to their homes and he added he expected no immediate developments in his investigation of the notorious Dillinger's getaway. He emphasized, however, the inquiry will continue.

Release of the "witnesses" came after legal action had been brought here to free them from the custody of State police who aided in rounding them up at Crown Point.

The "witnesses" had been spirited from Crown Point to Monticello and then brought to this city. Barce had indicated that from them he expected to obtain information on which at least three persons could be arrested on charges of aiding Dillinger to escape.

The assistant attorney general's investigation has created a furore in Indiana politics during the closing days of the campaign. The Dillinger jail break had been brought into the campaign by the declarations of Republican orators that Democratic introduction of the spoils system in the penal institutions was responsible not only for Dillinger's escape, but also the Michigan City prison break of last September, when 10 convicts fled and later became criminal allies of Dillinger.

Regardless of the outcome of the State's investigation Federal authorities, it was anounced today, will make an inquiry. James R. Fleming, U. S. district attorney at Fort Wayne, announced he had been instructed by Attorney General Cummings to institute an investigation.

Trowel Used By Washington Wielded Again

Masons Lay Corner Stone of New High School in Alexandria.

The tiny silver trowel which George Washington used in laying the corner stone of the Nation's Capitol was employed again yesterday in the laying of the corner stone of the new $300,000 Alexandria High School Building.

The trowel, a possession of the Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons, was used in the ancient symbolic ritual of the order at the ceremonies, which were attended by a large crowd.

John W. Studebaker, United States commissioner of education, making his first public appearance since his recent appointment, and initiating National Education Week in its fourteenth annual observance, addressed the crowd, as did T. C. Williams, superintendent of the Alexandria public schools. Mayor Emmett C. Davison and Leroy Bendheim, chariman of the Alexandria school board.

Recalls First Free School.

Mr. Studebaker, referring to the use of the trowel, said it was especially appropriate, since George Washington was one of the founders of free education in the Nation, having proposed, financed and established the first free school in Alexandria. He called attention to the contrast between the quaint three-room brick structure built by Washington, still standing on the boulevard to Washington, and compared it to the large high school now under construction.

"One hundred and forty-seven years ago today," said Commissioner Studebaker, "in response to a special invitation, George Washington mounted his horse and rode through the mud to Alexandria. The entry in his diary for that day reads, 'rid by the way of Muddy Hole to Alexandria to attend the exhibition of the boys at the Alexandria Academy.'

"His interest in the academy, in whose shadow we now stand, sets an example which citizens should follow this month during American Education Week. Let us determine today, as we lay the foundation of this modern school, that it and the schools of the Nation which it represents shall be fully equal to the gigantic educational responsibilities which lie ahead."

Cadets in Parade.

The exercises were preceded by a parade of the uniformed cadets, boys and girls of the two Alexandria high schools and of many pupils from the grade schools, led by the Citizens Band of Alexandria. During the speeches, the corner stone was flanked by the colors of the United States and of Virginia, with a color guard from the Alexandria High School.

The Masonic ceremonies were conducted by Roy M. Reeve, worshipful master of the lodge; A. Slater Lombard, senior warden, and Herbert E. Cross, junior warden. C. Philip Heishley, past master, acted as marshal.

Raymond V. Long, architect of the building, was presented by Marshal Heishley.

WomenRestore Old Furniture

University of Maryland School Directs Renovation.

More than 30 pieces of furniture have been refitted for use in the two upholstering schools conducted this week in Montgomery County by the University of Maryland extension service.

Sixty women, representing 16 different communities took advantage of the instruction, officials announced, and the saving on the renovated furniture amounted to an estimated $300.

The sessions, held in the county demonstration office at Rockville and the Barnsville, Md., hall, will be concluded tomorrow night. Instructors are Miss Florence Mason, University of Maryland district home demonstration agent, assisted by Miss Edythe M. Turner, local county agent.

The schools were organized in the belief that "the well-kept home raises the family morale," Miss Turner said. The rejuvenated furniture included many ancestral pieces which had been stored in attics for generations, she said.

The total cost of materials for the entire week of remodeling is not expected to amount to a total investment of more than $60.

2 Towns Are Saved Forest Fires Curbed;

Tolland, Colo., Nov. 1 (AP).—Forest fires that threatened the towns of Tolland and East Portal and destroyed several mountain summer cabins appeared under control today.

Officials of the Roosevelt National Forest said a storm was threatening and they expected it to extinguish the blaze. About 300 men were fighting the flames on several fronts.

Gov. Sholtz Absolves Sheriff in Lynching

Tallahassee, Fla., Nov. 1 (AP).—Gov. Dave Sholtz today absolved Sheriff W. F. Chambliss of blame in the lynching of Claude Neal, Negro, near Marianna last week, but ordered a grand jury investigation of the affair.

Reports reaching here, the Governor said, indicated "some of the ringleaders" of the mob that lynched Neal "are supposed to be known."

County School Abuse Charged To Democrats

Fusionist in Montgomery Declares Politics Rules Institutions.

Samuel E. Stonebraker, Chevy Chase, Md., attorney, last night told a Montgomery County audience of Fusionist party sympathizers that local Democrats were guilty of gross maladministration of public school affairs.

Addressing more than 500 persons at the Bannockburn Country Club, he declared the Democrats had not only let local politics interfere with the proper administration of schools, but even permitted it to hamper pupils in their studies.

"Politics has been kicked around this county by Democrats like a football," he said. "Teachers are forced to fall into line by the Democratic organization in order to keep their positions."

Cites Rockville Case.

"I personally know of one young school teacher in Rockville who was asked to resign for political reasons by a school board official acting on instructions from Lacey Shaw, president of the board of county commissioners."

He also assailed the postponement of night school classes in the Ridge Avenue Elementary School, Takoma Park, that a Democratic meeting might be held. He called this political interference with school administration.

Replying to the recent statement of Stedman Prescott, State's attorney, that the Fusion ranks are being split with dissension, he said:

Claims Democrats Split.

"When speaking of dissension within the ranks, Mr. Prescott would do well to look at the growing dissatisfaction in the Democratic ranks over E. Brooke Lee's placing the crown of temporary leadership on Prescott's head.

"There are certain Democratic leaders who are still smarting from the fact they were not invited to confer with Lee on such an important move. Prescott had better stop and take a look at his own household before criticizing the Fusionists."

Fugitive Runs Into Law's Net

Prisoner Captured After Escape From Jail at Fairfax.

An escaped prisoner, running for freedom, dashed into a sheriff, hiding behind a bush in an Annandale, Va., field yesterday morning and was captured.

The fugitive, Howard Coombs, 32, of Burke, Va., awaiting trial on a grand larceny charge, broke jail at Fairfax, Va., Halloween night after slugging a trusty, Charles See, and escaped in company with a colored prisoner, Woodrow Wilson Jones, sentenced last month to a three-year term in the State penitentiary. Jones remained at liberty.

Sheriff Kirby stated that the break, according to confessions obtained, had been planned for some time by six of the county jail inmates.

Katherine Reynolds, colored, who was arrested October 26 on suspicion of having in her possession a watch stolen from the body of William H. Woodfield, night watchman for William A. Smoot & Co., after he was murdered, allegedly by Theodore Gibson, colored, was arraigned in Alexandria Police Court yesterday. Her case was continued until November 22. She later gave bond of $500 for her appearance.

Gibson is said to have told the police a number of conflicting stories as to the disposal of the watch which was missing from the body of Woodfield when the latter was found murdered in the coal yard the morning of October 18. One was to the effect that Gibson had hidden it in a pile of railroad ties, and had told the woman that, in case he got into trouble, she was to retrieve the watch. Later Gibson denied any knowledge of the watch. The woman, according to the police, has denied any knowledge of its whereabouts.

Attorney Charles Henry Smith, who represents the woman, says she will be charged with receiving stolen property. Gibson has confessed to the murder of Woodfield and been sentenced to life imprisonment.

Wilmer Speaks At Branchville

G. O. P. House Candidate Criticizes U. S. Rule of Business.

Permanent prosperity can not return to the country until the Government removes itself from control of business and agriculture, Joseph A. Wilmer, Republican candidate for Congress from the Fifth Maryland District, told a Republican rally in the firehouse at Branchville, Md.

Mr. Wilmer declared the people can not be expected to show initative and place their money in the channels of commerce until the Federal control of business is removed. He said the State campaign is not necessarily a batle of parties and that voters of both parties are disregarding the party lines to vote on issues. He declared the chief issue to be removal of the so-called Democratic machine from the control of the State.

The rally was held for voters of the Berwyn district. The meeting was called to order by William A. Duvall, president of the Berwyn Republican Club and candidate for county commissioner on the Republican ticket. Nearly all of the county candidates were present.

The speakers and candidates were guests at a chicken dinner at the Branchville Methodist Episcopal Church prior to the meeting. Democratic candidates also attended the supper.

Ex-Deputy Sheriff Jailed in Slaying

Charged With Killing Game Warden in Virginia.

Gate City, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Emory Taylor, former deputy sheriff, was in jail here tonight, charged with the fatal shooting of Frank M. Tompkins, 45, Scott County game warden, at Clinchport, 12 miles from here, late today.

Tompkins was shot twice in the abdomen.

Sheriff O. B. Darnell said his investigation had not disclosed the cause of the shooting, and Taylor declined to comment beyond stating that he fired the fatal shots.

Tompkins, whose predecessor as game warden also was shot to death, is survived by his wife and three children.

John L. Green Raps Hopkins' Relief Threat

Carrying his campaign against his Democratic opponent, Howard W. Smith, in the Eighth Congressional District, into his home county, John Locke Green, Republican nominee, addressing a mass meeting in the Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon last night hurled an attack against Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator. He said:

"If Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator, would take the trouble to inform himself before he talks, he would not threaten to cut Virginia off from the proportionately meager 'relief' she is now receiving.

"The magnificent Mr. Hopkins either does not have the time or the inclination to check up the figures and determine who is paying into the Treasury the money he is spending.

Gets Back Less Than Paid.

"For his benefit I quote figures from the Internal Revenue Bureau which show that Virginia is one of seven States which makes a larger per capita payment than she receives in the form of emergency grants. The other six States are Rhode Island, New York, Delaware, North Carolina, Illinois and Kentucky. Obviously, this leaves 41 States and the District of Columbia who are getting more from the Government than they pay into it.

"It was this same Mr. Hopkins who gleefully hailed the recent election in Maine. According to the most recent internal revenue collections the State of Maine pays $9.96 per capita, but she has received in emergency grants of all descriptions the astonishing sum of $39.81 per capita. Many other States received funds in the same proportion, while Virginia gets less than she pays in.

Raps New Dealers.

"Let Mr. Hopkins look these figures over before he wields his big stick. But he hasn't the time nor the inclination. He is too busy giving his indorsements to Sinclair, the California bolshevik, who stole the Democratic Party in that State. When Sinclair won the nomination it was Mr. Hopkins who said, 'I hope he wins. He is one of us.'

"Virginia has always been able to take care of her own needy residents. She is able now if the New Dealers would get off of our backs and leave us alone. How can anyone expect us to care for our own and those of other States at the same time? Virginia pays into the Federal Treasury $127,000,000 in direct taxes in addition to $7,500,000 in the vicious AAA processing tax and from the latter we get in return about $1,000,000 in farm 'relief.'"

Russia to Be Topic Of Clinton's Address

Conditions in Soviet Russia will be discussed by J. M. Clinton, "ambassador at large" of the Young Men's Christian Association, in a free public lecture tonight at the assembly hall of the Central Y. M. C. A., 1736 G street northwest, at 8 p. m.

Kelley Verdict Will Be Argued At Arlington

Motion to Set Aside Jury Findings to Be Made Tomorrow.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Arguments on a motion to set aside the verdict of the jury which recently found Lyman M. Kelley, chiarman of the Arlington County Board, guilty of malfeasance in office will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. before Judge Frederick W. Coleman in Arlington County Circuit Court.

Kelley was found guilty by the jury on two presentments, one charging acceptance and another soliciting bribes.

Whether Judge Coleman's possible refusal to set aside the verdict would automatically remove Kelley from the board is a matter for the court to decide, according to Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas.

Should the court set aside the verdict, Kelley will resume his place as chairman of the board. Although he is still technically chairman he announced that he would not attend meetings pending outcome of the case.

Traffic Hazards Discussed.

There are many dangerous traffic hazards in Arlington County due to the lack of adequate lighting and signs, county officials were told by Dr. W. C. Welburn, coroner, last night.

Dr. Welburn stated that during the past 11 months there have been 12 traffic deaths.

Referring to a recent fatal accident where two persons lost their lives within a week on the Washington-Richmond highway in South Washington, Dr. Welburn asserted there is no adequate warning of a railroad crossing.

He recommended that a traffic light be installed and operated by trainmen.

Dr. Welburn also suggested that a commission be created consisting of the sheriff, county manager and one citizen to make a survey of the county and take necessary steps to protect the traveling public and the pedestrian.

"Henry—
that's your 3rd Martini
—you've taken quite a fancy to that Fleischmann's Gin"

Here's why so many Americans prefer this milder, smoother "American-type" Gin

TODAY in nine homes out of ten—the Dry Martini is the most popular cocktail served.

It's made the same way everywhere—yet how different it can taste. Smooth and mellow as a glass of Napoleonic brandy. Or sour as a cup of vinegar.

It's entirely a matter of the gin!

Thousands of people are discovering, for the first time since Repeal, that a mild American gin—such as Fleischmann's—makes a smooth, delicious Martini. In fact, a smooth, delicious drink of any kind.

Fleischmann's is an American gin—made from American grains—by an American company that makes gin—and nothing else. It blends perfectly with other liquors and fruit juices. Brings out their subtle, hidden flavors.

After the first Martini, your guests will agree that "it takes an American gin to make an American cocktail."

These Popular Gin Drinks are Easy to Mix

MARTINI (Use mixing glass.) A dash or two of Orange Bitters, two-thirds jigger Fleischmann's Gin, one-third jigger French Vermouth (Italian for a sweet Martini), a piece of lemon rind, ice. Stir in glass and serve with an olive in cocktail glass.

CLOVER CLUB (Use shaker.) Juice of one small lime, or a quarter of a lemon; white of one fresh egg; a teaspoonful of grenadine, one jigger of Fleischmann's Gin. Shake thoroughly and strain into a large cocktail glass.

ALEXANDER (Use shaker.) One-half jigger Fleischmann's Gin, one-quarter jigger crème de cacao, one-quarter jigger cream—add ice, shake, serve in cocktail glass.

Public Resents Dole, Says Ford; Urges Work Aid

Many Strikes Financed by Selfish Interests, He Charges.

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Employment, and not relief doles, is urged by Henry Ford in an interview published today in Collier's weekly.

"People don't thank anyone for a dole," says the automobile manufacturer. "That is something the politicians don't seem to know. They think they are making votes through the dole.

"They are only making enemies. The dole-takers always turn on the dole givers. They would thank anyone who gave them work and the chance to be independent, but they hate anyone who pauperizes them. There may be a few people in this country who are content to live off Government gifts, but it's a libel to say most of them are. With half a chance our people can get along. Nobody's going to starve in America."

Ford looks with indifference on the NRA and said many strikes are financed "by big interests who are getting something out of them."

Financial Interests Accused.

"Men seldom want to strike," he says, "unless there is something in the management that provokes them to it.

"I have looked into some strikes where I have had to tell the employers they were not fit to employ men. * * * I am speaking about strikes where the men really want to strike and most of these could be prevented by a little common sense.

"But there is another kind of strike which is procured by one business in order to hurt a rival business. Or it is paid by some financial interest to embarrass a business so that it will be forced to borrow money or to take in stockholders.

"Most of the strikes in the United States are of this type. I could tell you some things about that. Strikes are financed, just as bootlegging was financed, by big interetss who are getting something out of them."

As to the NRA, the Dearborn industrialist thinks "it just doesn't matter."

Hails Small Business Men.

"Even if it breaks down completely," he says, "it wouldn't make any difference. Politics don't change things in the long run. Things always go on all right. Don't forget that this is the United States and these are the American people. They are not going to let anyone hurt them. No politician can hurt this country."

Saying the "little fellow" must have as much chance as the "big fellow," Ford says "small business men practically carried the country during the depression."

"NRA or anything that makes it hard for a young man to start, or a small business to hold its own, is a menace. We have learned a lot by mass production and by concentrating large populations in industrial centers. But now the trend is the other way. What we learned in the big shop we can apply in the small shop."

This leads Ford to the conclusion "the little business man never had a better chance in his life than right now."

Sinclair Urges N. Y. To Tax Film Makers

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia received a telegram today signed by Upton Sinclair, Democratic nominee for Governor of California, recommending a New York City tax be imposed on motion picture negatives printed in studios here.

Sunk, Says Ickes; Sank, Says Scribe, And Sunk She Is!

A horror of errors in grammar sent Secretary Ickes scurrying for a copy of his book, "The New Democracy," when he was accused yesterday at his press conference of having used "sunk" when he should have said "sank" on the first page of the first chapter, according to the Associated Press.

Hurriedly he thumbed down to a passage about America's forefathers which said "Generation after generation their roots sunk more deeply into the soil of the new land."

"I maintain it's perfectly good English," the Secretary told the woman reporter who had sought to trip him up. He reached for a dictionary and read:

"Sunk: Past participle and imperfect of sink."

"Your apology is accepted."

British Labor Gains Many Municipal Seats

London, Nov. 1 (AP).—Labor made numerous gains in nationwide municipal elections, it was indicated by early returns of voting in more than 400 cities and boroughs today.

Early returns indicated that labor had gained 160 seats in the various councils. In 80 centers Conservatives had lost 91 seats, while Independents lost 53.

1,828,083,114 Total HOLC Loans to Date

The Home Owners Loan Corporation announced tonight that its lending operations had reached the huge total of $1,828,083,114 as of October 6, according to the Associated Press.

The corporation reported that during the week ended October 26 new applications for loans were only 6,981, the lowest since the relief organization began functioning. This figure compares with an average of nearly 35,000 applications per week last spring.

Insull Blames Self For Utilities Crash

Hoover's assurance to business men that the market crash could not disturb commodity business.

"That was my personal opinion, also," he said. "I was wrong as were many others—but it was my opinion."

The 75-year-old Insull pictured himself as sole arbiter in the $2,000,000,000 utilities field he controlled. He attributed its collapse to his own "mistakes."

"I thought it was a good plan," he said, "to have customer ownership of the companies and sell small amounts of stock to the people, but lately, after listening to the prosecution's representations, I've decided that maybe it was a bad plan."

Insull described his son as "one of the most remarkably well-informed young men of his age in the utility business." Samuel, jr., bowed his head in his hand.

"My wife took our son to Europe to try to make him forget the utility business," the elder Insull said. "I'm sorry now that he didn't."

At the start of his testimony Insull described how Thomas A. Edison brought him to the United States from England, and followed with the story of his life.

Warning Related.

As court adjourned shortly after 4 p. m., Insull, appearing somewhat wearied by his long day on the witness stand, had brought the story of his life up to 1930, at the height of his efforts to keep Corporation Securities, peak of his crumbling pyramid, from its ultimate fate.

He testified that when Insull stocks reached astounding highs during the 1929 boom he warned the public.

"I repeatedly told them," he said, "that the stocks were not worth more than $30 a share but they kept on insisting and buying more and more and the prices kept going up."

'Slump Ended,' Ford to Build Million a Year

Will Spend $145,000,000 on Prosperity Schedule for 1935.

year would mean the three low-price field leaders alone would account for close to the estimated 2,800,000 aggregate total of the industry for this year.

Coincident with the Ford announcement it became known the company is planning to spend $2,000,000 in the expansion of capacity at its Rouge plant by 50 per cent, resume operations in 12 branch plants and eliminate the midnight to 8 a. m. shift in the plants. The plans call for the production of 4,800 units in 16 hours a day, instead of 24 as heretofore.

The Ford statement was brief and no amplification was made at the Dearborn executive offices. "Why," Mr. Ford said, "the depression would be over for the whole country very soon if American industrialists would just forget the alphabet schemes and take hold of their industries and run them with good, sound business sense."

The plans for enlarging production facilities at the Rouge plant with the expenditure of $2,000,000 comes not long after the announcement of the Ford plans to spend approximately $18,000,000 on the enlargement of the company's steel production equipment at the Rouge mills.

It was pointed out by Ford competitors that production schedules of automobile plants are flexible and can be adjusted to meet the demand on short notice. The general policy of the industry has been to keep output in harmony with demand and avoid the accumulation of cars for which there is no immediate market.

If the Ford Co.'s program next year materializes into a 1,000,000-unit output, it will be the first year since 1930 that figure has been reached. Chevrolet has been leading in the low price field for several years and during the current year to date, its output has totaled, unofficially, 790,477 units against Ford's 825,000 cars and trucks. Last year Ford ouput was 412,000 units in the same period while Chevrolet produced 608,130 cars.

Plymouth, third in the leading group in the low price field, stepped its output up from 234,214 units in the first ten months of 1933 to 335,900 in the same period this year.

Ford's Declaration Pleases Roosevelt

Henry Ford's declaration that "the depression is over"—for the Ford Motor Co., at least—pleases the White House no end. But President Roosevelt is not going out with any such commitment. This was the substance of White House reaction yesterday to the announcement by the Detroit manufacturer, arch-enemy of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and the NRA, that he is going ahead with confidence that recovery is at hand.

Remembering the experience of the last regime, Mr. Roosevelt will not be coaxed into making any "prosperity-just-around-the-corner" pronouncements, it was explained. So the opportunity was passed over with an expression of gratification for Mr. Ford's good news.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, when informed of the statement, however, thought it worth an exclamation, "Whoopee!" and RFC Chairman Jesse H. Jones echoed "Fine." Mr. Jones went on to subscribe partially to the Ford statement, amending it this way:

With the RFC chairman at his press conference was Rudolf S. Hecht, new president of the American Bankers Association, who reflected Mr. Ford's optimism with a statement that feeling among New York bankers, as he has just appraised it, is also unanimously favorable.

Roosevelt Aims At Compromise On Auto Code

Confers With Leaders of Industry as Deadline Approaches.

A compromise apparently was sought yesterday by President Roosevelt as the hour approached for expiration tomorrow of the automobile manufacturing code, involving several hundred thousand employes.

While the possibility remained that some concession might be made to organized labor, indications were the pact would be extended. Employers want the code left undisturbed, while union forces have insisted on a public hearing before any extension.

Should the hearing materialize, labor probably would open fire on the celebrated merit clause of the existing compact, which permits arbitrary dismissal of union members or any other employes on a strict basis of worthiness in the eyes of the owners.

Favor 30-Hour Week

If afforded an opportunity the workers also would seek a flat 30-hour week and higher wages. The existing code permits an average work week of 35 hours, with an increase to 48 hours in peak seasons. Employes have complained they now work at irregular intervals except for three or four months a year, when production is heaviest.

President Roosevelt, several weeks ago, made known he was considering suggestions that some plan be evolved to boost the annual earnings of workers in industries of a seasonal nature.

Since the White House took command of the situation little inkling has been given of what action might be expected. It was reasonable to suppose, however, that the Administration was especially desirous of heading off a possible strike threat on the eve of the election, now only a few days away.

The manufacturers' case was presented to Mr. Roosevelt by Walter P. Chrysler, Alfred Sloan and Donaldson Brown, the latter two of General Motors Corporation. They were accompanied to the White House for morning and afternoon conferences by Clay Williams, NRA administrative board chairman.

Hopeful of Accord.

"So far, we haven't gotten anywhere, but we're hopeful," Williams observed after the first conference. On emerging from the afternoon meeting, however, he appeared more confident of an agreement satisfactory to all concerned.

The motor magnates avoided reporters, leaving the White House with speed reminiscent of claims made for their automobiles in advertisements.

Repeated demands for a public hearing before extension of the code have been made by the Labor Advisory Board. The workers have emphasized a promise they received from Gen. Hugh Johnson that they would be granted full opportunity to air their views before announcement of another extension.

League to Explain Stand on Candidates

Nonpartisian Group to Hold Rally in Annapolis.

Annapolis, Nov. 1 (Spl.).—A spirited political rally is expected tomorrow night when the Better Government League of Arundel County meets in the Statehouse to present its reasons for indorsing certain candidates and opposing others.

The Good Government League, a nonpartisan organization, has indorsed some Democratic candidates for county office and some Republicans. In several instances it has refused to indorse candidates of either party and has put contenders of its own choice in the race.

All candidates for county office have been invited to the meeting to present their views. Part of the discussion slated will deal with county tax figures.

Greene to Speak Tonight At Stafford Courthouse

Stafford Courthouse, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.). John Locke Greene, Republican candidate for Congress from the Eighth Congressional District, will speak here tomorrow at a political meeting.

The speaker will be introduced by W. W. Butzner, Fredericksburg attorney. A. L. Snellings, chairman of the Stafford County Republican committee, will preside.

Legless Man Rescued From Burning Home

Baltimore, Nov. 1 (AP).—Isador Fedderman, legless man, was carried from his burning home here today by three passers-by. He was not injured.

Four other persons escaped unaided from the house.

The fire was noticed by John Barranco, truck driver, who sounded an alarm. With Gus Askin and Aaron Sagel, Barranco ran into the building and brought Fedderman out.

Funeral Rites Held For Franklin Brown

Mount Airy, Md., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Franklin Brown, 74, who died Tuesday at Springfield State Hospital, Sykesville, were held today at the home of his son, Raymond G. Brown, this place.

A son of the late Thomas G. and Catherine R. (Moxley) Brown, Mr. Brown was born in upper Montgomery County. He is survived by his wife, who resides here with her son, Raymond G. Brown, and three other sons, Claude E. Brown, Ridgeville; D. F. Brown, Purdum, and Herman M. Brown, Fort Meade. A daughter, Mrs. Lillie J. Mullineaux, of Washington, also survives.

U. S. Prepared To Meet Japan In Naval Race

Will Build to Maintain Ratio if Parley at London Fails.

London conferences, the American admiralty has no wish to change those treaties. But in deference to British and Japanese wishes it will consider certain modifications.

The exact nature of how far this Government's delegates will go has not been revealed, but it was learned that, in order to satisfy the British desire for 20 more light cruisers, this country is agreeable to the adoption of a "sliding category scale." Under such a provision, a sea power might use the total global tonnage allotted to it under the pacts in the manner it deems best suited to its needs.

Won't Agree to Increase.

Consequently if the British wish to build 20 more light cruisers, they could do so under this plan, but the tonnage of such ships would have to be deducted from the tonnage allotted another category—the battleship class, for instance. Such a plan also would leave the United States free to build battleships or 10,000-ton 8-inch-gun cruisers as it saw fit.

Under no circumstances will the American delegation agree to any plan which would call for an increase in the global tonnage of navies, it was asserted.

On the other hand, it is ready to agree to a 20 per cent reduction in all classes of sea power, except cruisers and aircraft carriers.

The exemption of cruisers from the reduction figure is based on the belief that a nation may have too few cruisers and that in this regard the United States is at a disadvantage due to its small merchant marine compared to the splendid fleet of British commercial vessels, which may be armed with 6-inch guns in time of war.

The American admiralty still favors the 35,000-ton battleship and will oppose both the Japanese proposal for elimination of this vessel and the British demand that it be reduced to 25,000 tons. American naval designers are of the view that nothing less than a 35,000-ton vessel can carry the fuel necessary for the long-haul operations which might confront the American Navy in case of war in the Pacific.

Differ on Submarines.

The United States also favors elimination of the submarine from naval warfare. In this stand the British concur but the Japanese insist on retention of the submarine as a "defensive weapon." As outlined here there are many points of similarity between the British and American positions, and in being prepared to make concessions to Great Britain on the cruiser problem this country is tying tighter the knot binding the two English-speaking nations.

The fear held here some days ago that the Japanese, by espousing the British plan for reduction in the size of capital ships, might bring about an Anglo-Japanese combination has disappeared. It is believed here that the British now realize that expansion of the Japanese fleet, in relation to the American and British, would be a greater threat to the latter than to this country.

The American insistence on the continued use of battleships and on maintenance of the ratio is predicated on the necessity of defending American interests in the Philippines and this country's "open-door" policy in China.

The Japanese by proposing restrictions on foreign oil companies within their country and joining in the establishment of an oil distributing monopoly in Manchukuo, it is believed here, have played into the hands of the American admiralty and given support to the latter's contentions.

To Maintain "Open Door."

The Far Eastern oil situation is now cited as a concrete example of the need of a fleet superior to that of Japan if this country is to continue an aggressive advocacy of the "open-door" policy. Acting Secretary of State William Phillips said yesterday this Government has no intention of relaxing efforts to maintain an "open door" in Manchuria.

Mr. Phillips said that the department has under consideration its next move in regard to the Manchukuoan oil monopoly, in which the Japanese would have the financial control. Through American Ambassador Joseph C. Grew at Tokyo this Government has made representations regarding both the Manchurian monopoly proposal and the Japanese government's plan for licensing and restricting foreign oil companies in that country.

As respects the Manchurian situation, the Japanese replied that it had no responsibility for what the Manchukuoan government did and that this Governments' representations should be addressed to Hsinking or to the Chinese government. The latest move by the American Government was a representation to Japan disagreeing with such views.

U. S.-Japanese Naval Deadlock Unbroken

London, Nov. 1 (AP).—Opposition to Japanese proposals for new methods of naval limitation was reaffirmed tonight after a long meeting between Norman Davis, of the United States, and Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary.

The situation was thoroughly discussed, but the two men were unable to find the basis of a compromise approach.

The English delegates are next meeting with the Japanese in the hope of finding some method of reconciling the different views.

Information that the Japanese again had proposed the installment plan for gaining naval equality over a period of years was given out yesterday by the American delegation.

The Japanese tonight took exception to the American statement and announced they are to blame for any misunderstanding. The Japanese said the Americans had in mind Ambassador Hirosi Saito's statements in Washington and other references to the installment plan, which unintentionally made it appear one of the chief points of discussion yesterday was this plan.

The Japanese spent the day discussing and studying the situation and planning for the next meeting with the British delegates.

France Fears Saar Vote Holds Menace of War

Paris, Nov. 1 (AP).—Allegations of Germany's increasing military might today intensified the war scare gripping France.

In great measure the fear of conflict, which overshadowed All Saints' Day pilgrimages of the French people to the graves of their war and civil dead, was based on belief that the approaching plebiscite in the Saar might set off an international explosion.

For the first time since the war, the French apparently were not so confident of the superiority of their army, leading Minister of War Henri Petain to seek urgent reenforcements for the nation's weapons of defense.

Violent reaction in the German press to the announcement that French troops are ready to enter the Saar if the League of Nations commission governing that region calls for help was described in high quarters here as clear indication that the Nazis have been thinking of seizing the rich industrial area.

The Saar Basin, now under League of Nations mandate, will vote January 13 whether to remain under league rule, rejoin Germany or unite with France.

(Rumors of an impending Nazi putsch in the Saar were followed by an announcement that French garrisons along the border were ready to move, and an official government newspaper in Berlin warned that the French "are playing with fire.")

Reports that the French were seeking to induce Great Britain also to send soldiers into the Saar in case of necessity were authoritatively denied today. It was explained the decision of the league council in 1926 clearly puts that duty on France in case Col. Geoffrey Knox, head of the league governing commission, asks for military aid.

It was stated only the gravest disorders in the Saar would bring French occupation to restore peace. France's readiness to send troops into the region was the frankest way to serve notice on German extremists that France was determined to tolerate no violence before the plebiscite, it was explained.

Berlin Catholics Set to Attack Pagan Teacher

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Berlin, Nov. 1.—A protestant battle against Nazi church dictatorship apparently won, Catholics tonight trained heavy guns on Dr. Alfred Rosenberg's new pagan movement.

To every priest in the Berlin diocese went a 121-page book of "studies" on the "Myth of the Twentieth Century," the volume by the Nazi "spiritual and philosophic" director which has become the Nazi textbook of philosophy.

The unnamed authors of the "studies" were described as "serious experts." Bishop Nicholas Bares of Berlin, however, wrote the foreword, in which he asserted:

Bishop Bares' Foreword.

"The myth of the twentieth century has carried deep disquietude into believing Christian folk in Germany and is threatening the very foundations of Christian life and faith, even among youth."

The bishop's charge that Rosenberg had strayed "far afield from the objective of truth" was expected to be echoed from pulpits in the fight against the advance of the German faith, or paganism, movement, cause of great concern to churchmen during recent months.

Amid rumors that Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller had resigned, denied by his office, it was stated the Nazi Party's new hands-off policy might mean non-interference with Rosenberg and with Julius Streicher, publisher of the Stormer. The two men, active in Nazi ranks, heads, respectively, of the pagan faith and anti-Jewish movements.

Book in Three Sections.

The book was divided into three sections. The first, dealing with church history, was subdivided into sections on Christianity in ancient times, the Middle Ages and the modern idea; the second, of the Holy Writ, into sections on the Old and New Testaments; the third, taking up the problem of the thirteenth century German Dominican Monk Eckert, condemned some of his teachings as heresies.

Banker's Wife Suicide At Valentino's Statue

Los Angeles, Nov. 1 (AP).—The body of Mrs. Ann Johnston, attractive 30-year-old wife of a Los Angeles banker, was found today at the foot of the bronze statue of Rudolph Valentino in a Hollywood park.

Police said the woman died of poison, self-administered.

Reich's Arming Perils Britain, Churchill Says

Charges Reign of Terror Hides Preparations in Germany.

Woodford Bridge, England, Nov. 1 (AP).—Winston Churchill today warned Britain that Germany, rearming "secretly, illegally and rapidly," will have "overtaken us before another year has passed" in "organized military machines alone."

"A reign of terror exists in Germany in order to keep secret the feverish and terrible preparations they are making," the former chancellor of the exchequer told his constituency.

"Vice Premier Stanley Baldwin has said 'our frontiers are the Rhine.'

"Can we be sure that the men now in control in Germany will not reply to that, 'Our targets are the Thames?'"

A national emergency is approaching, Churchill said, as he attacked the national government for what he said was its laggardness in completing the program for air defense.

6,000 to Join In Democratic Festival Today

Three States to Have Part in Charles Town Celebration.

Charles Town, W. Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—Between 5,000 and 6,000 persons from Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia are expected to participate in the largest Democratic celebration ever held in this section here tomorrow. It is sponsored by the Jefferson County Young People's Democratic Club.

The program, which will begin at 3 p. m., includes a parade, football game, band concerts and public speaking. Patriotic, civil and fraternal organizations, school children, automobiles and floats representing business houses will be in the line of march. The parade will be headed by the 50-piece Charles Town High School Band and other bands will be spaced throughout the line of marchers. Addresses will be made in the public square immediately after the parade by the following men: Melvin D. Hildreth, a prominent Washington attorney, now serving as speaker of the Democatic National committee; Peyton R. Harrison, of Charleston, W. Va., secretary of the West Virginia State Compensation Commission; Milton O. Rouss, Democratic candidate for State Senate, and Upton S. Martin, Democratic candidate for the State House of Representatives.

A football game will be played on Memorial Athletic Field at 3 o'clock between the Charles Town High School eleven and the St. Mary's High School team, of Hagerstown, Md.

C. William Moore, jr., is chairman of the parade committee. Other committeemen include Adam B. Link, C. P. Weller, Joseph Warrenfeltz, Jack Luxenberg and C. Preston Engle.

German Club Elects At Teachers College

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.). The German Club at the Fredericksburg State Teachers College, sponsored by Mrs. C. L. Bushnell, dean of women, has elected the following officers: President, Miss Elvira Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Taylor, of North Emporia, Va.; secretary, Miss Margie Dement, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger S. Dement, of Dahlgren, Va.; treasurer, Miss Loretta Folger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Folger, of Riverside, R. I.

The German Club is an organization composed of sophomores, juniors and seniors who have attended two dances sponsored by the club, and who are interested in promoting social activities involving the entertainment of visiting young men invited to participate in such activities. The club meets monthly to plan its social programs, there being usually three major functions sponsored by this organization annually. Its first dance of the present college year will be given on December 8.

Incubator Chickens Ruled 'Bred' Chickens

Waynesboro, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.). Judge Joseph A. Glasgow of Augusta County Circuit Court closed a case yesterday which attracted State-wide attention when he ruled that hatching chickens by means of an incubator is a breeding process and not a manufacturing process. This decision sustained the action of City Manager I. G. Vass in granting a permit to J. H. Weaver to erect a hatchery in a section of the city in which manufacturing plants are prohibited by a local ordinance.

Residents near the hatchery site protested, and the Waynesboro Zoning Board of Appeals revoked the permit on the ground that a hatchery was a manufacturing plant. Weaver, who had nearly completed construction of the hatchery, appealed to the court.

Shelter for Civil War Soldiers Now a Chapel

Mount Airy, Md., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—An old building in Mount Airy which furnished shelter for soldiers of both armies during the War Between the States will be dedicated to the community for use as a non-sectarian chapel Sunday afternoon.

Pine Grove Chapel, as the little one-room building, erected in 1847, is known, has been deeded to a local board of trustees by the former owner, Potomac Presbytery, of Washington. Since the acquisition of the church it has been renovated inside and out.

Bright Asks Direct Aid For Needy in Virginia

Richmond, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Mayor J. Fulmer Bright, a leader in the fight of Virginia cities for a State appropriation for relief as an aid to them in the burden of winter demands, today asserted it was time for the State to abandon its highway work relief policy and adopt the policy of direct atppropriation to support municipal relief budgets.

Mayor Bright made this assertion today following up the demands for a $5,000,000 State appropriation made to Gov. Peery yesterday by a committee from the Virginia League of Municipalities.

Virginia Highway Unit Has $2,600,000 Deficit

Richmond, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—State Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley today estimated that the purchase of the six privately owned toll bridges in the State would require an expenditure of between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000.

At the same time Mr. Shirley said despite a gain in road revenues the highway department is still fighting a deficit of $2,600,000 in its funds at the end of the present fiscal year. It was added that the toll bridges, although fed by good highways, have not, as a rule, yielded in recent years the returns expected of them.

Fredericksburg Class Visits Capital Library

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.). The English novel class of the State Teachers College here, taught by Dr. George E. Shankle, head of the department of English, made an all-day trip to the Library of Congress, in Washington, today. The party included 15 girls and Dr. Shankle.

The object was to collect data bearing on the historical development of the noval as a literary form, to read some of the early pieces of fiction and to read some of the early novels of Greece, Egypt, Persia, Arabia, Rome, Italy and other countries.

Luray Republican Assails New Deal

Waynesboro, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.). Claiming that the Democratic party has "set up a dictatorship at Washington," J. Everett Will, Luray, Republican nominee for Congress from the Seventh District, assailed the NRA and New Deal before several hundred voters here last night. Paraphrasing the NRA as "Never Roosevelt Again," the speaker criticised the present Administration and the platform of the Democratic party.

"The President has not been true to the Democratic party or to the people of the United States," he declared. "He knows not where he is going nor does anyone else. No Administration in the history of the country has failed more than the present one."

St. Marys County D.A.R. To Celebrate Saturday

Leonardtown, Md., Nov. 1 (Spl.). The Maj. William Thomas Chapter of the D. A. R., of St. Marys County will hold a luncheon at St. Mary's Female Seminary at St. Marys City Saturday in honor of the nineteenth birthday of the chapter. A business meeting will precede the luncheon and dedication ceremonies will be held in the afternoon, when a pergola in the grounds, a gift of the chapter, will be formally presented. Mrs. Arthur P. Shanklin, State regent, and other State officers will be present.

License for Distillery Is Issued by Virginia

Richmond, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—A license for the establishment of a distillery near Richmond was issued today to Carl R. Mahaley and C. M. Little, trading as the Dixie Distilling Co. The A. B. C. Board issued the license after considering a protest from the Daughters of the American Revolution, who opposed it because the distillery is to be located near the site of the first iron foundry in the United States.

Bank Settlement Totals $172,622

Compromise at Baltimore Approved by Court.

Baltimore, Nov. 1 (AP).—A compromise plan of settlement under which depositors of the American Trust Co. will receive an additonal distribution amounting to approximately $172,622, today received the tentative approval of Judge Eugene O'Dunne, receiver for the company.

Under the plan, the Union Trust Co. of Maryland and certain banks in the Baltimore Clearing House Association agreed to contribute the amount involved in settlement of American Trust Co. liabilities.

In approving the proposal, Judge O'Dunne pointed out that it must be accepted by all interested parties. Unless cause to the contrary is shown, the plan will go into effect November 21.

University Adds Books to Library

Dabney's Is Among Those Included in Collection.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.). The University of Virginia extension division library, which annually circulates by mail more than 10,000 volumes to State readers, announces the addition of several hundred of the most recent books.

The new list includes the works of outstanding authors in the fields of biography, fiction, general nonfiction, economics and politics, travel and adventure, verse and art, history, and special books for children. All are available for loan to readers in every section of the State.

Among those devoted to travel is the latest work of Mrs. Agnes Rothery Pratt, entitled "Sweden: the Land and the People." Mrs. Pratt is the wife of Prof. Harry Rogers Pratt, of the University of Virginia faculty. Another Virginia author included is Virginius Dabney, of Richmond, who has written "Liberalism in the South," considered one of the leading critical studies of Southern problems since the Colonial era.

What magazine adds a $2.00 NOVEL to every issue for the same 25¢

(THESE BEST SELLERS APPEARED FIRST IN REDBOOK)

HERE is a remarkable "Novel-A-Month" plan! Over a year ago Redbook Magazine began giving its readers an extra feature—a new, unpublished, complete novel every single month. Not continued stories, not "long short stories" but every one complete, the length of books that cost you $2.00 and $2.50. Now you can read headline-making books months before they are published in book form. Novels like "The Thin Man" by DASHIELL HAMMETT, "The Cross of Peace" by SIR PHILIP GIBBS, "The Boomerang Clue" by AGATHA CHRISTIE.

What's more, Redbook Magazine is 25c worth without this extra surprise every month. For in it you find many features—continued novels, short stories, powerful articles, a full, complete magazine by itself.

Have you discovered the new Redbook? (84,000 new people have joined the list of Redbook buyers since July.) Buy a copy and treat yourself to the greatest "Novel-A-Month" bargain in the country. Out today. At your newsstand.

AND NOW IN THE ISSUE JUST OUT

Remember "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "The Road Back"? You'll find a new short story by Erich Maria Remarque, his first since his two famous books, complete in the December Redbook, now on sale.

* * *

"Can America SPEND its Way into Recovery?" Debating this, economist and financial prophet John Maynard Keynes says "Yes." (He's the Englishman who has Roosevelt's ear.) "No," says Harold Laski, English professor of Economics at London University. Read both sides and take your choice!

* * *

PLUS A Complete $2.00 Book-Length Novel . . . "A Woman of Washington" by Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., printed on special paper and bound in with the regular magazine. This novel will start tongues wagging. Vanderbilt knows his Washington from the Lincoln Study of the White House to the dance floor of the Heigh-Ho Club. Save a couple of dollars by reading it for 25c in Redbook before it appears as a book.

The Crime Committee.

Two objectives offer themselves to the permanent committee on criminal justice, now being organized by the Bar Association of Washington.

The other is to secure from Congress an appropriation for a larger number of policemen.

There is little doubt that the Police Department is seriously undermanned. The presence of a strong policeman with a stout club is one of the most effective preventives of crime. As things stand, there are not enough patrolmen to give adequate protection to business or residential districts. The chief of the department estimates that 100 additional officers are needed, and doubtless his figure is based on a sound knowledge of the facts.

It has been charged that the parole system in force is too loose, and that it operates as an encouragement to crime. Accusations have been made that it is too easy for a shrewd lawyer to avoid trial of clients apprehended by the police. It is said that gamblers from other cities are entering the District, and that gang warfare actually has begun, on a small scale.

If the new committee on crime can learn just how far these things are true, the remedies should be easy.

Explanation In Order.

Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, has made a most serious charge against the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. He says he has reliable information to the effect that three business firms of the State he represents were granted loans from the RFC after contributing 6 per cent of the amounts involved to the Democratic campaign fund.

Names and other specific data on which the accusation is based have not been made public. Senator Reed takes the position that these details must be withheld until the companies are able to obtain new loans so that they will not be obligated to the RFC. In so doing he deprives the accused of an opportunity to refute specific charges of the gravest nature. The spirit of fair play calls for a further statement from the Senator.

The campaign in Pennsylvania has reached a stage of acute rivalry. Charges of increasing acrimony have been mingled with denunciation from both sides. But the statement of Senator Reed can not be dismissed as mere political mudslinging. He impugns the integrity of Government officials. Because of the unquestioned integrity of the accuser, a thorough investigation is in order. And, of course, the initial step in that inquiry should be a bill of particulars from the Senator.

Chairman Jones of the RFC says that Senator Reed's charges "can not possibly be true." It is understood, also, that the Senator does not consider his accusations a reflection on anyone in the Washington office of the RFC. That does not, of course, diminish the importance of an early and thorough investigation.

Why Retail Trade Expands.

Department store sales for the first nine months of 1934 were at the highest point reached in three years, according to estimates of the Federal Reserve Board. The National Retail Dry Goods Association reports that early October sales were 8 per cent above the level of last year, and similarly encouraging reports come from chain stores and mail order houses.

This relatively flourishing state of retail trade is in marked contrast with the trend of industrial activity as measured by official and unofficial production indices. The Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production declined in September to the lowest level reached since the spring of 1933. The American Federation of Labor states that unemployment is currently increasing and places the number of idle at about 8,300,000 persons, exclusive of over 2,000,000 engaged on Government relief projects.

The source of the increased buying power necessary to support retail trade expansion would be an economic mystery if it were not for the Federal emergency spending, which is putting over $300,000,000 monthly into the hands of consumers. Disbursements for relief, for the CCC, for public works, for rental and benefit payments to farmers provide the chief explanation of the improvement in retail trade. For the present fiscal year, of which only four months have elapsed, the Federal deficit exceeds $900,000,000 as a result of such emergency outlays. The additional purchasing power placed in the hands of the people by such means has provided the chief stimulus to buying at retail.

Despite the expansion in dollar sales, it is doubtful whether a larger volume of goods has been sold this year than last, because prices have risen in the interim. In any case, the degree of business improvement attained is evidently dependent upon a continued flow of funds from the Treasury. So far there is no evidence to show that the buying power supplied by the Government can provide the stimulus needed to support an expansion of industrial activity and thus substantially reduce the number of unemployed.

Beating Around The Bush.

Federal authorities are making a commendable effort to evolve a substitute for unemployment relief. It is obvious that the Government can not continue doling out billions of dollars for this purpose, however great the needs of the unemployed may be, without impairing its credit. Nor can the cash relief policy be followed over a long period without demoralizing the people it is intended to benefit. Reconsideration of the entire relief problem is certainly in order.

When we turn, however, to current plans to make the unemployed independent, the outlook for improvement becomes doubtful. Officials are studying a gigantic public works program devoted mostly to urban housing and subsistence homesteads. According to the Associated Press, an outlay of $1,500,000,000 for development of new semi-rural communities is under consideration. Experience to date indicates that public works are singularly ineffective as a cure for unemployment. And the construction of homesteads for 10,000,000 persons out of work would be financially impracticable, even if it should prove economically and socially desirable, which is also open to doubt.

The Administration has already had considerable experience with subsistence homesteads. At Reedsville, W. Va., the PWA has developed small farms of this sort at a cost of $4,896 to $5,571 each. At that rate $1,500,000,000 would provide for only 300,000 unemployed families. Even if these families could be finally removed from the relief rolls, the total relief burden would not be substantially reduced.

There are a number of salutary features in this movement. It is intended to aid decentralization of industry and to give workingmen a greater degree of independence. But careful distribution of industrial plants can not be fostered by arbitrarily constructing new communities in the hope that workshops will follow the Government's lead. The forlorn skeletons of numerous misplaced factories now to be seen in large numbers should afford a warning against any hasty movement of this kind. Communities grow in response to economic and social advantages, and Government bureaus have never proved adept at forecasting these trends.

It is apparent that any carefully devised program of this kind would not be an important factor in the reduction of relief expenditures. The real task is to bring about the absorption of idle men into private industry. That problem is admittedly baffling. But every new scheme of unemployment relief which circumvents this basic issue seems to lead into a blind alley. There is reason to believe that no practical substitute for the restoration of jobs in private industry will be found. A new expedient which tends to postpone the time when the Administration will come to grips with the fundamental problem can be regarded only with skepticism.

Test Of Constitutionality.

A Federal district judge has dismissed indictments against several Alabama lumber mills for violations of code agreements regarding wages and hours of labor, holding that the recovery act is unconstitutional.

The ruling, which was not accompanied by a written opinion, was rendered with a view to expediting an appeal to the United States Supreme Court. Hence the decision itself is not particularly significant. It is, however, interesting to learn that the Department of Justice welcomes this opportunity to test the constitutionality of the national recovery act. Such eagerness is in marked contrast with the patent desire of the Federal authorities to avoid such tests in the early days of the NRA.

The present act expires next June and it is generally taken for granted that Congress will approve a continuance of the recovery experiment in a modified form. Until the constitutional issues involved in the existing law are clarified, however, Congress can not proceed with any assurance to frame new legislation. That explains why the Government is anxious to take the Alabama case to the United States Supreme Court on appeal. The decision itself will be of far-reaching importance, not only because it will throw much needed light upon the limits of Federal authority over private industry, but also because it will help determine the nature and extent of the permanent supervision to be exercised.

Art In Baltimore

Baltimore has good reason to be proud of its newly renovated Walters Art Gallery, which able critics unite in calling one of the best in the "provinces." Its treasures were assembled by two loyal Baltimoreans. One of these, Henry Walters, had the good sense to leave his own father's collection to the city, along with sufficient funds to guarantee the upkeep of the enterprise. Under municipal ownership the red velvet interior has been changed to one more attractive, and the paintings and objets d'art have been pleasantly and intelligently arranged.

Many unthinking individuals are under the delusion that, except for Pittsburgh and Washington, there are few museums of importance west of the Hudson River. The Metropolitan in New York has extended its fame by a well-regulated publicity office which has missed few chances to inform the world of its old treasures and its new accessions. But within the last few years, mainly through the generosity of public-spirited citizens and the natural desire not to let New York have everything, there has been a growing interest in museums throughout the country. The beautiful and unfinished Nelson Museum in Kansas City is but one example.

In all of these places there are displayed many masterpieces. Some are devoted, naturally enough, to regional work, as is the one at Santa Fe. But few, if any, compare with the Walters Gallery at Baltimore in the richness and beauty of inherited exhibits. It is said that its Byzantine collection challenges comparison with any in this country. But the value, to the general public, of a museum lies less in its specialized collections than in its ability to present an accurate and interesting panorama which will afford pleasure or education to the average man.

This, from all accounts, would seem to be what the Walters Gallery will do for the citizens of Baltimore and for all others who will take the trouble to make use of its new and pleasant facilities.

Demand For Credit Lags.

A few months ago complaints were heard that business was suffering from a lack of working capital and would respond eagerly to offers of intermediate credits which could not be obtained through regular banking channels.

Today, with $300,000,000 earmarked for industrial loans, the RFC has lent only about $19,500,000. The Federal Reserve banks have approved about $10,000,000 of proposed advances from a fund of $280,000,000 available for similar use.

The record seems to show that the clamor for intermediate loans came largely from would-be borrowers unable to qualify for advances, as many skeptics had predicted. However, the effort to expand industrial loans continues, with new regulations permitting banks to lend more than 10 per cent of their capital and surplus to any one borrower, provided the excess is guaranteed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or the Federal Reserve banks.

After the many abortive efforts made to force an expansion of bank loans, it is surprising that the Administration appears to be as firmly convinced as ever that recalcitrant bankers, instead of reluctant business men, are responsible for this situation. In his address to the ABA convention, Chairman Jones of the RFC reiterated his conviction that the banks were to blame in these words:

> With a great abundance of credit and credit facilities available; banks chock full of money; the right to discount long-time paper with the Federal; the right to borrow from the Federal on all kinds of collateral; access to correspondents anxious to lend and the RFC ready to lend on favorable terms, or to furnish capital stock at 3½ per cent for five years and 4 per cent thereafter until retired from profits—banks should make loans that they are willing to carry for several years.

This invitation to tie up funds in long-time obligations would be unacceptable to conservative bankers, even if there were numerous applicants able to qualify for loans. But the record of Government lending agencies in the field of direct loans certainly does not indicate the existence of an unsatisfied demand for industrial intermediate credits.

Banking loans to finance, trade and industry will expand, when and if business borrowers are able to make profitable use of larger credits and feel sufficient confidence in the outlook to expand the scale of their operations. In recent months there has been a hopeful increase in the volume of commercial bank loans, due in part to higher production costs. A major expansion can only come as business improves. Bankers can not force funds upon their customers.

The Human Element.

With the approval of a tentative program for demolition of squalid alley dwellings, a difficult social problem comes to the fore. What is to be done with the people now living in alley houses?

A recent survey showed that 1,881 alleys in Washington are inhabited by nearly 6,000 persons. Within a short time some of these families will be forced to move. All of them must vacate the alleys, under the present law, during the next ten years. In some cases alleys will be converted into streets and existing shacks will be replaced by model low-cost dwellings. But a considerable part of the alley property will be diverted to commercial use. At least one project tentatively approved calls for construction of garages where inhabited hovels now stand.

Even if a large part of the alley property should be retained for residential purposes, which seems unlikely, there is no assurance that the new dwellings will be available to inhabitants of the alleys. Investigators recently found 133 alley houses that rent for $1 to $2 per room on a monthly basis. The majority of houses included in this survey were rented from $2 to $4 per room. Without increased income, it is obvious that these families can not afford to live in model housing units of the type customarily constructed.

In 1929 the Washington Council of Social Agencies found that vacant street houses similar to the alley dwellings were available. But even these quarters rent for considerably more than the disease-infested huts of Moonshine alley, Tin Can, Hog and Cabbage alleys. Moreover, the housing situation in Washington has undergone significant changes since 1929. Thousands of people have flocked to the city. A shortage of suitable quarters at low rentals has been noted by several agencies, including the Public Utilities Commission.

No doubt the Alley Dwelling Authority will find that relocation of alley residents is one of its most formidable responsibilities. After all, these improvements are being undertaken largely to rescue human beings from an environment of filth, disease and unsocial conditions. Elimination of these infected areas will, of course, redound to the benefit of the entire community. But the community welfare can not be considered aside from that of the individuals who will be most directly affected. The manner in which the authority meets this problem will be one of its severest tests.

A church isn't opposed to your gambling if you do it by buying something at its rummage sale.

Letters to the Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Is This Irony?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An article in The Post of October 30, under the heading, "Roberts Gets Life in Ten-Minute Trial for Killing Three Relatives," has created a question. And it is not a question that involves the ethics of capital punishment versus life imprisonment or the soundness of Virginia's laws. It is only a simple question, yet one that is perplexing many right now. What do you have to do to receive the death penalty in Virginia? GAROLD T. HYZER.
Alexandria, Va., Oct. 30.

To End The Controversy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Had Mr. William Gerry Morgan merely corrected the misstatement that moved him to write to The Post and refrained from commenting on the issue of birth control in so biased a manner, he would not have laid himself open to criticism. I wish to offset several false impressions to be gotten from his letter.

Birth control proponents favor, not childless families, as Mr. Morgan assumes, but parenthood limited to the ability to provide for offspring. Not as many children as physically possible, but more healthy children (and parents) is the cry of the Birth Control League. Their appeal, joined by that of leading sociologists, is for quality, not quantity; for well-fed, well-housed, well-educated children growing into good citizens, not slum-bred, half-starved children denied by poverty a chance to develop themselves normally and susceptible to the lure of vice and crime. M. BERNSTEIN.
New York, Oct. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of October 27 William Gerry Morgan has a letter sustaining Bishop Freeman and others who oppose furnishing birth control information to the poor. He says: "* * * it is the exceptional woman in this section of society, who wishes to avoid parenthood." What does he mean "avoid parenthood?" Does he realize that there are probably as many women who regret their inability to become mothers as there are women who desire never to become mothers? The urge to motherhood is in no danger of dying out.

What normal women of all classes are concerned with is the question: How may I intelligently time and space the children I am glad to bear; so that I may give them the best possible chance in life? Surely, no woman of respectable intelligence wants, regardless of health and family finances, to present the community with a new baby as frequently as is biologically possible during her entire child-bearing period.

I know parents who, had it not been for financial conditions during these depression years, would have gladly increased the number of their children. Their restraint in the matter is commendable. I know other parents whose families have increased because, much to their regret, they did not have the necessary contraceptive information.

There are breadline babies aplenty these days. Isn't it time for a scientific, unprejudiced, Christian consideration of the problem of aiding the women of the poor to avoid excessive child-bearing? All honor and success to Dr. Willson and his medical confreres.
LUTHER K. LONG.
Washington, Oct. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If Bishop Freeman and Dr. Gerry Morgan possessed imagination enough to project themselves into the horror of overburdened motherhood they would not go on record as opposing any relief modern intelligence offers to mothers and undernourished offspring. The time will come when slavery of women will be as taboo as pre-Civil War Negro slavery is today.

"Florida's Disgrace."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On behalf of the Kodesh Church of Immanuel, please permit me to thank you cordially for your courageous and cogent editorial on "Florida's Disgrace," which appeared in The Post of October 28.

No race can afford to bring up its children to regard mob violence as the proper method of punishing criminals. The physical law that action and reaction are equal is true also in the moral world. Outrageous and atrocious acts revenge themselves, sometimes gradually, but always severely, and the race guilty of them suffers more in the end, by degradation and loss of civilization, than the race that is the victim of them.

There will be a criminal class, an irresponsible and bloodthirsty element, in every race so long as some are below normal in human sensibilities; but the law-abiding should not be classed with it. There should not be, and there must not be, any breakdown of the barriers which prevent criminal elements, white or black, from gaining popular applause and from continuing to participate in the benefits of free citizenship.

The Drop Too Much.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos of a recent article of The Post-Impressionist, I may say that a descendant of the Washington family living in the Far West has in his possession a very old book, being a collection of legal blanks and printed forms used by justices of the peace in England in the times of Charles I and Charles II. One of the printed items concerns the crime of drunkenness, and prescribes the method under which a man may be considered to be sufficiently inebriated to invite arrest. It follows:

> Now, for to know a drunken man the better the Scripture describeth them to stagger and reel to and fro (Job xii: 25; Esa. xxiv: 26), and so when the same legs which carry a man into the house can not bring him out again it is a sufficient sign of drunkenness.

On the flyleaf of the book, written in a bold but faded hand, is the name John Washington and the date 1760. VIRGINIAN.

In Garfield's Day.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your reprint of the capstone-fitting of the Washington Monument interests me, as my father, Calvin Crutchfield, served lunch then and dinner at the dedication ceremonies some time later. Capt. Servier was manager of the restaurant at the old Baltimore & Potomac Railroad Station from which the food to be served was sent, and I remember how often my father spoke of the high wind that seemed to shake the monument.

He was also one of the first to reach the side of President Garfield when he was assasinated in the old Baltimore & Potomac Station. If you have any pictures of the dedication ceremonies or the first pictures of the group around President Garfield just after he was shot, please publish them some time.

Your pictures of the floods around the Baltimore & Potomac Station and on Pennsylvania avenue have also been appreciated. During those floods, my father often had to cross in a boat to get home.

Infer And Imply.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent issue of your paper a correspondent criticizes The Post for using the word "infer" where "imply" is called for. It should be a source of gratification that The Post's general observance of good usage is so noticeable as to inspire such criticism.

I am somewhat finicky myself, and my particular aversion is the quaint compound "insofar," now and then printed in Post editorials as well as news columns. No doubt the linotypists are responsible for that sort of a compound. It is reactionary and should be discouraged, in so far as the good looks of printed words are worth while. The newspaper press has done good work in furthering the divorce of "can" from "not," and in so far as I am concerned it would be a good thing if the compounds "cannot" and "inasmuch" were relegated to the limbo of barbaric usage, notwithstanding the fact that they still have the Websterian sanction.

The Townsend Plan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let us all heartily join the ranks for the old folks!

Don't let's give them a measly sum. Let it be worth-while, so they can live in comfort and happiness during their remaining years.

Let President Roosevelt and Secretary Perkins stick to their good work. And let all of us be good sports. SUBSCRIBER.

Washington Pie.

This is about Washington pie, a dainty dessert mentioned by ye scribe of this column a week or two ago. Ye scribe was bothered over a report that layer cake is called Washington pie in Boston, and he is still restless over it. It was started by a lady of Maine, who asked a Philadelphia editor to explain, if he pleased, and if he could, why layer cake is called Washington pie in Boston. She supposed it is because layer cake is eaten with a fork by the Bostonese. The Philadelphia editor couldn't answer the question propounded by the lady from Maine. Editors are hardly ever competent to answer questions pertaining to the more important matters of the body social. Editors seem to specialize in the concerns of the politicians, along with the laws and evidence outcoming from a heterogeny of problems adduced by aimless democracies. So we have a letter from a helpful lady resident on Newton avenue, city and county of Dallas, who contributes light where darkness hung all around. "In the first place, it is very difficult for me, a native of Pennsylvania, to understand why a New Englander shouldn't know that Washington pie is not a cake but a pie. The inclosed recipe will, I am sure, prove to the satisfaction of State Press that what I say is true, and the woman who originally asked the question must have been trying to start something," the Newton avenue lady writes. The recipe for Washington pie, which she was kind enough to forward, indicates clearly to even a bum cook that the mixture when competently baked would be Washington pie, therefore a confection bearing all the insignia of a regular pie, not a cake. The difference between a pie and a cake is so marked and so variegated, that it would seem impossible to confuse the two. But Boston does not make a practice of accepting the dicta of those who were not born and bred in Boston.

The Post Impressionist

The Next Time

Post Office, Friday.

"THEN I'll kill myself!" declared his wife.

He knew how badly their life needed more money. He knew—and hid—how deeply he had descended into debt to keep it on something like its former modest course. Yet here was a roof over their heads—and he was just hanging on to his job by tooth and toenail.

"If I ask Harper for a raise when he's just looking for excuses to lay men off——"

"Oh," she laughed hysterically, "you're thinking I don't mean it! You're thinking, 'She's said it before.' But this time I do mean it. If you don't get that raise by supper——"

* * *

She had indeed said it before: at the apex of their first engagement-quarrel; again during the honeymoon. Lately—as, though she was no spendthrift, the meagerness of his wages shook her once firm faith in his earning-ability—she was saying it every few days. Yet the menace never lost its terror.

* * *

"Millie, you know I can't expect Harper——"

"I know we can't go on like this. And I know I won't!"

* * *

He was glad to meet Dr. Carrol in the street. "Doc, she's threatening again to——"

"Is she? Well, well, people who threaten suicide never commit it. Mostly, you've only got to call their bluff to prove that. All Mrs. Hambridge needs is a little sedative. Here, get this prescription filled."

* * *

Tom phoned the fiat as soon as he reached the office: ominously, no answer. He fumbled with some work, retelephoned; still no answer. Then he asked for the raise—was told he was lucky to have any job at all.

* * *

The door beside his desk stood open to his friend Mawson's room. Mawson was saying to somebody: "Hambridge'd be O. K. if he didn't let his good-looking wife bluff him so. Whenever she wants her own way, all she's got to do is cry. Why, once I heard her threaten to kill herself if he didn't take her to some movie he didn't want to see—and he fell for it . . ."

* * *

* * *

"What in the world are you doing back here at this time of day?" Millie looked perfectly well: that was what, rejoicingly, he first saw. She had her hat on—had evidently just come in: that he saw next, as he kissed her. "I know what it is, though," she gleefully continued: "you've come to tell me you got the raise."

The floor sank. "No, Millie."

Her smile snapped out. "You don't mean you didn't ask for it?"

"I asked. He turned me down cold."

Her face tightened. On the table, her fingers scratched at a package that hadn't been there this morning. "And what did you say?"

"What could I say?"

"I'll tell you what you've got to do! You've got to go right back and say to Harper that if he don't give you your raise"—her voice mounted—"you quit!"

"I can't."

"Why can't you?"

"I'd never find another job."

"You can quit, and you will. If you don't turn right around and go straight down there and——"

"I met Doc Carrol today. He gave me a prescription for you. I had it filled at the drugstore just now——"

She struck the white envelope from Tom's hand. If you don't do what I ask, I'll kill myself before your eyes!"

Tom was trembling. "Millie, don't keep saying that. I love you. Millie, you wouldn't do such a thing!" But he was afraid.

"Wouldn't I?" She tore open that package — snatched therefrom a black automatic. "I had the man load it when I bought it!"

* * *

Suddenly, Tom felt nothing except utter weariness. "Whenever she wants her own way, all she's got to do . . ." "People who threaten suicide never commit it; you've only go to call their bluffs to prove that . . ." Mawson's words and the doctor's flashed upon the mental teletype ticking somewhere in Tom's brain. He was tired: utterly tired out and defeated. He sank into a stuffy chair.

"I'm all in," he heard himself saying. "I can't stop you. I'm all in!"

The pistol fell with a bump to the table. Complete incredulity swept Millie's pretty face. "What's that?"

He loved her more than ever; yet he heard his queer voice saying: "You've kept threatening till—I can't do any more. If you want to kill yourself——"

Now her face was twitched by self-pity . . . And now by rage. He had never seen exactly such rage.

She retook the pistol.

Then she would do it! . . He tried to rise . . . No, he was all in . . . Yet he must stop her from suicide——

* * *

What was she shrieking?

She shrieked: "So you'd let me do it, would you? You perfect beast!"

She leveled the pistol at him. She discharged it full in his face.

Many Factors Help Keep the Franc Up

By Andre Vulliet,
(Special Correspondent of The Post.)

PARIS, Oct. 20 (By Mail).—The impregnable position of the franc and the relative soundness of French economy have been put in the limelight again by the last French treasury loan which has just met with real success. Except for possible future political troubles or further tinkering with Anglo-Saxon currencies, the French franc seems steadier than ever.

Its technical position has grown stronger and stronger since the revolutionary days of last February, as a result of the remarkable improvement of the French treasury's situation, the increase of the Bank of France gold holdings, and the slow adaptation of French economy to a deflation policy.

THE French treasury loan in question consisted of 4½ per cent bonds redeemable in 3, 8 or 10 years. The subscription, opened on September 20 and closed on October 15, neted 8,750,000,000 francs, despite the unsettling factor of King Alexander's and Louis Barthou's assassinations.

The main purpose of this issue was to allow the treasury to redeem some 5,600,000,000 francs of heavy maturities falling due at the end of October. Among these are about 1,100,000,000 francs of French cities (Bordeaux, Lyons, Marseilles) 6 per cent dollar bonds to be redeemed at their gold parity on November 1.

Thus, after paying off its maturing debts, the French treasury will have on hand an extra 3,000,000,000 francs of ready cash. According to an official statement of the finance minister this should be sufficient to carry it through the end of the year with no trouble at all.

This was a heavy year for the French administration which had to meet 8,250,000,000 francs of public note maturities. Nothing of the sort will stand in the treasury's way for the next three years, as the next important maturity will be the 3, 6 or 10-year 4½ per cent loan just issued, which may come due in 1937 at the option of the holder or of the government.

Until then, the treasury will only have to take care of the renewal of the outstanding treasury bills (1 to 12-month maturities), the amount of which is now limited to 10,000,000,000 francs.

THIS amount was reduced by law from 15,000,000,000 to 12,000,000,000 francs last March and from 12,000,000,000 to the present 10,000,000,000 last September. It will probably have to be raised at the beginning of next year to make up for the temporary deficiency of tax receipts which usually stand at a low ebb during the first half of the fiscal year, from January to July.

Considering how cheap short-term money is, compared to the 5½ or 6 per cent one has to pay for long-term loans, financial writers think it would be a good thing for the government to withdraw from the long-term money market, thus allowing the rates to fall off. They see no reason why the government should not take greater advantage of the downward trend of short-term money rates.

These rates for treasury bills have varied as follows:

Maturity.	Mar. 7	May 19	May 30	Oct. 8
	%	%	%	%
1 month	2	1½	1	½
1 to 2 months	2½	2	1½	1
2 to 3 months	3	2½	2	1½
3 mos. to 1 year	3½	3	2¾	2¾

"There is something abnormal," Frederic Jenny, a noted financial writer, asserted in Le Temps, "in the fact that, while the English market bears nicely a floating debt of 850,000,000 pounds sterling, equivalent to 64,000,000,000 francs, the French treasury-bill issues should be limited to 10,000,000,000 francs."

• • • •

OUTSIDE of the seasonal financing of the budget, the treasury, however, has to take care of several expenses for which no resources have been provided. In the first place, tax receipts in recent months have been somewhat disappointing and experts have it that the 1934 budget might well be closed with a 4,000,000,000-franc deficit which would eat up all of the treasury's surplus.

Estimates for the 1935 budget look fine on paper and leave a small surplus. Whether this will materialize depends, of course, on the trend of depression, but it is usually contended the deficit, if any, could not possibly be dangerous.

In addition, the treasury has to take charge of sundry expenses not included in the general budget which may amount to some 3,000,000,000 francs. It also has to bear the temporary financing of various public institutions in the form of temporary advances to the railroads, the Algerian treasury, the Post and Telegraph offices, the Cheap Dwelling organization, etc. This may well run up to another 4,000,000,000 francs.

Nevertheless, it is held the financing of such needs will be an easy matter. Financial circles regard the present treasury's situation as one of the most favorable France has known for years, since Raymond Poincare saved the franc in 1926 and made the government rich again.

Gold holdings of the Bank of France, moreover, have regained the 8,000,000,000-franc loss they had suffered prior to last February. They stand now at over 82,000,000,000 francs, less than 1,000,000,000 francs short of their all-time record. The ratio of gold to the total liabilities of the bank is around 81 per cent.

Thus, from a purely technical angle, and aside from political uprisings or international complications, the future of the franc, it seems, is absolutely safe.

THE campaign in favor of the devaluation of the franc, launched last summer by former Finance Minister Paul Reynaud, has fallen through completely. Nobody hears about it any more. There is no denying that France is now in the throes of depression. It is going through the painful process of deflation. But hopeful signs of adaptation may be found. Prices are slowly going down. The last monthly statistical bulletin of the League of Nations shows that from September, 1931, to August, 1934, wholesale prices in France have fallen by 21 per cent.

Retail prices declined as well, for the same period, by 22 per cent. Taking 100 in 1913 as a basis, the Bulletin de la Statistique Generale de la France gives the following figures for retail prices of 34 items in 300 French cities:

Ave. 1931	Ave. 1932	Ave. 1933	August 1933	May 1934	August, 1934
122	108	102	100	95	95

Foreign trade statistics also illustrate the point that, compared to world prices, French prices have proven more elastic than it is usually believed. Figures are as follows (in millions of francs):

		Jan. 1 to Sept. 1 1934	Jan. 1 to Sept. 1 1933	Difference
Imports:	Frs.	16,000	19,461	—17.89%
	Tons.	30,984	32,586	— 4.91%
Exports:	Frs.	11,541	11,882	— 2.87%
	Tons.	18,283	16,420	+11.34%
Deficit:	Frs.	4,459	7,559

• • • •

THUS, on one hand, the French have benefited by the fall in world prices, since they paid out 18 per cent less money and received only 5 per cent less goods.

On the other hand, they are adapting themselves to foreign competition as shown by the fact that they have sold 11 per cent more goods and received 3 per cent less money for them.

Of course, there are bad signs, too, in the French situation. The stock exchange keeps drifting downward. Unemployed on relief rolls were 325,000 last August as against 235,000 last year and it was estimated about 1,000,000 people were not working full time.

Steel, coal and textile industries, although not in the red, are making little, if any, profit. Industrial production, as a whole, is but 97 per cent of what it was in 1913, an all-time low record, reached only in 1932.

These figures and data are usually not regarded here as tragic. Business circles are generally well satisfied that French economy is slowly falling in line with world conditions. Provided new or further devaluations of foreign currencies do not take place, they feel confident the franc will remain as it is.

The Once Over

The Open Season in a Flivver—An Idyl of the Rural Roads.

"Frightened Deer Leaps Into Auto; Partridge Flies Through Windshield."—Headline.

Mr. and Mrs. Twitchell were motoring through the open country. It was the hunting season. Sounds of intermittent cannonading came from the woodlands. Now and then a sharp "ping" made the Twitchells draw in their necks.

Mrs. Twitchell gave a sharp cry from the back seat.

"What was that?" asked Elmer.

"Why the excitement? Are you afraid of rabbits?" asked Elmer.

"No, but there are times when they can be quite disconcerting," said the wife, her remark followed by another scream, as something came crashing through the side window.

"What now?" demanded Elmer.

"Don't get excited," insisted Elmer. "In the country this time of year you must expect this——"

There was a crash of glass. Mr. Twitchell, temporarily stunned, steered his car into a tree.

Elmer backed the car away from the tree and started along the paved highway again.

"Moose!" said Elmer simply.

• • • •

He struggled from under the inert animal and took the wheel again, somewhat unnerved but beginning to get used to it. Suddenly everything went black.

The next the Twitchells remembered, excited men were struggling to get their car right-side up again. Elmer had a black bear in his lap. His head was resting on the moose. The deer had been catapulted back into the rear of the car. Mrs. Twitchell lay on the floor with the deer and cow across her legs and a wildcat in her arms.

• • • •

"It was quite a trip," chirped Elmer in the hospital that night.

"Yes," sighed Mrs. Twitchell, "but I was a little disappointed."

"Why?" asked Elmer.

"I had my heart set on a wild turkey," confessed Mrs. Twitchell.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

The Training School.

THERE are so many good things that Mr. Roosevelt is doing for the people that I frequently think the Republicans have a crust to be conducting any campaign at all. They could put their energies to far better and more profitable service by explaining some of these things, clearing up the misconceptions and misunderstandings. That's what they really should do.

BARGERON

For example, there is the NRA. Of all the New Deal plans for the more abundant life nothing has been so greatly misunderstood. The result is that it has aroused hostility on every hand when support and applause were its due.

We got the impression at the outset; in fact, it gave the impression that it was out to hound business, to make it hew to some prescribed line, that it was to have a pronounced effect upon our whole economic fabric. How far we were wrong, it is just now becoming possible to see.

• • • •

The NRA, it begins to appear now, is another one of the little agencies that Mr. Roosevelt has set up to relive distress, like the FERA, the CCC and Mrs. Roosevelt's homestead projects.

It fills a need which we were simply too blind to see.

There was a realization on the part of all of us when the New Dealers came in that we had a boys' problem, that something had to be done to relieve the situation whereby youngsters were roaming all over the country without an aim in the world. Just wandering, that's what they were doing. Inasmuch as they were the men of our future, something had to be done. We had to gather in these youngsters and seek to assure them that life's jig was not up. The CCC was formed for this purpose.

• • • •

Russia, of course, had the same problem after the revolution. Literally millions of half-starved boys and girls lurked in the shadows that the unheaval left.

It developed, though, that our national planners had still another problem, that of the jobless executives of our country. We knew that the depression had ravaged every walk of life, but that there were thousands of executives roaming our country, with nothing to execute, had made no particular dent upon our minds.

We can see now, however, that they required special treatment. They could not be lumped in the whole of the unemployed.

• • • •

What was happening was that these men were rapidly becoming disheartened. To say the least, they were getting out of the practice of being executives. To the students of affairs it was clear that this was a condition which should not be permitted to continue. Even were we to have a business revival and then find that all of our executives, or a great hunk of them, had perished, we would be in a pretty fix. Or, without a business revival, a horde of unemployed executives roaming purposelessly over a country is an unhealthy thing. One might, indeed, say menacing.

So, just as the CCC was set up for the youngsters, the NRA was established for the unemployed executives. It is virtually a training school. As such it has been an unqualified success.

More than 500 executives, of varying degrees, are taken care of at a time. Private offices are set up and each executive is given a secretary and a staff.

Through their hands there daily passes volumes of correspondence so arranged as to look like the regular stuff. In fact, to give it all the appearance of reality business houses are required periodically to write letters and if they get an answer, as is frequently the case, to write again, to keep up a correspondence, in fact. It is seldom, though, that they get an answer the second time.

I am told that the plan has worked wonders to the morale of our unemployed executives, that they are their old selves again. Most of them have been so benefited by the treatment, in fact, that they never give a thought to leaving. When we sociologists bring about this state of mind we pat ourselves on the back.

Have You a Little Murder in Your Home?—or How to Be Clever When the Crime Comes.

By Theodore Hall.

BEYOND the peradventure of a doubt, all these mystery stories are educating us to the strategy and icicle-coolness proper in times of crisis. No one can gaze on the sang-froid of Inspector French, say, or the thinking-on-his-feet of Ellery Queen, without a lift of emulation. There they are, the confreres of detective fiction, surrounded by crime and gore—and see how nobly they behave! And we, perhaps, are only investigating a slight but ominous noise in the kitchen. Yet as we creep stealthily down the hall, the shades of Dr. Holmes, Mr. Fortune, and Fleming Stone go with us and armor us in the night.

This summer a college professor (anonymous) and his wife lived in a haunted house on Cape Cod. In the current Harper's you can read all about the strange clicks they heard, the foot-falls overhead when they were downstairs and downstairs when they were up; the great crashes which sounded like a piano falling, and the peculiar circumstances of the garage filled with hundreds of great brown moths at one moment and, practically at the next, quite empty of moths. Our doughty couple endured this sort of goings-on for four months. Literally and actually, we are given to understand! And they found not the whiff of an explanation.

Well, they couldn't have been detective story fans—that's all. Any true follower of Dr. Thorndyke would have routed out that ghost in a week.

The press is continually reminding us of the great army of scientists who, bit by bit, are adding to the store of human knowledge. We should give a thought, too, to the scarcely less numerous army of mystery story writers who are building up the store of human poise and ingenuity. For there is no telling—and certainly this is their lesson—when we may wake up some morning to find a headless corpse under the bed.

• • • •

First place, in today's list, goes to Inspector French, our old friend of the Freeman Wills Croft yarns. In "Crime on the Solent" (Dodd Mead, $2), he finds three murders on his hands, all occasioned when one English cement factory steals a scret formula from its rival cement factory over the way. Mr. Croft gives you a heady and exciting two hours. There hasn't been a better detective story in months and months.

• • • •

Michael Arlen's "Hell! Said the Duchess" (Doubleday Doran, $2) disappointed me. We meet an infinitely modest Duchess of Dove, hear lots of smart chat about London society in 1938, find our duchess is suspected of several fiendish murders, and then, when all is tense and a Communist plot rises around us, Mr. Arlen takes the supernatural gently by the hand and leads it onto the stage. Says a voice: "I am the evil of all the ages." Dear me!

Still, for "a bedtime story," as Mr. Arlen pleasantly calls it, the book is amusing.

An epidemic of suicides in a proud Southern family starts off Isabel Briggs Myers' "Give Me Death" (Stokes, $2). A playwright named Jerningham puts things right, after more throbbing suspense than you're likely to meet in a long while. But that's the trouble—the tale throbs too much.

• • • •

When an act of Congress stopped Maj. Herbert O. Yardley from writing further accounts of the American Black Chamber (wartime cipher laboratory, of which he was director), he turned to fiction. "Red Sun of Nippon" (Longmans, $2) is his second novel—a lively yarn of espionage here in town, set just before the recognition of Russia. It's full of embassy secretaries and State Department executives, topped off with another of those incredible Eurasian sirens. You'll like it best for the Secret Service methods—the plot is pretty gaudy.

• • • •

H. Russell Wakefield's "Hearken to the Evidence" (Doubleday, Doran, $2) earns a gold medal. The young wife is convicted of poisoning her aging husband. Guilty or not, it all comes out in court. Chief merit is plausibility. econd is the fact that if you should start this tale at 3 in the morning, it would hold and entertain you until dawn.

• • • •

Ellery Queen, the "masked marvel," is back in 11 short mystery stories—"The Adventures of Ellery Queen" (Stokes, $2). They read like parodied Van Dine, nonetheless clever.

• • • •

The returned African traveler finds a pretty howdy-do of weird powers, demonic influence and sacrifical rites out on Long Island. "Heh-heh-heh!" titters one of the "Shadow People, in a voice like the rustling of rotten, poisonous leaves." That sort of stuff fills the pages of A. Merritt's "Creep, Shadow!" (Crime Club, $2). All very ghoulish and absurd, but if you like it, I won't say a thing.

• • • •

A new importation from England is R. C. Woodthrope's "Death Wears a Purple Shirt" (Crime Club, $2). Murder among the "English Nazis" and an astute, humorous detective with a Cockney assistant, combine into a very grand yarn indeed.

• • • •

Young people have their mystery stories, too. I remember that St. Nicholas Magazine used to be full of them, and probably still is. Motive is not murder, of course, but such a thing as restoring a family's good name and prosperity—as in Ruby Lorraine Radford's "The Mystery of Pelican Cove" (Penn, $1.75). Code, pearls, and a Chinese servant all mixed up on the Florida Coast will give your youngsters a properly thrilling time.

• • • •

And last, here's old Fu Manchu with us again, cooking up human beings and gold in a tunnel under Limehouse. Once upon a time Sax Rohmer used to give me the genuine jitters—but now "The Trail of Fu Manchu" (Doubleday, Doran, $2) wears a bit thin, theatrical, and flimsy. The inscrutable Fu escapes at the end, so we'll no doubt have another tale.

But where are those poison beetles sniffing out their victims, those disappearing rooms, and other classic ingenuities which Mr. Rohmer gave us of yore? No one could beat Fu in those days. I hope he comes back with a vengeance.

"This is the second time that engineer has missed the Hudson tube!"

All Souls' Day

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

ALL SOULS' DAY, in German Allersellen, and in French Le Jour Des Morts, comes annually on the second day of November.

This is a Feast Day in the Roman Catholic Church, but is not so regarded by the Protestants. It was originally called in Latin, Commemoratio Omnium Fidelium Defunctorum.

The idea that led to its establishment was that after death the souls of the faithful which are not yet completely purified and therefore can not at once attain heaven, may be assisted by the prayers of the faithful on earth and by the celebration of the mass.

The custom of making a special day for this general intercession goes back probably more than 1,500 years; but the particular feast of All Souls was established in the first half of the eleventh century by Odilo, the Abbot of Cluny, in France; it immediately became immensely popular, spread all over the Christian world, and although at the time of the Reformation (1517) its observance was abolished in England, its prohibition could not prevent people thinking about it, and privately celebrating it.

On the Continent, it continued to be observed; even Martin Luther could not stop it. The Lutheran churches observed it for some time, and after it disappeared as a regular feast of that church, it continued to be a family custom.

And all over the Continent it is so observed today. I have been in Munich on All Souls' Day, and it is a beautiful sight to see the whole population go out to the church yards, cover the graves with flowers, and light candles on them in the autumnal dusk. In France, no matter whether the people are Christians or not, they observe this day as a remembrance of the dead in their families; and decorate the graves.

In places where superstition survives from ancient times, that is among the remote peasantry, there is a charming belief that the dead on All Souls' night return to their homes, and share in the family food. Cakes and foods of various kinds are left on the table for them, after members of the family have gone to bed, and the rooms are kept warm, so that the visitors will be comfortable. I think this is beautiful, and I am sorry for any one who does not agree.

All Souls' College was founded at Oxford University in 1437, by the Archbishop of Canterbury. If a man is so unfortunate as to be a bachelor, this is the finest place in the whole world for him to live, especially if he be a regular fellow.

This college also has its delightful superstitions; the tradition is that when they were building it, a wild duck was found in one of the drains; they hunt it regularly even unto this day.

Annapolis Opposes Filipino Mess Boys

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 1 (Spl.)—Municipal authorities of Annapolis, civic organizations and representatives of the two major political parties have united in a protest to Secretary of the Navy Swanson on the proposal again to assign Filipino enlisted men as mess attendants at the Naval Academy to supplant colored men.

The matter was laid before United States Senator Millard E. Tydings, who assured the groups he will press the appeal to higher officials on the ground that return of the Filipinos would bring about the loss of a local pay roll. The plan of naval officials is to recruit the Filipinos from the fleet at the rate of 10 per month until about 150 are assigned here.

Union Labor Wages Battle for Its Life

Business Believes Organization Drive Endangers Management and Profits.

By Elliott Thurston.

DILEMMAS raised by famous Section 7 (a) of the National Recovery Act continue to haunt the New Deal and hinder recovery. The latest, but typical, repercussion echoes from Cleveland. The version given by John A. Hartford, president of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., is much the same as that given by other employers who have been beset by labor troubles.

"The trouble resulted," he explained in an interview for The Post, "from the flat failure of the Federation of Labor to get our retail managers and clerks to join the union. When they couldn't get members they began picketing our warehouses and preventing transportation of goods to our stores."

As a result, he said, supplies could not be obtained, customers had to be turned away, much food had to be destroyed and finally, faced by the direct intimidation of workers in the stores, the entire chain of 300 Cleveland stores had to be closed, throwing more than 2,000 employes out of work.

• • • •

THIS is a familiar story. In the strikes at the Kohler plant in Wisconsin, by the truck drivers in Minneapolis, in the textiles and in innumerable other instances, the employers contend in general that labor organizations, taking Section 7 (a) to be a legalized, New Deal-supported right to unionize, have naturally seized the opportunity to compel unionization, often by such methods as Mr. Hartford describes.

That this is one of the most serious deterrents to recovery can not be doubted by anyone who will canvass opinion among business men in any part of the country. They say, over and over again, just about what Mr. Hartford says: How can business be conducted, how can plans be made for the future, what incentive is there for men to venture money in business, in the face of the problems and uncertainties resulting from such labor agitation?

And, like Mr. Hartford, they blame Washington. They complain that the New Deal has set these forces in motion and shows no disposition to control them. They point to the confusion of New Deal interpretation of Section 7 (a). They cite that in the automobile case, Mr. Roosevelt ruled one way, while the labor board was ruling an opposite way. Finally, they rebel against the so-called majority rule decision of the labor board in the Houde case.

Nothing better illustrates the New Deal dilemma than the backing and filling over this case. The labor board wants the Houde company prosecuted for refusal to accept the ruling until or unless the Supreme Court sustains it. The Department of Justice first announced that it had decided against prosecution. Then, under the spur of the labor board, it announced that it was seeking more evidence. The last word out of the Department is that it is "going ahead" with the prosecution.

Whatever the merits of the majority rule decision, the fact remains that the New Deal is reaping the whirlwind which it sowed in Section 7 (a). President Roosevelt recognized what this was doing to business when he suggested the truce. But what has become of the truce? The Cleveland strike makes a mockery of that.

THE fact is that neither by truce, nor by the multiplicity of rulings, often conflicting, can the basic trouble be obscured, much less solved. As long as labor organizers insist that 7 (a) legalizes unionization by them, they are going to use every means to compel unionization. As long as businessmen assume that the New Deal backs up such a unionization drive, they will not only resist but they will not attempt to expand business if they do not actually close down.

Again, a situation is created in which the heat engendered on both sides in the ancient labor struggle prevents reasonable and rational approaches to a solution consistent with business recovery. A truce, even if labor could be made to suspend its unionization drive, would only postpone the real issue. That issue has been raised by the New Deal, for better or for worse. The responsibility for finding a solution can not be avoided. As long as it is avoided, as long as neither labor nor business knows finally where the New Deal stands, whether it does or does not back the unionization drive which it has precipitated, the same troubles, instanced anew in Cleveland, will continue.

Organized labor is not battling for the much used and abused principle of "collective bargaining." It is fighting for unionization—for its very life. Business is fighting back because it thinks, rightly or wrongly, that the drive jeopardizes management and prospects of making a profit. If the issue were solely one of social justice the solution could wait or be worked out in the clash of forces. Since it also bears vitally upon recovery, failure to face it squarely only adds to the forces holding back business revival.

Carlton Hotel's Lounge a Cure For Headaches

Harrington Pink Elephant Offers One a Cozy Tete-a-Tete.

By Kay Ware.

Today we're still digging confetti out of our ears and finding paper hats in bureau drawers. With a yawn and a sigh—Halloween is over.

And, in our leisure moments, we're seeking peace.

The nice thing about the Carleton's lounge is that it's open early in the afternoon. If you haven't been there during daylight, go and see how bright the colors are; hear the cheerful splashing of the fountain on top of the bar. Those big glass doors opening into the garden admit a wealth of sunlight, and the garden, although deserted now, offers a fine view.

Why don't you select a chair that faces the garden, listen to the "musical apetif" of the Bartal musicians, sip one of Meyer's cocktails, and forget you ever had a headache yesterday?

For a cozy tete-a-tete drop in at the Harrington's Pink Elephant. It's pink and blue and silver and piquante. Convenient to downtown business.

Hay-Adams lounge and dining room offer you the dignity of the Tudors. Soft lights, comfortable furniture, wood-paneled walls. Fine dinner, too.

Bill Strickland is entertaining at the Lotus tonight in honor of his first year's anniversary there. At 10 o'clock, a group of friends, including many musicians and band leaders about town, will congratulate him and his Capitolians.

Strickland started his musical career playing a trumpet in a South Carolina military academy. After he came to Washington, he organized a band of his own, later becoming musical director for Irving Boernstein. He and his band were selected to play for the Hoover inaugural and the Virginia Governor's reception at Gadsby's Tavern during the Bicentennial.

Pete Macias had a party at Heigh-Ho the other night, a birthday party to which he invited members of his band. He isn't shy about his age. He's 34—same number as the year. He says he's glad he was born in 1900 because it helps him to remember his age. However, no more birthdays for him. Next year he promises to be 33.

A rumor—and just a rumor—has leaked out that the Club Hababa might open November 9.

The old Troika will not be called the "Club Internationale," as former rumor had it, but Club Troika instead. There will be a cocktail lounge and a done-over interior when it opens.

In the matter of square yards, Maryland Club Gardens offers more in the way of entertainment than any other place in—or out—of town. With the opening of the new ballroom, a very special floor show has been introduced. "Continentalism" is the keynote. The master of ceremonies is sophistication itself. Rita Renaud, Charles Meyer, singer; Janis and Jeanet, dance team; Fran Trapp, accordionist, and Ray Goss, song and dancer, make up the bill.

As might be expected, the Albertina Rasch dancers at the Shoreham are being talked about. They do a carioca, and a ballet doing the carioca is worth talking about. Also, their opening number, with their frothy net ballet dresses, is a lovely thing.

Woodruff and Struthers, Park avenue team, are the essence of graceful ballroom dancing. Hosts of their friends, from the New York and Bar Harbor days make a special trip over to see them.

Barnee and band, John Hale, m. c. and singer, make the evening complete.

Very good Italian dinners may be had at Macina's and parking worries are relieved if you go there. Try some of the Italian wines.

The Ambassador's dining room offers you as good a dinner as the Hi-Hat does a cocktail. Select a table near the wall, in one of those shallow alcoves. Something nice about the lighting effects; they are flattering to feminine complexions.

Been roller skating yet? When leaves begin to fall, and the air is crisp, nothing is better for mental cobwebs than a pair of skates. Try rolling around the walk at Hains Point. It's a good trip all the way round, but if you don't ache the next day, you'll want to try it again.

Select a moonlight night, your old clothes and a date that is willing to remember he was young once. Don't mind skinned knees—they're part of the fun.

If Sunday afternoon is dull, stroll around at the Smithsonian. Particularly interesting are the old uniforms. True, they look a little odd, because the coats are well filled out, trousers hang limp, shoes aren't attached to any feet, and the hats settle down on the epaulets in a weird manner.

If you like the grotesque, hunt up the head hunters' trophies. Small withered skulls, with feathers and ornaments hanging from dry lips . . . the head hunters would carefully split the skulls of their victims, fill them with hot sand, repeat the process until they had shrunk considerably below normal size.

For art lovers: The Fine Arts division of the Library of Congress has many beautiful lithographs, etchings and other art works on exhibition. Corcoran and Freer galleries are always instructive.

For the sentimental:
When the heart
Is hollow
It makes it hard
To swallow.

Start working up an appetite, because S. & W. cafeteria will open soon in the Washington Building. It will have four counters, tables to seat 800 and an eventual capacity for seating 1,000. Announcement should be made within a week.

Miss McNally said her group will ask Congress to take retroactive steps if the President does not change his mind and order full pay scales January 1. If retroactive legislation hits a snag in passage, the date will be moved up one month, to February 1.

Both the National federation and the A. F. G. E. had hoped to accelerate Christmas buying in Washington assuring members that January 1 restoration was a certainty. The President's budget has dimmed that hope, but increased the vigor of the employes' appeal.

Other Demands Included.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, likewise placed pay restoration first in the list of objectives, but announced the five-day week, repeal of the 15-day annual leave limitation, and strengthening of the retirement set-up as hardly less vital.

The crusading official, who served a term as secretary of the Civil Service Commission, disclosed last night that employe representation on the commission itself is the object of other legislation being drafted.

The commission now is constituted on a bipartisan basis of three citizens appointed by the President. Babcock would amend the law to permit employes to nominate representatives from which the President would choose one for a seat on the body. The appointment would be made to fill the next expiring vacancy.

Reiterating charges that the Federal employes' retirement fund is now "insolvent," and rendered so by the compulsory retirement legislation enacted last session, Babcock said his organization will ask substitution of voluntary for compulsory retirement, and sounder administration of the retirement fund.

He thrust aside claims by the Civil Service Commission that the fund is on a solvent basis, citing the commission's own reported request for an additional $31,000,000 to carry out the terms of the contract, and the $730,000,000 of accrued Government liability that had accumulated up to 1930. Compulsory retirements have jumped the drain on the fund from $13,000,000 in 1930 to $39,000,000 in 1934, he pointed out.

Babcock will go before the House Appropriations Committee with his case when it meets next month, he said. Recommendations for a 15 per cent horizontal increase in Federal pay scales later will be laid before the House Civil Service Committee, he added.

Even Music in Turkey Must Be Modern Now

Istanbul, Turkey, Nov. 1 (AP).—President Mustapha Kemal, whose passion is modernism, today started to reform Oriental music.

The traditional music of the East is "far from honorable to the Turkish nation," Kemal said. He issued orders it be modified in accordance with rules governing Western music.

Judge Weds Wife Of Man He Jailed; Action Is Debated

Los Angeles, Nov. 1 (AP).—The marriage of Superior Court Judge Guy F. Bush to the divorced wife of a man he sentenced to prison may be considered by the Lawyers Club and the Los Angeles Bar Association, officials of the two organizations indicated today.

Judge Bush married Mrs. John Le Grand October 20 in Tia Juana. Court records show that on April 10 Mrs. Le Grand filed suit for divorce against Le Grand, and on the same day Judge Bush reduced the sentence of Le Grand, who pleaded guilty to charges of grand theft and violation of the corporation securities act involving a defalcation of $85,000.

Alumni of C. U. Gather Tonight In Celebration

Alumni of Catholic University, assembling tonight for the seventh annual homecoming festivities, will be welcomed to Washington by William Dietz, president of the local alumni group that is sponsoring the celebration, in a radio address at 6:30 p. m. The feature of the week-end program will be the renewal of football relations between Catholic University and Western Maryland in Brookland Stadium.

A giant bonfire and a snake dance will mark a pep rally to be held on the university campus at 7:30 p. m., when the Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., for many years lerder of such rallies, will address the assembled students and alumni.

Government officials will be guests of the Most Rev. James H. Ryan, Bishop of Modra and rector of the university, in a special box at the football game tomorrow. They include Postmaster General and Mrs. James A. Farley, Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. Vincent Burke, Special Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. Ambrose J. O'Connell, District Commissioner and Mrs. George E. Allen, District Commissioner and Mrs. Melvin Hazen, Col. and Mrs. Daniel Sultan, Senator and Mrs. F. Ryan Duffy, Senator and Mrs. Louis Murphy, Senator Lee P. Goldsborough, Senator Millard Tydings, Representative and Mrs. Stephen Gambrill, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, Special Assistant to the Attorney General and Mrs. William Stanley, Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Joseph P. Keenan, and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Crowley.

Action Delayed For Revamping Health Agency

President Must First Pass on Fowler Plea to Stay 2 Years.

No move will be made toward reorganizing the District Health Department until President Roosevelt has formally passed on the application of Dr. William C. Fowler, health officer, for an extension of active service, it was said yesterday by Commissioner George E. Allen.

The Commissioner's statement was prompted by a letter made public by Rufus S. Lusk, secretary of the Washington Taxpayers' Protective Association, urging that reorganization steps be taken immediately.

Dr. Fowler is to be retired for age next month unless President Roosevelt grants him a two-year extension. The Commissioners in a report on the request, made some time ago, said they would not recommend an extension because they recognized the President's policy to be against extensions except where an individual was engaged in the kind of work which none other could carry on.

George Washington University Hospital, Georgetown University Hospital, the District Medical Society and the Public Health Service will be represented on a committee to study the question of reorganization of the department, Commissioner Allen said.

"We want to bring the District Health Department up to the highest point of efficiency and effectiveness," Commissioner Allen said. "In order to do that I want to get the best advice possible. The matter is of such importance that I am not going to rush it through and do something just for the appearance of doing something. That would not be good government or good management.

"Often in the past, I believe, Congress has not provided what have seemed necessary funds for the work of the department. If we can bring about a reorganization which will stand inspection and approval we might be able to come nearer getting required appropriations."

Colored Driver Held After Officer Is Hurt

Gladeon C. Richey, colored, was ordered held in $500 bail at police court yesterday in connection with a Halloween accident which resulted in Policeman James E. Bracey suffering a fractured arm.

Pvt. Bracey, of the park force, was directing traffic near the Tidal Basin Wednesday night when struck by a car reported driven by Richey. The latter, who lives in the 1400 block, Swann street northwest, was charged with reckless driving.

Philadelphia Orchestra to Draw Society

Stokowski to Conduct Opening Concert Next Thursday.

Sergei Rachmaninoff Will Be Soloist on Program.

Society at large—diplomatic, official and residential—is taking a great interest in the opening concert in Constitution Hall next Thursday night of the Philadelphia Orchestra, with Dr. Leopold Stokowski conducting, and Sergei Rachmaninoff as soloist.

Among those to be present will be the Ambassador of the Argentine and Senora Dona Espil, Mrs. Harold Ickes, Mrs. Reeve Lewis, Mrs. Edward Watson, Mrs. Clarence Phelps Dodge, Mrs. Ross Thompson, Mrs. Joseph H. Bradley, Col. and Mrs. W. W. Gibson, Mrs. Charles Keller, Mr. and Mrs. Adolf Torovsky, Mrs. F. A. Roberts, Dr. George W. Atkinson, Dr. and Mrs. Raoul d'Eca, Mrs. H. C. Vanderveer, Miss Barbara Brown, Miss Peggy Huxley, Mrs. Nina Allender, Mrs. Ralph Richards, Maj. and Mrs. Guy Withers and other well-known music lovers.

Large groups of students will attend the concert, including those from Mount Vernon Seminary, the King Smith Studio School and Gunston Hall.

Capt. Gillmore And Miss Hills Wed in Capital

Gen. Reilly, Bridegroom's A. E. F. Commander, Is Best Man.

A wedding of interest to old Washingtonians is that of Miss Mary Gorman Hills, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Hills, of Washington, who became the bride of Capt. Stuart Hagner Gillmore, son Mrs. Gillmore, of Fairfax County, Va., and the late Commodore James C. Gillmore, U. S. N., yesterday at the home of the bride's parents on Nineteenth street.

The bride, who was escorted to the improvised altar by her father, wore a smart two-piece ensemble of dark brown wool with a blue fox collar and ivory-tinted lace blouse. Her brown peter pan hat was trimmed with a single feather at the back, and she wore a shoulder bouquet of orchids.

Gen. Reilly Best Man.

Brig. Gen. Henry J. Reilly, U. S. A., who was Capt. Gillmore's commanding officer on the Western front during the World War, was the best man. The bride was unattended.

A reception followed for the members of the two families and a few close friends who witnessed the ceremony. The couple was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Hills, mother of the bride, who wore a gown of black chiffon, with a corsage of orchids.

Capt. Gillmore and his bride left later for a wedding trip and after November 15 they will make their home at 1802 Nineteenth street, the home of the bride's parents.

Relatives at Ceremony.

Among those who attended the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. Wilton J. Lambert, uncle and aunt of the bride; and another uncle and aunt of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Morris, of Washington and Chicago; Mrs. Richard Johnson and Mrs. Arthur P. Gorman, both of Howard County, Md., aunts of the bride, and her brother and sister-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph G. Hills, of Baltimore, Md.; Gen. Charles Treat, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. Treat; the bridegroom's cousins, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Hagner and Mr. Randall H. Hagner, and the bride's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baker and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lambert and Mrs. Bruce Atkinson.

Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR DIARY:
Mary Kay Spinks looked too cute for words yesterday when she was wearing a gray frock with hed plaid lapels and a black hat with a daring scarlet quill. Orchids, those rre blossoms, are finding their way to this young lady's house with increasing frequency. Mary Kay will celebrate her birthday and make her debut at the same time November 9 at the Mayflower.

Going out to the Richardsons' Ball tonight at Fairfax we are going to turn the clock back a bit, and instead of straggling out in ragged groups of cars, we will meet and form a caravan which will doubtless puzzle the other people on the highway (maybe they'll think the Campbells are coming).

Miss Coffman And Mr. Pearse Wed Tomorrow

Ceremony to Take Place in St. Alban's Parish Church.

A wedding of much interest in official circles will take place tomorrow in St. Alban's Parish Church on the grounds of Washington Cathedral, when Miss Gertrude Lee Coffman will be married to Mr. Frederic M. P. Pearse, of Newark, N. J. Miss Coffman, who resigned in September as secretary to Representative Thomas F. Ford of California, has arrived at the Shoreham Hotel from her home in Harrisonburg, Va.

Mr. Pearse is well known in the Capital. He has appeared as attorney in many Federal cases recently. During the Wilson Administration he was Assistant United States Attorney, and later he was appointed secretary to S. Silzer, former Governor of New Jersey.

Mr. Pearse is expected today, and with other members of the wedding party, will be at the Shoreham. The former Governor and Mrs. Silzer are expected. Mr. Pearse's two sons, Mr. Frederic M. P. Pearse, jr., and Mr. George Such Pearse, will serve as attendants for their father. Their wives will attend the ceremony, as will the bride-to-be's mother, Mrs. Robert Lee Coffman, Mr. and Mrs. Emmett T. Drew, of Ridgewood, N. J.; Miss Harriet Mulford; Dr. and Mrs. Harold W. Dunne, all of Metuchen, N. J., and Mrs. H. W. Bertram, of Harrisonburg, Va., and Mr. James Dobbs, of Paterson, N. J.

Notables to See 'Pocahontas' at The National

Mrs. Ickes to Be Honor Guest of Children's Theater of New York.

A distinguished audience will see the opening of the third Washington season of the Children's Theater of New York, when "Pocahontas" comes to the National Theater tomorrow morning in the first of the series of six plays the group will present here this winter.

Mrs. Harold Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, will be the honor guest. Others in the audience will be Mrs. William Howard Taft, Dr. Walter Hough, head curator of anthropology of the National Museum; Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, Mrs. Reginald Huidekoper, Mrs. William Phillips, Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Mrs. Anne Archbold, Miss Moira Archbold, and most of the patronesses of the children's play season.

A number of Indians from the Indian Bureau will be in the audience. The White House box will be occupied by the President's grandchildren, who may be accompanied by Mrs. Anne Roosevelt Dall, their mother, also a patroness of the Washington season.

WHITE HORSE
—this is the reason

Its taste is so distinctive, its aroma and bouquet so satisfying. Then it is always soft and smooth to the palate . . . always sets pleasantly . . . always acts as the perfect bracer . . .

These virtues result from extraordinary care in selecting the choicest whiskies and from patience in aging in wood and unusual skill in blending and "marrying". Whisky such as White Horse—Real Old Scotch—can be made no other way. That is why you should always order "White Horse" instead of merely saying "Scotch".

Mme. Bori Likes to Knit and Make Over Hats But She Draws the Line Against Cooking

Domestic Life Only Diversion Of Opera Star

Reveals That Every Artist Is Nervous Before All Appearances.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

A woman who puts her art first—which is exactly where she must put it, if she attains the heights—still has a second and third place to devote to such feminine foibles as knittting, sewing, and designing of hats and dresses.

So believes Lucrezia Bori, soprano, who appeared as soloist with the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall last night.

"There's nobody in the world more domestically inclined than I am," the diminutive opera singer admitted after her rehearsal yesterday morning at Constitution Hall. "I like to knit. I like to sew. I like to make over a hat, even when it costs a fortune. I like to twist it around until it suits me exactly, reshape it into an entirely different type of hat."

Does Not Like to Cook.

"But cooking, I don't like," Mme. Bori went on, her dark eyes sparkling, reflecting the smile that curved her softly molded mouth. "Those greasy pots and pans——." She shrugged her shoulders, Latin-fashion and held up her hands, palms outward. "That's where my domestic inclinations stop."

A home life is the only type of existence that can be a successful complement to an opera singer's career, Mme. Bori explained, her rich voice, rolling "r's" and soft Spanish accent falling pleasantly on the ears of those who listened intently while she gave a number of reasons to support this belief.

First, she explained, an opera singer doesn't have time for parties—not many, anyway. Then, she must guard her health with particular care. And she must have plenty of rest and sleep to prepare herself for the arduous hours necessary to success.

"Yet she needs some diversion," Mme. Bori added. "I find most of mine in my home life—reading, or knitting, or making over hats and dresses. But, of course, most of the time I am hard at work, for the glamour that reputedly surrounds a singer's career soon resolves itself into hard work and more hard work. Even when I find time for some simple little diversion, my mind is still on my career. It is always in front of me. Always between me and anything else that would take up much of my time.

Suffers Before Performances.

"What the average person doesn't seem to realize is that every artist actually suffers before each appearance. No matter how well the last one went off, there is always the fear the next one will be terrible. I worry and worry before each program, knowing I can't afford to rest on my laurels. No singer can. But afterward—when I have finished and know everything has gone all right—I am so relieved, so happy. Then I wonder why I was so stupid to worry at all. I resolve never to do it again. But the next time I go through with the same thing.

"Once I thought the time would come when I'd cease to worry. Now I know I will always be nervous before each program, always relieved and happy when it is over and has gone as it should," she said with an appropriate gesture of resignation.

"But whenever everything goes fine, that is the supreme thrill," she added, flashing her gay smile once more. "That's the compensation for every worry and all the hard work. That's why we singers shape our whole lives around our career and, if necessary, sacrifice everything else for it."

Domestic pursuits constitute the most successful complement for a singer's career, thinks Lucrezia Bori, Metropolitan Opera soprano, who can with equal grace sing a Mozartian aria and make over a hat.

Mrs. Roosevelt Defends Youth

(Associated Press.)

MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT made two speeches today pleading the cause of youth and then left for New York to do her final campaigning for Mrs. Daniel O'Day.

Before the National Council of Parents' Education, Mrs. Roosevelt urged parents to "face reality."

"I received a letter from a woman who felt my influence on young people had been a bad one," she said. "She told of having brought up two daughters who had never done many of the things done by young people today. She said if homes never countenanced nor spoke of certain things, they would disappear.

"It so happens that I have a number of boys who knew those girls, and who knew that they did every one of those things which she said they never did. If that mother had been honest with her children, she could at least have had a chance to put across her own ideas."

Mrs. Roosevelt said she found that many parents had lost their hold on their children, and gave as one reason, that "they lay down the law without intellectual interchange of ideas."

She also urged facing facts, in a speech to the conference on the exceptional child. Communities should be educated, she said, to find and furnish practical training for those not fitting into the standard mental niche, and parents should learn "not to hide the things which seem to them wrong about their children."

Old Issue of 'What Is a Lady?' Resurrected by Quarrel of Society Women and Models

By Malvina Lindsay

STRANGE AS IT may seem, the moth-eaten retort, "I'm as much of a lady as you are!" has come to the fore again—this time in the dispute between New York society women and models over the right to pose professionally.

• • • •

Only a few years ago women were loudly protesting they were not ladies. In the jazz decade nothing could have been more fatal to social success than to have been branded "lady-like." For that matter, the whole modern industrial era has set no premium on ladies. In business, politics, love; in all fields in which masculine favor figures, woman's progress has not been aided by too much gentility.

• • • •

Nevertheless, the tradition of the lady will not down. Deep in her heart every woman considers herself a lady—no matter what she may assert at a cocktail party—and usually the less of a lady she is the more vehement she is in protesting she is one. When pressed to the wall, a woman's first defense is that she is a lady. On the offensive, her first charge is that her enemy is no lady.

"AFTER ALL, a model should look like a lady," was the crushing reply the society women gave the models. That resurrects the question, "What is a lady?"

The first ladies were products of economics, the members of a favored social class. They did not have to work, hence, they had time and energy to develop the graces of ladyhood and money to buy what the New York models call the "habiliments of aristocracy."

• • • •

America's tradition of the lady comes from England. That manners made the woman was the basis of that tradition. We are told that Lady Hamilton, despite an unsavory past, was made into a lady by her London patron, Sir Charles Greville. Heroines of the early English novels were examples of an artificial ladyhood. To have "elegant manners" was the first requirement of feminine charm. So artificial did the standards of lady-like behavior become that it was even considered indecorous to marry for love.

• • • •

Yet superficial and dull though these English ladies may have been, they had their points: sensitivity, graciousness, delicacy—among other things—and out of their pattern developed the somewhat more human lady of American life, who held her ground well into the twentieth century.

But even this tradition does not fully explain the lady. She always has been something more than a parlor ornament. Everyone recognizes there is a subtle something that a lady has whether she be a washerwoman or a social registerite.

IN ATTEMPTING to analyze a lady one meets the problem of what makes a gentleman, of what does the aristocracy that gives a vague distinction to a human being consist. Certainly it is not birth, though that may help. It is not brains, though these may help also.

• • • •

It is in part a social consciousness that reaches beyond the me-and-mine stage, that carries a sense of fair play, and, in the case of a lady, an innate gift for making easy the way of those about her. It also is a discrimination in values, a sensitiveness that enables one to distinguish between the gold and the alloy, that gives one a high disdain for the shoddy and an impatience with compromise.

• • • •

It is an inner aristocracy of personality that is not as obvious as anything either Broadway or Park Avenue has to offer.

Coeds at Denison U. Banned From Smoking

IN Ohio, at least, the prejudice of parents against college-age daughters' smoking still carries some weight. So much, indeed, that Denison University authorities at Granville have refused again this year to accede to women students' request to provide smoking rooms in dormitories.

Moreover, smoking on the campus or in any college building and at college social functions is prohibited by order of Dr. Avery A. Shaw, president, as the result of questionnaires circulated among parents and guardians of coeds.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Will you kindly let me know through your column as soon as possible if one has to give a month's notice to move. I have been in Washington a year and would like to make a change. I live in an apartment and pay monthly. PUZZLED.

• • • •

DEAR PUZZLED: I am no authority on the District of Columbia's landlord-and-tenant laws, yet it is distinctly my understanding that, unless a written agreement to that effect has been entered into, a month's notice of intention to vacate rented premises is not legally compulsory.

• • • •

On the other hand, there seems to be an unwritten law—perhaps of business courtesy—that a lessee who pays rent by the month, shall give equal advance notice of intention to move. However, I believe there is nothing to prevent your simply moving the day your rental payment expires. M. H.

• • • •

Wants to Help Others.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am coming to you for help along the same lines requested by "Waiting" in Tuesday's Post. I am a widow in the forties, with no children and a small income which needs to be augmented by my own earnings. Like "Waiting," my main interest is in people, particularly those with problems I might be of help in solving. Having had much trouble myself, I quickly render a helping hand. What can you suggest?

MME. ANTOINETTE.

• • • •

DEAR MME. ANTOINETTE: Since you read the letter from the person who signed herself "Waiting," it seems not unlikely you also read my answer to that letter. And since the circumstances of your respective cases seem so identical, it should go without saying the remedy for the one is likewise applicable to the other. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write to her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Age Is No Barometer to Success In Politics, Woman Leader Declares

Mrs. Whitehead, Virginia Vice Chairman of Democratic Party, Says Members of Sex Are Invading Field in Right Spirit.

WOMAN'S political age of discretion may begin at 16 or 60. Whenever it comes, she will not recognize the symptoms, but will find plenty of room to exercise her talent in a world suddenly gone politically minded.

This view was expressed at the Washington Hotel yesterday by Mrs. Irving Whitehead, of Amherst, Va., pioneer woman office holder on the Democratic State committee. Mrs. Whitehead, a member of the Virginia organization for ten years, was recently appointed State vice chairman, the first of her sex ever to hold such an office.

"Age is no barometer of political success," elucidated the vivacious brown-eyed Virginia woman, who is conferring with members of the Democratic National committee. "I have seen girls of 16 or 17 who exercised far more political sagacity than women of 40, and women of 70 who had lost none of their ability to grasp and influence political situations. Politics is one field where those with ability can begin when they will and go on forever."

Issues Offer Challenge.

Southern women, she said, are growing increasingly interested in Governmental affairs. Candidates and issues in the present campaign have offered them a challenge that has sent great numbers of them on the stump and into active organization work, she added.

"It isn't so much that women have changed," said Mrs. Whitehead, "as it is government and politics have changed. They hold more appeal for women today because they recognize the things she has always been anxious to accomplish. Perhaps women may be given some credit for the changed viewpoint. Today, however, we find the Government actually placing emphasis upon better homes, education, child welfare and family problems of old age and illness, heretofore considered unimportant. Naturally woman feels right at home in such a world, and does her work with a zest."

Mrs. Whitehead believes women are entering politics in the right spirit. Very few have personal axes to grind, but are interested in contributing their bit toward making the world a more comfortable place to live in.

Drawn Into Politics Gradually.

"Many women," Mrs. Whitehead said, "become drawn into politics unwittingly. They start out to accomplish some benefit for a neighborhood or community. They find themselves appealing to one group after another. They find they can get nowhere without organization, so learn to cooperate and work in larger and larger groups. When they have gone up the scale from one piece of welfare work to another, they suddenly wake up some morning and find themselves referred to as politicians."

In order to be a success in politics a woman must have a cause to fight for, Mrs. Whitehead believes. Being natural-born crusaders, they do their best work when they lose themselves in an ideal they consider bigger than themselves. Other requisites for political success, she thinks, are a consistent interest in people, friendliness and a willingness to cooperate.

Hospitals' Free Care Shows Increase in Year

The proportion of days' care to free patients in all types of public hospitals and in certain types of private hospitals was larger in 1933 than in 1932, according to reports from 267 hospitals in 83 urban areas received by the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor.

In both years free patients received more than 95 per cent of the total number of days' care of patients in public general, tuberculosis, isolation and orthopedic hospitals.

For Evening Affairs This Winter You Must Have a Modern

"Robe de Style"

—The "Robe de Style" is one of the most charming fashions Paris has given us in years. The recent showings give special prominence to tight bodices and full skirts, and all indications point to these new styles as the Winter's big successes. A style flattering to all types, with the sophistication which avoids the "sweet simplicity" of a decade ago.

Small Outlay On Bathroom Does Wonders

Black and White Simplest and Most Effective Color Scheme.

IN THE process of home modernizing the bathroom is often a stumbling block. It may be antiquated plumbing fixtures that discourage one, or perhaps lack of fabric ideas or sparsity of color schemes that have character and at the same time suitability, or possibly it is just because the bathroom is often postponed to the last for renovation.

Actually, it is one of the easiest of rooms to modernize successfully and inexpensively. A new finish for the walls and floors, new window and shower curtains, a new accessory or two and wonders are done.

Perhaps the simplest and, at the same time, the most effective of the color schemes now in order is a bathroom in black and white. Especially where there are white fixtures, this combination, best of all, can make the room ultramodern in appearance at small cost. The wall may be done lower half in black paint—linoleum or another practical covering—and upper half in a household finish of whitest white.

Floor Should Be Black.

The floor should be black like the lower wall; if linoleum is used an off-black with slightly mottled gray tone is also pleasing. If the floor is painted, an additional coat of spar varnish will preserve and make cleaning easier. In this refinishing process, be sure to use one of the new household finishes made on a synthetic base because they are exceptionally durable and stand hardest washing, of utmost importance for bathroom usage.

Now as to curtains. A good looking shower curtain will add a distinct note of luxury. Some of the newest designs have valances that conceal unsightly hooks. One especially attractive style is in a heavy white rayon satin with black scattered stars; the valance is plain white with a striking border of black—perfect choice for the color scheme under consideration. This particular curtain is woven in special width so that there is no seam to interrupt the unusual design.

Multicolored Prints.

If you prefer some color to complete black and white, the shower curtain is a fitting way of introducing it. There are multicolored prints in rayon taffeta—one, for example, in a water lily and cattail pattern, another in an Irish design, as well as one-color but two-toned fabrics, and a wide variety of at least 20 different plain, solid colors. All these can be had with a valance.

For the window, a treatment of unusual style and practical value is a new type of washable shade which gives the effect of a Venetian blind, but actually is a fabric impregnated with pyroxylin and made in accordion pleats. It can be lowered from top or raised from the bottom, permitting ventilation where desired. Glass curtains are omitted. Side curtains should be of a modern fabric, either matching or contrasting with the shower curtain.

Slit Skirts Find Favor in Show

They Appear in Most Styles at Display Presented by Lansburgh's.

IF THERE was any doubt in anyone's mind about the importance of slit skirts this season, the matter should have been settled completely by the fashion shows given yesterday by Lansburgh & Bro.

Slits appeared in everything from one-piece street frocks to sequin gowns. Sometimes the skirts had one, sometimes they had as many as four. There were slits in front, slits in back and slits at the sides. They ranged in length from 3 to 12 inches.

Hundreds of women packed the store's second floor for the two style shows. Loudspeakers enabled those jammed far back in the big room to hear descriptions of the 60-odd costumes shown. An orchestra from the Shoreham Hotel played. Most of the models were recruited from Lansburgh employes.

Several of the costumes will be exhibited tomorrow night at the Shoreham.

Potato Has Important Place in the Diet; Moderate Servings Won't Produce Overweight

A large, fluffy, stuffed baked potato topped with melted cheese and surrounded by two or three green vegetables, plus a soup and dessert makes an interesting meal.

Storage Place Should Be Cool, Dry and Well Ventilated.

By Dorothea Duncan.

POTATOES, long ago, replaced bread as the staff of life in Ireland, and today in England, little wagons selling hot baked potatoes are as popular as our popcorn pushcarts.

The rage for slim figures in this country in the last few years has dampened the popularity of the potato, because it was considered too fattening. However, the potato has a place in the diet because it is a valuable source of energy, mineral salts, nitrogen and protein, and if eaten in moderate servings will not produce overweight.

The potato is one of the few vegetables that may be purchased in quantity to an advantage, if a proper storage place is available. The cellar is most frequently the storage place for vegetables in the home. If the lighted furnace makes the cellar too warm, an unheated attic is often used instead. When you are planning to store your supply of potatoes remember the storage place must be cool, well ventilated and dry. Keep the temperature of the storage room a little above 40 degrees Fahrenheit, as 40 degrees or below will cause the potato starch to turn to sugar, and the potatoes then are not desirable for boiling.

If your storage place is adequate, one bushel of potatoes is about the right quantity to buy for a medium size family.

A well balanced diet should include potatoes once a day unless something supplying the same nutritive value is substituted. Include these two favorite potato dishes in your week-end menus.

Hot cocoa

The spiced prunes mentioned in the Saturday breakfast menu are a favorite with children and are as easily prepared as stewed prunes. Wash and soak prunes. Cook prunes in water in which they have been soaked, to which one teaspoon each of whole cloves and ground cinnamon and two or three slices of lemon have been added. Cook until tender and add sugar to taste.

The hot vegetable plate for Saturday dinner will please everyone if made tempting with a large stuffed baked potato garnished with melted cheese, and surrounded with baby lima beans, buttered spinach and glazed carrots.

Baked Stuffed Potatoes.

Select smooth, medium sized potatoes, scrub, remove eyes and any blemishes, place in a baking pan or on the rack in a very hot oven (450-500 degrees Fahrenheit) and bake until tender (30-60 minutes). Be sure to have the oven hot before the potatoes are put in. To test the potatoes, do not pierce them with a fork, but squeeze them with the hand wrapped in a towel.

Cut top from each potato and scoop out inside. Mash inside thoroughly—add butter, salt and warm milk and pile lightly inside potato shells. Sprinkle grated cheese on top of each potato and return to oven until cheese has melted. Serve at once.

Potatoes Persillade is a delicious and decorative dish, and takes very little preparation. Peel potatoes and cut in pieces the size of a small egg or cut in balls with a vegetable cutter. Boil until tender. Add salt just before cooking is completed. Drain, place in a saucepan with enough butter to coat all the potatoes, add the juice of one-half lemon and sprinkle with one-half cup minced parsley. The potatoes should be well coated with parsley when served.

What Today Means

"Scorpio."

IF NOVEMBER 2 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:45 to 11:45 a. m., and 1:45 to 3:45 p. m. and from 7:45 to 9:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:45 to 8:45 a. m., from 3:45 to 5:45 p. m. and from 10:45 p. m. until midnight.

Unless you make use of your imagination on this date, so as to visualize the possibilities of a proposition that is very likely to be offered to you, an advantageous opportunity may be dismissed without your realizing what you are passing up. Be careful not to allow yourself to become absent minded on this November 2 for you might make a mistake if you are not mentally alert.

There will be a large amount of money in circulation and some of it will probably pass into your possession. This should be an excellent day to plan social activities and any form of entertainment, as there is very little likelihood of obstacles cropping up to interfere with your ideas. Married and engaged couples, as well as those seeking a maiden fair or an eligible young man, may avoid creating a sense of irritability if they are cautious regarding their language, or the way they express themselves.

If a woman and November 2 is your natal day, some desire you have had for a long time may be gratified before the day has passed. A friendly communication that you will probably receive should cause you to feel highly elated. You might not realize it but there is a possibility that you lean strongly toward the modernistic style in art, literature and dress, so you will be thoroughly contented only in a position that brings you in contact with people who are progressive and rather advanced in their thinking.

Some business closely connected with art, literary productions, or catering to an exclusive clientele's fastidiousness in wearing apparel should be the place for you. Your speaking voice can also be turned into a decided asset.

The child born on November 2, when it reaches its teens, may be firmly convinced that the stage will suffer a great loss, if it is not permitted to grace it. There will probably be very little doubt in the minds of the other members of the household as to its oratorical powers. Physically and mentally alert this youngster should have the capacity to succeed.

If a man and November 2 is your birthday, you have all the essential qualifications needed to be a successful clergyman, actor, lawyer, lecturer, or a persuasive salesman.

BANANA GINGERBREAD CUP CAKE

Cream thoroughly 3 tablespoons shortening and ½ cup sugar. Add 1 beaten egg and ½ cup molasses. Sift together 1¾ cups sifted flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon ginger, ½ teaspoon cinnamon. Add to molasses mixture. When thoroughly mixed, add ½ cup boiling water. Bake in moderate oven (375°F.) 20 to 25 minutes in greased individual cup cake tins, or large loaf tin. Cool, cut into two layers. Slice 2 or 3 ripe bananas, and place banana slices and whipped cream or ice cream between and on top of layers. Serves six to eight.

NOTE: Ready-mixed gingerbread now on the market may be used in place of this recipe.

BLACKIE BEAR BY D. SAM COX

Even in Jail Billie Didn't Worry.

By D. Sam Cox.

None of the Creek folks could ever tell just how they would get into trouble or get out of it; but they never worried about it either way. They were always going somewhere and doing something, and Blackie had told them, a long time ago, that unless you just sat around and did nothing but eat toad frogs and bugs and berries, you would certainly get into trouble; and that when you get into trouble, unless you and your friends just sat around and didn't try, you would always get out of trouble, so when Billie got caught and put in a pen to fatten for somebody's dinner, he didn't worry. He didn't know when or how he would get out of jail, but he was perfectly certain that he would get out.

Many a time you have seen people lose something, and they looked in almost every place around the house except the right one, and finally gave it up as gone for good. Then after a while they would think of some other place that it might possibly be, though they really didn't expect to find it there, but there it was.

For a long time nearly all the creek folks had been going to Blackie's house nearly every day, and certainly Billie Possum never did miss a day. If he didn't come before supper time, he was always sure to come before bedtime, and so on the next day after Mr. Man caught him Blackie kept looking for him all day. Then late in the afternoon he said; "The way Billie stays away from here, he must have found a mighty lot of something good to eat and can't bring it away. He didn't come over last night, and I haven't seen a sign of him today, and here it is away in the night. Has anybody seen him today?" Nobody had.

Dr. Coon knocked the ashes out of his pipe and said: "I am afraid he is sick, and I think I will go over and see about him. He never stays away from us like this."

Dr. Coon went to his house and got his medicine chest, and went on over to Billie Possum's. It was mighty quiet about Billie's place, and not a sign of life. Dr. Coon called Billie two or three times, but he didn't get any answer. Then he climbed up to his door. The door was open and Dr. Coon looked in, but Billie wasn't there, and his bed was right cold, so the Dr. knew that Billie had not been sleeping there that day.

"Well, I'll just wait till morning," said Dr. Coon, "and I'll come over again, and if he is not here I will tell Blackie and we will hunt for him."

Dr. Coon didn't sleep very well that night. He kept waking up with dreams that Billie was in jail, or a dog was biting him, or some other sort of bad thing was happening. So before the sun was up, Dr. Coon was back at Billie's house, but there was no Billie!

Satin Strikes The Prevailing Note in Shops

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THIS IS a season of satin. Satin gowns, satin slippers, satin-trimmed hats, coy satin bows and satin lingerie have taken the fancy of shoppers all over the city.

For the benefit of these satin disciples a local store is offering one of the best satin buys in years. In its lingerie department are two large tables laden with satin step-ins, brassieres, slips and chemises in soft pink shades, tearose and blue. Some are trimmed in dusky Alencon lace, others with plain embroidery.

One of the best sellers is a step-in set that includes not only the panties but the brassiere to match. There are slips with straight or V-necks with adjustable straps. These are ideal for those who want a slip that can be made long enough for semiformal afternoon frocks or short enough for sports dresses.

All of this satin splendor is especially priced at $1.59.

Gold Cocktail Bags.

The trail of gold which has wound its glittering way across the fashion stage this fall leads to some cocktail bags incrusted with gleaming gold sequins. Hundreds of them are strewn across the silky purses in intricate design.

The bags are light and fragile looking but are built on sturdy, nonbendable frames. The silk itself is of a heavy, durable quality. Over this the sequins are fastened securely with invisible threads.

This Soap Lathers Freely.

A boon to Washington women is a soap that will lather freely in the vexatiously hard water here. An F street shop has a soap that is guaranteed to do this. It comes in lovely pastel colors, white, blue, pink, yellow and green, and in jasmine, bouquet, rose, violet, verbena and lilac fragrances.

Twelve cakes of this soap sell for 69 cents. It is especially compounded from a cold cream which is fine for chapped skins.

Mellow Door Chimes.

The caller who presses the electric button will be surprised to hear, instead of a raucous peal, soft, mellow music from somewhere within.

Those who say, "This isn't practical!" should stop by a local store and listen in. In their household departments the chimes are on display. You press the button and instantaneously there's music as melodious as you could wish, and certainly loud enough to be very practical.

There are two types of such chimes. One is called the single, as it repeats the same sound. The other is double with both high and low tones.

This is an innovation which should be as welcome to the salesmen who push doorbells all day as it is to the housewives who have to listen to them.

Dry Shampoo a Boon.

There is nothing like a dry shampoo to meet the emergency needs of business women, school girls and housewives. When that last minute engagement has to be met and your hair is oily, straggly and impossible to arrange, it's a marvelous relief to give your hair a quick dry cleaning and have it spick and span in a few minutes.

The "dry shampoo" is really a clear liquid. You comb and brush this through your hair just as the directions say. Oil and dirt alike are easily removed, and your wave is in no way affected.

Hollywood bulletins say that stars who must keep their hair soft and shiny from one reel to the next frequently take a few minutes out for a quick dry shampoo.

Tie and Kerchief Sale.

Husbands who have so little time to shop should urge their wives to take advantage of the tie and kerchief sale in a downtown store.

Modernistic Boxes Useful.

A modernistic box with mirror strips all around, and mirrors across the top, contains a nail polish, remover and cuticle liquid, orange stick, file and a small roll of cotton. It's extremely attractive-looking to use as a cigarette box once its contents are gone.

Inexpensive Overnight Cases.

Overnight cases for $9.95 are exact duplicates of some selling for five or six times as much. They are linen or tweed, covered and leather-bound. Stripes of red, yellow and black give them a sporty touch.

One of their chief selling points is their lightness. Those who travel frequently by plane find them ideal.

Smart Office Frock Is Suitable for Dinner

Pattern No. 720.

HERE IS A smart frock in which one can work all day in the office and yet one which is pretty and attractive enough for dinner and the theater afterwards. Every girl who goes to business knows the value, almost the necessity, of such a dress.

Although made all in one color, the square collar with the pleated ruffle trims the dress effectively. The girdle is soft and not too long; and the just-below-the elbow sleeves are new. The slightly flared skirt hangs most gracefully. Canton crepe would be a good fabric.

The pattern is cut in sizes 14 to 20; 32 to 38. Size 18 (36) requires 4⅞ yards of 39-inch fabric.

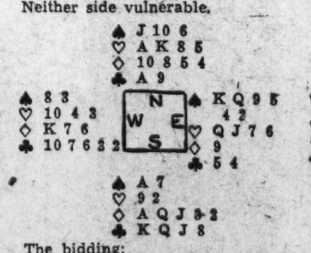
Playing Percentages.

The technique of advanced Dummy play is founded on two factors. One is the correct use of psychology, and the other a sound knowledge of percentages.

By playing the mathematical odds, the Declarer is able to eliminate a big percentage of what the mediocre player will call pure guesses. If, for instance, there is a choice between a finesse which has a 50 per cent chance of winning and another play which has a 55 or 60 per cent chance of winning, the latter play of course should be adopted.

When the hand below was played a kibitzer called the Declarer very lucky. There is no doubt but that this onlooker was entirely wrong, as kibitzers usually are. South merely played the percentages.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♡	1♠	3◇	Pass
4◇	Pass	4♠	Pass
4NT	Pass	5NT	Pass
6◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

Although South knew that all the Aces were located, he was almost certain that North could not have both the heart King and the diamond King, and accordingly did not contract for the Grand Slam.

In response to his partner's bid, the West player opened a spade, and the Declarer's Ace was forced out. At this point South could have entered the Dummy and taken the diamond finesse, and if the finesse worked the hand could have been spread for seven-odd. This line of play has, as far as the Declarer could tell, an absolutely even chance of success, and furthermore, if it worked, would give the Declarer an overtrick. South, of course, immediately eliminated the overtrick possibility from any consideration whatsoever, and looked about for another line of play which would offer a better chance than the simple finesse.

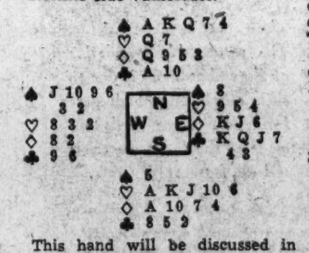
He laid down the Ace of diamonds and then abandoned the suit, shifting to clubs. On the third round of clubs, on which a spade was discarded from Dummy, East showed out and furthermore failed to trump. South now, in perfect safety, laid down his fourth good club, discarding Dummy's last spade. The spade loser was trumped in Dummy, and a diamond trick conceded to the adversaries. Then South spread his hand for six-odd.

South decided upon this line of play not because he knew that the cards were divided the way they actually were, but because the play would work with definitely more than one-half of the possible divisions of the outstanding cards. South's play would, of course, work if he caught the blank King of diamonds in the West hand. It would also work in several contingencies with a 4-3 or even 5-2 club division. South's play would lose only in those instances where the diamond King did not drop and where East with three or less clubs also held originally more than one small diamond. This lay of the cards, of course, was quite possible, but would definitely occur less than one-half of the time. On the other hand, the finesse would be right only half of the time.

The hand was played in a team-of-four match, and no swing resulted, as at both tables the Declarer chose the play outlined above.

Tomorrow's Hand.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutler.

Apoplexy or Stroke.

IN elderly persons, especially those in the sixth decade of life or beyond, the arteries of the body, particularly of the brain, may be unnaturally hard or brittle. Should a branch of one of these arteries rupture, allowing blood to escape into the brain, the individual usually loses consciousness and there is more or less sudden paralysis of one-half the body or of some definitely limited area. This is known as apoplexy.

Another condition which has much the same effect is due to a gradual narrowing and final blocking of a blood vessel, thus depriving an area of the brain of its normal blood supply. This is called thrombosis.

Still another brain accident is characterized by the plugging of a blood vessel in the brain, the plug probably originating in the heart and traveling up some main artery until it reaches a vessel too small to permit its further passage. Beyond the point where the plug lodges the brain is deprived of circulation. This is known as embolism.

The paralysis resulting from thrombosis may come on without loss of consciousness, whereas, in the case of a plug in a blood vessel of the brain, the symptoms may occur as suddenly as in hemorrhage.

In the event of one of these cerebral, or brain accidents, the question arises, "What will be the outcome?" It has been shown that cases of apoplexy in which unconsciousness comes on suddenly have a more favorable outlook for recovery than those that are at first drowsy with gradually deepening unconsciousness.

Hemorrhage into the brain, if it is not large in amount, usually absorbs and there may be but few signs of paralysis remaining after a few weeks. Physicians have observed this phenomenon times without number. But it should be recalled that the condition which gave rise to the original hemorrhage may still exist and that a second hemorrhage my be anticipated if the cause is not relieved.

There is a popular notion that an individual may not have more than three strokes or that a third stroke will be fatal. This is utterly fallacious, for, while one person may succumb to an initial hemorrhage, others survive a dozen or more. The fatal or nonfatal character of the hemorrhage depends upon the area of blood clot, the resulting pressure, and the rate of absorption.

There are but few medical accidents so serious in character that have as high a percentage of recovery. If there is a return to consciousness or if the stupor does not deepen, recovery, at least to some degree, nearly always occurs.

Jennifer Hale

By Rob Eden

Sought in Los Angeles for the murder of David Corey, Jennifer Hale thinks she has escaped detection living in Seattle under the name of Jennifer Hale, but before long she is discovered and arrested. Meanwhile, wealthy Kent Severn has fallen in love with her and, believing her innocent, decides to hire Neil Haller, brilliant criminal lawyer, to defend her. For this determination, his father disinherits him.

NEIL HALLER pressed more tobacco in his briar pipe. He was frowning slightly, and to all intents he had no other thought than the filling of his pipe, as carefully, as methodically as he could.

Kent moved uneasily in his chair as he watched the older man. Haller wasn't what he expected a famous lawyer to be—dynamic, packed with nervous energy, vital. With his shock of prematurely white hair which might have proclaimed him 65, his peculiarly young face which was as fresh as that of a man in his late twenties, his lazy, large blue eyes, which if they were read correctly gave his age as 42, Haller seemed to have no nervous energy in his makeup. Certainly no tremendous necessary vitality, Kent thought.

This was the man with whom he was going to entrust the life of Jennifer Hale. Her future, and his future, too, for they were bound up together. This was the man who was going to plead for Jennifer in court—that is if Mr. Haller decided to take the case. He hadn't said yes or no yet.

In Love With Her.

The pipe was finally filled to Haller's satisfaction, and he lighted it sucking in on it slowly. Kent lit his sixth cigarette. The other five butts were ground to bits in the ash tray on the desk.

"A good morning for golf," the lawyer murmured as he glanced out the window.

"Mr. Haller, I——" Kent began, exasperated.

"Don't get impatient, Severn. I know you're anxious, but I must take my own time. You're in love with Jennifer Hale?"

"I told you that."

"Will you take the case or won't you, Haller? Time is so valuable and Miss Hale is unrepresented."

Haller parried again. "Do you know all the circumstances, Severn—I mean the circumstances of Corey's murder?"

"I know what I've read in the papers. I haven't had a chance to have a talk with Miss Hale yet—a long talk."

"Well, I'm going to review the case the State of California will present for you so you'll see exactly what you have to combat." Haller leaned back, the thumb of his right hand locked in his vest, the thumb of his left hand caressing his pipe.

The Case Reviewed.

"Jennifer Hale and David Corey met some four months ago, Severn. They were introduced by a mutual friend of Corey's—Parker Ives, who maintains an office next to the office where Jennifer worked. Corey, whom you, of course, didn't know, was rather a charming fellow. I met him casually several times, and I liked him although I never make snap judgments on people. He was young, enthusiastic, generous. If he had lived he would have been a power in the city, a financial power, because he was a smart business man. In these bad times since 1929, he made money in his profession of a real estate dealer. Not nearly as much as he had made before the market crash, but more than his colleagues made.

"He was popular everywhere, in his clubs, at his office, with his clients, not the young-man-about-town popularity, but something deeper than that, for people realized he was a leader. There is no doubt that he was extremely interested in Jennifer Hale—perhaps in love with her, because he took her out as much as he could. Introduced her to his friends—even to his sister. Jennifer Hale, however, did not take him home with her, did not introduce him to her aunt. This I've gathered from statements Cornelia Hale made after the murder. She said she has never heard her niece speak of Corey.

Aunt Is Important.

"More of this Aunt Cornelia later. She is important to the prosecution.

"August 25, which is Jennifer Hale's birthday, Corey presented her with an imported watch. He even had the watch initialed for her. She accepted it, and was seen wearing it. She even told Parker Ives that Corey had given it to her, although her Aunt Cornelia said, also after the murder, that she had never seen Jennifer wearing the watch, indeed knew nothing about it.

"Now we have come to September 1, which was on a Friday. Jennifer Hale met Corey at Hugo's restaurant at 7 o'clock to have dinner with him. They were there from 7 to 8, and the waiter who served them, who will also be one of the witnesses against Jennifer, will testify that while they were eating they were quarreling, that he heard the name 'Ben' mentioned, also the name 'Sherman.'

"Ben Sherman, a friend of Corey's, also had become a friend of Jennifer Hale's. In fact the evening of August 13 she had been out with Ben Sherman, according to his statement to the police. Sherman also said in his statement that Corey was angry with him for taking Miss Hale out—but we'll get to that later.

A Cablegram.

"So at Hugo's they were quarreling—not badly, but noticeably enough to attract the attention of their waiter. At 8 they left, and at 8:30 they entered the lobby of Moore House, where Corey had kept an apartment for five years. John Mantle, the night manager, saw them come in. Ted Bollinger, the elevator boy, took them up to the fifth floor, where Corey's apartment was. He knew Miss Hale, because she had been there before. He will testify in court that the two didn't speak as they went up—that he thought they were angry. So much for that. They got off at the fifth floor at about 8:36, and turned the corner of the corridor.

"At two minutes of 9, Mantle, downstairs, received a cablegram for Corey. He signed for it, gave it to Bollinger, the elevator boy, to take up stairs to Corey. Bollinger says he got up with it about 9, and knocked on Corey's door.

"Before he knocked, however, he heard the sound of angry voices in the apartment, and he recognized them—Jennifer Hale and Corey. Corey came to the door and opened it. Bollinger will say on the stand for the state that Corey's face was flushed, but he will also say something much more damaging to Jennifer Hale. For he looked into the room in the second the door was open, and he saw on Corey's desk a revolver, and the girl, Jennifer, sitting in a chair not two feet from the gun.

Service Entrance Used.

"That was at 9 o'clock, remember. Bollinger left immediately, wondering to himself what the two were quarreling about. At 9:15 George Grelling, one of the colored night porters, was walking to the service entrance, and saw a girl coming out of the building—by the service entrance. She was running, and he says she didn't see him, because he stepped aside to let her pass on the walk, which was narrow, but he saw her, and he recognized her in the dim light of the doorway. Recognized her face, because he didn't know her name.

"Several nights before at a party in Corey's apartment, he had been called to fix a window that wouldn't open. She was there. He also had opened the door of Corey's car several times and had helped her out. So he recognized her. He told the police, and if he can get away with it, he will tell the same story in court, that he wondered why she was coming out of the service entrance, and why she was hurrying so. Guests at the Moore House used the luxurious elevators.

Further Evidence.

"So we're that far. Jennifer Hale goes home. A neighbor next door to her aunt's house sees her go in the house at 10 o'clock. At 11 o'clock Parker Ives and Ben Sherman, who live together, decide to go up to Corey's and pay him a visit. Sherman isn't very anxious to go, but he feels he owes his friend an apology, because he has heard that Corey is angry at him for stepping out with Jennifer Hale. Sherman keeps insisting to Ives that he didn't realize Corey would be so upset about such a thing. They reach Moore House about 11, as I said. John Mantle sees them go up to the elevator. Ted Bollinger takes them up in the elevator.

WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1934

HOLC Lends $27,000,000 In Virginia

Release of 14 Employes Reduces Force in State to 275.

Payment of Million in Local Taxes on Loans Announced.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 1 (AP)—John J. Wicker, jr., Virginia manager for the Home Owners Loan Corporation, today said his organization has lent more than $27,000,000 in Virginia and under present conditions seems to be approximately two-thirds of the way to the potential HOLC outlay in the State.

Fourteen regular employes were released from the organization's service today, reducing the regularly employed staff in the State office and all of its branches to approximately 275, as compared to the peak of 325 on September 1.

Senator Wicker said the personnel has been made flexible, and frequently is adjusted to the amount of work to be done. He said he expected the number of employes would decline until the first of the year, "but the indications are that it will increase after January 1, when more mortgages will fall due."

Loans Average $3,300.

The Virginia organization has made 8,283 loans, averaging $3,300, each. It now has before it 5,060 applications which upon the initial investigations have qualified for loans. A total of 18,685 applications have been made, and approximately 5,000 turned down.

Senator Wicker said loans made by the corporation have resulted in the payment of more than $1,000,000 in local taxes, with the bulk of it going to the cities. This figure, he said, would reach $1,250,000 by the first of the year. More than $500,000 derived from Home Owners Loan Corporation loans have been spent in repairs, he said.

No Indication of Changes.

The Virginia manager said he had received no indication of any changes in the Home Owners Loan Corporation's future, in the light of President Roosevelt's recent address before the American Bankers Association, when the said the Government was going to get out of business.

"Under our regulations," Manager Wicker said, "no home owner is eligible for an HOLC loan who can save his home by refinancing his debt for a reasonable period through ordinary banking or commercial agencies upon reasonable terms which he can meet under reasonable conditions.

"If the Virginia organization were not to make another loan it seems to me that to carry to its conclusion the work we have done already would require the employment of between 50 and 100 persons from 15 to 18 years."

Game Season Open In Franklin County

Licenses Have Been Issued to 5,000 Hunters.

Waynesboro, Pa., Nov. 1 (Spl.). With over 5,000 hunters' licenses already issued, fully half that number took to the fields in Franklin County today in quest of small game as the 1934 season was opened.

John B. Saum, 89, of Guilford Township, a Civil War veteran, is the oldest county man to take out a hunting license.

In Franklin County, W. W. Britton, game protector, reports a wealth of rabbits, wild turkey, grouse, quail, pheasants and squirrels. The largest kill of game for many years is anticipated.

Rabbits may be hunted in Pennsylvania each day in November except Sundays, while a feature of the 1934 game regulations is the "staggered" season for small game birds.

J. E. Alfriend Dies In Petersburg Office

Petersburg, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.). John E. Alfriend, 57, of Colonial Heights, died suddenly yesterday in the Atlantic Coast Line Railway offices in Petersburg, where he was employed as an accountant. Coroner E. L. McGill blamed a heart attack.

Mr. Alfriend had been employed by the railroad for about 20 years. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Charlotte Clements Alfriend; one son, John E. Alfriend, jr., two sisters, Misses Ella and Annie Alfriend, and three brothers, Gordon, Walter and James A. Alfriend, all of Petersburg.

Landscaping of Tunnel In Virginia Planned

Front Royal, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—Plans for landscaping the tunnel at the northern end of Skyline drive, in the Shenandoah National Park, are being worked out by Federal landscape architects, it was reported today at the office of the State Commission on Conservation and Development.

The plans include a scheme of terracing the mountain slope in such a manner as to destroy all effects of artificiality, the tunnel itself to appear as a natural formation. New forest growth will be planted to provide native flora the year around. The tunnel is more than 600 feet long by 30 feet wide, and approximately 20 feet high.

Waynesboro Stages Mummers' Parade

Waynesboro, Pa., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—King Mirth reigned in Waynesboro tonight when the annual Mummers' parade was staged by the Waynesboro Advertising Club.

Cooperating with the local committee was the Alsatia Club of Hagerstown which held its celebration last night.

The two parades were practically identical in size and color, since entrants were from the two cities. In Hagerstown last night there were hundreds from Waynesboro participating, just as there were large numbers of Marylanders in the Waynesboro celebration.

It was estimated early tonight that 3,500 people were ready to march. One of the largest organizations entered was the Waynesboro Lodge, No. 219, I. O. O. F., which with its three branches, Canton, Rebekahs and Widows Friend Encampment, was augmented by members from Mercersburg, Hagerstown and Chambersburg.

"Save-a-Life" Drive Opened

1,300 Motor Car Inspection Stations Begin Work in Maryland.

Baltimore, Nov. 1 (AP).—Maryland's sixth annual "save-a-life" campaign began today as 1,300 motor vehicle inspection stations throughout the State opened for operation.

The campaign, which will close November 30, will be "only as successful as the weakest inspector," officials at the office of the commissioner of motor vehicles said in inaugurating the drive.

"The success of the campaign ultimately depends entirely on the inspectors of the machines, and this year we have asked for particularly rigid and thorough examination of all cars," officials of the commission declared.

An official examination of every automobile in Maryland once each year is required under State law. Any vehicle unmarked with an official inspection card at the conclusion of the campaign will be denied registration next year.

Inspection blanks and windshield stickers, which denote successful passage of the examination, have been distributed by the State police and other attaches of the commission's office.

Tuberculosis Cases Reported.

King George Courthouse, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—Forey-eight positive cases of tuberculosis were discovered at a tuberculosis clinic held here last week by King George County health officers. Cases examined totaled 116. Twenty-nine adults and 87 children were treated.

News Briefs of Maryland

(Associated Press.)

Hagerstown—Pickpockets did a thriving trade at the Mummers' parade here. More than $200 was reported stolen. L. F. Favorite, of Woodpoint, was the heaviest loser, reporting that his purse, containing $95, had been stolen.

Fredericks—Approximately 2,570 county hunting licenses have been issued from the clerk's office here as the opening of the game season nears. Officials say no unusual increase is expected in the number of licenses.

Cumberland—having lived with his wife but four days, Carl E. Natolly, of Mount Savage, has filed suit for divorce in Circuit Court here. Natolly, a minor, is suing through his father. He charged his wife with infidelity "at divers places" in Allegany County. They were married August 6 and separated August 10.

Frostburg—The Frostburg Rotary Club has accepted an invitation from Lieut. M. G. Williams, commanding officer of the New Germany CCC camp, to hold one of its weekly meetings in the camp mess hall. The date of the meeting has been tentatively set for the middle of November.

1,000 Lumbermen Return to W. Va. Jobs

Richwood, W. Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.). Nearly 1,000 employes of the Cherry River Boom and Lumber Co., on strike the last three months, returned to work yesterday.

The workmen agreed to accept wage raises of 3.5 cents an hour, effective December 1. The basic wage previous to the strike was 28.5 cents an hour. The strikers demanded 50 cents. Under code provisions the men are assured at least 40 hours each week until January 1.

The Rev. Yow Begins Pastorate in Danville

Danville, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—The Rev. Ralph Yow arrived here tonight from Richmond to begin his pastorate at Moseley Memorial Methodist Church, succeeding the Rev. C. A. Tucker, who has been appointed secretary of the board of Christian education of the Virginia Methodist Conference.

Extension Course To Be Conducted

College at Chestertown Will Offer Credits.

Chestertown, Md., Nov. 1 (AP).—High school graduates not now in college will be given opportunity to obtain college credits through an extension program to be conducted by Washington College and county directors of emergency educational programs on the Eastern Shore.

The college advisory committee will pass on qualifications of the various county teachers, will supervise selection of texts and outline methods of teaching. Unemployed teachers will be used as instructors.

Classes will be started November 7, President Gilbert W. Mead of Washington College announced, and at least ten persons will be necessary to start a class. Included among courses to be offered are English, history, mathematics, home nursing, sewing, typewriting, business English, painting, sketching, design and color arrangement, dramatics, nature study and floriculture.

7 Make Escape As Fishing Boat Runs Aground

Craft Pounded in Storm When It Piles Up on Stone Jetty.

Ocean City, Md., Nov. 1 (AP). Caught on a stone jetty at the Sinepuxent Bay Inlet, a small fishing boat was being pounded to pieces by heavy seas today, salvage operations having been abandoned pending calmer weather. Coast guardsmen held out little hope for salvaging much of value from the wreck.

The seven men in the crew of the boat, the No. N-1093, owned by L. D. Lynch, of Ocean City, crawled to safety over rocks when the craft piled up on the jetty early today. The fact that the tide was running out enabled the crew to reach land. Coast guardsmen said. If it had been high tide, heavy seas probably would have prevented the fishermen from clinging to the rocks, much less crawling to safety on them, the guardsmen said.

Supervisors Assail State As Usurper

County Officials Organize to Fight Against 'Encroachment.'

Attack on Compensation Law Furnishes Fireworks at Session.

Lynchburg, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Centralization of government at Richmond was charged and then assailed on all sides today as county supervisors from many sections of the State met here and organized the Association of Virginia County Supervisors.

State "encroachment" in counties and the usurpation of rights and powers were decried by several speakers, while the supervisors thundered their approval of the denunciations. The board members quickly adopted a constitution and by-laws and set out on a program of placing the counties upon a "more business-like and efficient basis of operation."

J. A. Eller, of Marion, temporary chairman, was elected president, and Charles W. Crush, of Christiansburg, Commonwealth's attorney for Montgomery County, secretary. Six vice presidents were elected to represent members by Congressional districts, as follows: Fourth, J. A. Armistead, of Farmville; Fifth, George W. DeShazo, of Ridgeway; Sixth, L. W. Bell, of Roanoke; Seventh, Dr. W. M. Tunstall, of Lovingston; Eighth, C. Purcell McCue, of Greenwood; Ninth, R. T. Lecker, of Narrows.

Vice presidents for the first, second and third districts will be elected after the association receives nominations.

Robert Whitehead, of Lovingston, Commonwealth's attorney for Nelson County, furnished some unscheduled fireworks when he flayed the General Assembly for passing the "damnable" and "altogether innocuous" compensation law. Mr. Whitehead declared the statute was enacted for the purpose of "feathering the nests of those whose nests had already been feathered."

He asked the association to pass a resolution urging the repeal of the law and the substitution of a statute by the Legislature providing for the proportionate payment of Commonwealth's attorneys, treasurers and commissioners of the revenue. He also suggested a resolution calling for the repeal of a section of the "Byrd road law." Both requests were referred to the committee on resolutions, although Mr. Whitehead is not a member of the association.

Greta Garbo Signs a New Contract With Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at $300,000 Per

Secluded Star Will Vacation In California

After Rest to Start Film; Program of Ballet Russe; Amusement Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Once more the cryptic and elusive Greta Garbo has laid at rest rumors that she is about to desert the American film colony, return to her native Sweden and leave the gelatin industry practically flat.

Announcement has off the wire from Hollywood is to the effect that Miss Garbo has signed a new contract with her producing company—that would be Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which has a concrete and definite notion of which side of its bread is buttered—and will not return to Sweden, even for a vacation.

The so-called "glamorous Swede," on the contrary, stated specifically that she will take a brief respite in southern California from her professional activities and then start work on another picture.

While details of the new contract were not disclosed, it was rather more than semiofficially presumed that it called for a specified number of pictures at a continuance of the star's reputed salary of $300,000 per flicker.

At any rate, that will keep the wolf from galloping clear down the hall!

Shirley Temple, that prodigious youngster of the celluloids who crashed the heights in "Stand Up and Cheer" and "Little Miss Marker" and has been up there ever since, sang for "coffee and cakes" day before yesterday.

That is to say, the baby actress was told that if she was able to record a song number for her current picture by 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, she would be permitted to attend the Halloween party scheduled for that hour at the home of the Harold Lloyds.

The comedian's young daughters entertained a number of their friends, including Miss Temple and Jane Bannister, small daughter of Ann Harding.

The Ballet Russe.

It is Mr. Ray C. Brown, The Post's distinguished commentator upon music and its allied manifestations in the theaters and concert halls, who calls my attention to the fact that "Les Sylphides," danced to the haunting music of Chopin, will open the matinee performance of the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe in the National Theater on Sunday.

Returning for its second American tour, the organization is meeting everywhere with the acclaim its productions deserve.

Other ballets on the afternoon program will be "La Boutique Fantasque" to music of Rossini, and the picturesque Polevetzian dances from Borodin's opera of "Prince Igor."

Done by Fokine.

It is interesting to note that "Les Sylphides" nad the "Prince Igor" dances were recently executed at the Fox by the ballet assembled and directed by Michel Fokine.

A modernistic ballet, "Beach," with music by Francaix, will be presented at the evening performance. This will be followed by "Union Pacific," a ballet based on the completion of our first transcontinental railroad. The scenario was written by the American poet, Archibald MacLeish, and the music composed by Nikolai Nabokov, while the settings and costumes were designed by Albert Johnson and Irene Sharav.

Give an eye to the "Film Time Tables," elsewhere on this page or the next, before embarking on an excursion to "One Night of Love," Grace Moore's gorgeous vehicle now entering its final week at the Metropolitan. The picture is to be shown on a new schedule, covering six performances daily, except Sunday, when five will be presented. The hours of the unreelings are specified in the "Time Tables." So don't pretend you weren't warned.

Returns Home for the Yuletide

Following a year's steady activity in Hollywood, Ida Lupino, beautiful young English actress, is on her way home to London for the Christmas holidays. Miss Lupino, still in her 'teens, is stanch in her adherence to the British custom of enjoying the Yuletide in her native Britain, where it is so enthusiastically and picturesquely observed. Her most recent film was "Ready to Love." Her father is an important British theater owner.

Will Open New Season.

"Pocahontas," according to the Handbook of American Indians, is a vertical adjective meaning playful, sportive. It comes from a Chippewa word and is used in description of a person, male or female, who dislikes to work and prefers to spend his or her time in frivolous amusements. (So, how are you, Pocahontas?)

It was undoubtedly to her innate fondness for playthings, play and frolicsome amusement that was due the name given Powhatan's daughter by her father.

By reason of the alleged romance of her life, Pocahontas is one of the most famous of American women. Her father's "dearest daughter," a mere girl at the time, she is said to have saved Capt. John Smith from a cruel and ignominious death, and she is credited with enabling many other Englishmen to escape the wrath and vengeance of her tribespeople.

After Smith's departure for England in 1609, faith was not kept with the Indians, and Pocahontas was decoyed on board the ship of Capt. Argall in the Potomac, carried off to Jamestown (1612) and afterward taken to Werawocomoco, Powhatan's chief place of residence, where peace was effected and the ransom of Pocahontas agreed upon.

Met John Rolfe.

While among the Englishmen, however, she had become acquainted with John Rolfe, "an honest gentlemen, and of good behavior." These two fell in love, an event which turned out to the satisfaction of everybody, and in April, 1613, they were married, Pocahontas having been previously converted to Christianity and baptized as "the Lady Rebecca."

This alliance was of great advantage to the colonists, for Powhatan kept peace with them until his death. In 1616, she sailed with her husband and a number of Indians for England, where she was received as a "princess" and much feted. In March, 1617, while on board ship at Gravesend ready to return to America, she fell ill of smallpox and died about the twenty-second year of her life. She left behind one son—Thomas Rolfe. Thomas Rolfe died in Virginia, leaving an only daughter, from whom was descended John Randolph of Roanoke.

This is the life which the Children's Theater of New York will portray on the National Theater stage this coming Saturday morning, November 3, as the opening play of its Washington season.

Courtney Burr's new speedboat, now a familiar sight in Bermuda as the producer drones lazily at the rate of some lethargic 60 miles per hour between Hamilton and his Riidell's Bay cottage, has been appropriately christened "Sailor, Beware" by its owner. If he adds a sea-going yacht to his "fleet," Burr says it can also be appropriately named "Small Miracle," from his new play which he has just seen slip safely down the ways on Broadway. The Bermudas have provided such a convenient and restful haven from the stresses of a producer's life that Burr is reputed to have taken a five-year lease on Gray Gables, the Riddell's Bay shack he selected last spring. Not that it especially matters.

Burbank Is Busy.

Burbank is one of the busiest spots in California this month. It is there that the Warner Brothers-First National Studios are located, and there, by that token, that no less than seven pictures are currently in production, and twice that many in preparation to go into work.

Much interest centers in the three big musicals now being filmed—"Sweet Adeline," "Gold Diggers of 1935," and "Sweet Music." These three productions alone are utilizing eight of the huge sound stages with which the plant is equipped.

"Sweet Adeline" is nearing completion, with Irene Dunne in the starring role and Mervyn LeRoy at the directorial helm. This gay and charming filmization of the Oscar Hammerstein 2d—Jerome Kern operetta is expected to make screen history.

"Gold Diggers of 1935" was officially begun last week, under the direction of Busby Berkeley.

Rudy Bets His Future.

"Sweet Music" is the Rudy Vallee starring picture which the famous crooning idol believes really will put him over with the screen public. It is being directed by Alfred E. Green and the supporting cast is headed by Ann Dvorak, in her first singing and dancing role.

The other pictures in production are:

"The White Cockatoo," featuring Jean Muir, Ricardo Cortez and a strong supporting cast. It is a mystery melodrama by Mignon G. Eberhardt.

Lamentation Note.

Speaking of "Racing Luck," how did you do with your Irish Sweepstakes?

So did I!

Film Table

Screen and stage bills will be presented on the following schedules at the theaters named:

Virginia Blocks 'Contraband' Gas From D. C.

Inspectors Guard Bridges in 'Embargo' Against Low-Price Fuel.

State inspectors stood guard on highways leading into Virginia yesterday to halt the flow of low-priced gasoline from the District.

With gas selling at stations just across the line anywhere from 4 to 6 cents above District prices, hundreds of Virginia motorists have been buying motor fuel in the Capital and carting it home in cans and tanks in violation of the Virginia law.

To protect State dealers from business losses and to keep tax collections from falling below normal, inspectors were stationed at Memorial, Highway and Key Bridges, stopping all heavily loaded passenger cars and trucks and examining them for contraband gas.

The State law prohibits importation of gasoline except when carried in the fuel tank of the motor vehicle or in containers directly connected with the main supply. Gas carried in any other manner is subject to confiscation.

An official of the Virginia State motor vehicles commission was in Alexandria yesterday directing the inspection.

The action was viewed here as a phase of a campaign of long standing to force the District to raise its gas tax to the level in Maryland and Virginia.

Independent and major dealers here were selling gasoline yesterday at 10½ and 11½ cents, with no change in price in sight for today.

Burst Pipe Kills 5 in West Virginia

Cauley Bridge, W. Va., Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Five men were killed today in a surge of water after a 14-foot water pipe burst while being tested at the Hawk's Nest hydroelectric power development, under construction for the Electric-Metallurgical Co.

The dead were John W. Hall, of Montgomery, engineer in charge of construction of the huge power project in New River; S. W. Haines, 34, of Charleston; A. L. Kube, 51, of Rhoadeville, Va.; Ralph Stringer, 33, of Cleveland, and Paul Sykes, 23, of Cauley Bridge.

The bodies of Kube, Stringer and Sykes, all mechanics, were recovered immediately by rescue crews who heard the bursting of the pipe and rushed to a hewed-out portion of rock known as a "rock trench," through which the water surged.

Women Speakers Meet Monday at Denton, Md.

Denton, Md., Nov. 1 (AP.).—Contestants in the Farm Bureau women's speaking contest for the Eastern Shore section will meet here Monday in preliminary competition to the State contest, which will be held November 12 at College Park.

Eastern Shore contestants are Mrs. Vernon Hughes, of Salisbury; Mrs. W. W. Rambo, of Sudlersville; Mrs. Evelyn Harris, of Betterton; Mrs. Raymond Mueller, of Cordova, Miss Marguerite Hubbard, of Hurlock, and Mrs. Tatiana Sonderegger, of Marydel.

The subject is, "The Farm Woman and the New Deal."

Music Federation Delegates Chosen

Harrisonburg, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—The Harrisonburg State Teachers College will be represented at the annual meeting of the Federation of Music Clubs of the second Virginia district at Buena Vista tomorrow by three members of its faculty, Miss Edna Schaeffer, Miss Vera Melone and Mrs. Clara W. Cournyn, and by seven students.

Miss Julia Kilgore, Cosbuna, pianist; Miss Inez Graybeal, Christiansburg, vocal soloist, and Jean Wise, Harrisonburg, pianist, will be presented on the artist's program. Miss Frances Graybeal will be accompanist for her sister, Miss Inez Graybeal. Other delegates are Misses Josephine R. Miller, Woodstock; Mary Elizabeth Deaver, Lexington, and Eleanor Cook, Charleston, W. Va.

3,442 in Page County On U. S. Jobs or Relief

Luray, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—According to figures revealed last night 3,442 persons in Page County are looking to the Federal Government for work or are on relief rolls.

The figures were made known by Mrs. Dorothy Smith, head of FERA projects and Miss Lena Steed, in charge of local reemployment offices, at a meeting in the abandoned high school building here which was attended by county supervisors.

U.S. Rule Asked On Liquor Tax

Richmond, Va., Nov. 1 (AP.).—Attorney General A. P. Staples today requested an official ruling from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in Washington on the notice that the State must pay Federal income taxes on liquor monopoly profits.

In his letter he asserted that the proposed payment would be a levy by the Federal Government on State property, contrary to the revenue act of 1934 and to the law and Constitution.

He said he was asking the official ruling because confusion has arisen around various interpretations of the revenue act by the Department of Internal Revenue and Federal courts in various States.

"We want to know exactly how Virginia stands so we can drop the matter or prepare for a down-the-line battle," the attorney general said.

In the Oregon case, one of those on which N. B. Early, jr., local collector of internal revenue, based his notice to the State authorities, the Federal division has amended its ruling and held that Oregon profits are not subject to the Federal income tax levy.

Pierce Hall Players Open Their Season With Performance of "Quality Street"

Offer Capable Interpretation Of Barrie Hit

"QUALITY STREET." A play in four acts by Sir James M. Barrie, presented by the Pierce Hall Players. Directed by Mildred Curran; Richard W. Harr, set designer; Mary Foley Benson, artist. Edmund Evans, stage manager.

THE CAST.

Miss Fannie Willoughby ... May Jameson Bryant
Miss Willoughby ... Ada Louise Townsend
Miss Susan Throssel ... Priscilla Bogue Hixson
Miss Henrietta Turnbull ... Ruth H. Snodgrass
Miss Phoebe Throssel ... Charlotte Tilley
Patty, the maid ... Katherine Kammerer
Recruiting Sergeant ... Eldridge Monroe
Mr. Valentine Brown ... Martin R. Haven
Isabella ... Patty Kittel
Arthur ... Stuart Hackstaf
Another ... Ruth-Maye Snodgrass
Another ... Eleanor H. Snodgrass
Charlotte Parratt ... Wenona Baker
Ensign Blades ... James M. Raoul
Harriet ... Katherine Kammerer
Lieut. Spicer ... James Kelley

The only thing regrettable about last night's presentation of "Quality Street," that everlastingly welcome comedy by Sir James M. Barrie, was the shamefully small attendance. No more than 45 persons, including the ushers, exercised sufficient good judgment to visit All Souls Church and see the Pierce Hall Players open their 1934-35 season with a sound, if sometimes unsteady, production of a dependable old play.

Maybe "Quality Street," with its prim old maids, belongs to another day. Or maybe the movies are to blame, or the pinching times or inadequate advance attention. However that may be, Sir James' charming opus is to be repeated tonight and if the attendance is not at least trebled it will not be du to the indifference of this reviewer.

Story of Prim Romance.

The plot—apologizing for the use of this sinister word in connection with such a disarming work and apologizing again for recounting, if only briefly, a story which must be familiar to almost everyone—has to do with the romance of Miss Phoebe Throssel and Mr. Valentine Brown. Miss Phoebe is a frail schoolmistress and, if you please, a "garden," and Mr. Brown is a dashing, so very dashing, soldier.

Heartbroken when her "Veebee" chooses to leave Quality street and fight Napoleon, rather than stay behind and marry her, as she had hoped and expected, Miss Phoebe defeatedly turns her quaint house into a private school, abetted by Miss Susan, the maiden sister.

It is ten years before the red-haired Mr. Brown returns to find a Phoebe whose curly ringlets are hidden beneath a schoolmarm's unattractive cap. Then, quite by accident, the Grand Deception is born: Valentine's Phoebe of the ringlets is reborn in the guise of an invented niece, Miss Livvy.

That makes it seem rather complicated, which is fair enough, for there are a few complications before Mr. Valentine Brown takes the younger of the Misses Throssel in his arms.

Church Dramatic Club Will Present 3 Plays

Mario Geraci, summer stock player with the Roadside Group, and other members of the Wigs and Queues Dramatic Club of the First Baptist Church will present three one-act plays at the church tonight.

Charles B. McInnis will direct "The Octaroon" in which Geraci, Lila Hicks, Evangeline Cowden, Everett Ferris and Marcellus McInnis will take part. "The Sunshine Lady," directed by Miss Lena G. Parks who also takes a principal part, will be presented by Miss Frances Cooper, Geraci and Robert Simmons. In "A Mad Breakfast," under direction of Mrs. Dorothy Minchcole, the actors will be E. H. Hutchins, Henry W. Clark, Miss Elizabeth Clark, Ruby McInnis, Gus Thomason, Frieda Thume, Laney Sadler and Zoeth Phillips.

Maryland Weighs Means Of Returning Jack Hart

Baltimore, Nov. 1 (AP).—Maryland officials today were pondering over the problem of what will be the best way to bring Jack Hart, escape expert, back to this State to resume service of a life sentence.

State's Attorney Herbert O'Conor said the State had been offered the use of an armored railway car and two airplanes to bring Hart back from Chicago. Two or three detectives, O'Conor said, will be detailed to the job, but whether the armored car or the planes will be used remains to be determined. Illinois officials have agreed to parole Hart so that he can be brought back here. Hart escaped from the State prison here in 1929 and was jailed a year ago at Joliet, Ill., for a shooting scrape.

12 Forgeries Charged To Teacher by Jury

Baltimore, Nov. 1 (AP).—Indictments charging Miss Catherine Bauserman, 23-year-old Virginia school teacher, with 12 cases of forgery were returned today by the grand jury here. Six of the charges were new cases in addition to the six charges on which she was presented last week.

The charges were brought in connection with the passing of bad checks and the amount of checks involved in indictments returned today totaled $192.15. Bail for the young woman has been set at $500 in each case. Her home is in Pinhook, Va.

That Big Cigar and Duck Man

Practically a National institution after a few months on the air, Joe Penner, who played a vaudeville engagement in Washington immediately prior to leaving by boat for the Coast, seems destined to become a film star of the first flight when "College Rhythm," his new feature for Paramount, is shortly released. Jack Oakie, Lanny Ross, Mary Brian and numerous others appear in support of the "nut" comic who has taken his cigar and his celebrated duck into the celluloids, in this sprightly subject.

Straight From the Studios

Halloween Influence Overtakes Hollywood Stars; Kay Francis Denies New Marriage Rumors; Intimate Chat of Film Colony.

By Speed Kendall.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 1.—Is Hollywood really a haunted town or do the stars believe their own mystery stories?

MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN.

About the only place generally believed haunted is Rudolph Valentino's old home, Falcon Lair. There are folks who claim they have actually seen spirits floating about it.

And now, Carl Brisson, former matinee idol of England, is in a hurry to move from his Beverly Hills home into an apartment hotel. Spooks are responsible.

Carl hasn't seen the ghost himself, but his son and manager, Fred Peterson, claims two visits from an apparition which awakened him from a sound sleep to find "the thing" standing beside his bed. On both occasions, pursued, the ghost disappeared through the door, he claims.

Brisson stayed up several nights to see for himself, but nothing happened. He is getting ready to start a new picture, "All the King's Horses," however, and decided not to take any chances on a ghostly home life.

Anent Kay Francis.

With all this talk about Kay Francis and Maurice Chevalier, the name of Harvey La Dew, New York sportsman and hunter, bobbed up yesterday. Upon her return from Europe recently, she and La Dew were constantly together in New York. He is a nephew of E. Berry Wall, Beau Brummel of the gay nineties. Miss Francis sticks to her story that she is interested in nothing but her career at the moment.

Hepburn As "Props."

There's no question that Katharine Hepburn has an eagle eye. She walked on the "Little Minister" set. It was a library, the study of John Beal, who plays the film minister. Miss Hepburn started scanning the books lining the shelves and gasped. Many were editions which no minister would ever choose for his library. They were quickly replaced.

Pat for Rudy At Rally.

Coeds at the University of Southern California will not get a glimpse of Rudy Vallee in person, but Pat O'Brien was on hand yesterday to aid in the rally for the Stanford struggle. Vallee was all set to take his band to the rally, but was prevented by a large set on which 200 actors had already been called for work on "Sweet Music."

Once a football hero himself and a close follower of the game, O'Brien stepped forward to give a pep talk. O'Brien played quarter back for Marquette and once ran 65 yards for a touchdown against Notre Dame.

Odd and Interesting People and Events.

Allan Hale's family is upset. Ringo, their police dog, won't eat or sleep, wandering aimlessly about the house. His pal, a stray maltese kitten, adopted a month ago, has disappeared. . . . Commences to look as though Phillips Holmes is planning a long sojourn in England. He cabled his mother to ship his car over yesterday.

Fay Wray has autographed almost everything, but she got a shock yesterday when a couple stepped up on location at Torrance, Calif., and asked her to autograph their marriage license. . . . Frances Drake hysterically denied any marriage idea with Dick Blumenthal, film executive, but they're still going placet.

Douglas Fairbanks, Harold Lloyd and Howard Hawks, the director, in a serious conversation at the Beverly Derby . . . LeRoy Prinz, Jose Fernandez and Carola did all the entertaining at the Mont-Air Club . . . Gertrude Michael dining with Raul Roulien at Sardi's. Robert Fairbanks, there too, with his family . . . Director Norman Taurog entertained a party of 40 at Levy's Tavern.

Over at the Hollywood Derby, Francis Lederer seemed very interested in a chat with Jean Muir. Jerry Asher was with them . . . Elissa Landi remodeling her home near Santa Monica . . . Claudette Colbert says she is serious about going to Honolulu very shortly . . . Katherine DeMille and Frances Drake at the Paramount commissary with Alessandro Martinez, Mexican consul.

Youth Injured When Autoist Strikes Horse

Hurled from his horse when it was struck by an automobile at Riverside Parkway and F street, northwest, Charles L. Dugan, jr., 14-year-old son of Dr. Charles L. Dugan, of the 3000 block of Quincy street northwest, was cut and bruised yesterday.

He was taken to Georgetown Hospital. A Third Precinct policeman killed the horse when it was discovered the animal was hopelessly injured. James H. Carter, of the 5300 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest, said by police to be the driver of the car, was charged with reckless driving.

Blind Man Is Run Down.

As he groped his way from the curb in front of his home in the 1100 block of Seventeenth street northwest, James David, 51, totally blind, was struck by an automobile. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where physicians said he had cuts and bruises and a possible fracture of his left leg. The driver was not held.

James F. Duhamel, 76, of 4105 Eighteenth street northwest, veteran patent attorney and member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, who suffered cerebral concussion when he was struck by an automobile in Halloween traffic at Sixteenth and Kennedy streets northwest Wednesday night, was reported recovering at Walter Reed Hospital yesterday.

Hit-Run Suspect Seized.

After he had driven away from the scene of an accident at N and One-Half street southwest, according to police, Charlie Wilson, of the Army War College, was turned over to military authorities yesterday.

Wilson, police said, drove an automobile that struck Helen Greenwood, 9, colored, of the 1200 block of First street southeast. She was treated at Gallinger Hospital for a fracture of the right leg.

After the crash several cab drivers gave chase to Wilson and captured him as he pulled in at the War College.

Lyall Steger, 6, of the 1400 block of Girard street northwest, was struck by an automobile as he attempted to cross the street at Sixteenth and Fuller streets northwest. He was taken to Garfield Hospital, where physicians said he was suffering from cuts, bruises and possible internal injuries. The driver was not held.

Church Plans Annual Dinner.

Leonardtown, Md., Nov. 1 (Spl.). In keeping with a custom dating back 50 years, All Faith Parish of Mechanicsville will hold its annual dinner-supper, bazaar and dance for the church benefit Saturday. The affair will be held in the parish hall at Mechanicsville.

Black-eyed Mama, La Tucker's Back From Old England

Two shiners.

A love story.

A plan for an autobiography.

First shiner—"I was going into a London theater and a girl tried to hand me her album to get my autograph and she accidentally socked me in the eye with a ring."

Second shiner—"I rescued a boy who was about to be run down, but he misunderstood me and socked me in the eye."

Love story—"An 18-year-old English boy fell in love with me, but his mother didn't like it, so I told her how foolish she was and then I told the boy how foolish he was and that ended the romance."

Autobiography—"I'm having the story of my life done in colors, and it will be called 'A Psychoanalysis of a Red-Hot Mama.'"

Receiving Unit Seeks Building

Present One Is Too Small, Says Superintendent in Report.

A new building is required for the District Receiving Home for Children, Grady H. Leonard, superintendent, said in his annual report made public yesterday. The present location of the home is at 816 Potomac avenue southeast.

"The present building is too small and inadequate," Mr. Leonard said. "There are few facilities for separation of delinquents from dependent children, and diseased children from well ones."

Children are taken to the Receiving Home from Juvenile Court by the police or the Child Welfare Division of the Public Welfare Department and are held there for court action or for final placement in institutions or homes.

There were 2,812 children admitted during the year and 2,807 discharged. Those admitted included 711 white boys, 1,532 colored boys, 223 white and 346 colored girls. The daily average population was 41, the largest number there on one day was 60, and the smallest 19. The per capita cost of the home was $2.44, and the total $32,499.69 for the last fiscal year, the report said.

Policeman Fined $25 On Intoxication Charge

Marlar was arrested yesterday at his home, in the 1200 block of Penn street northeast, by Policeman W. A. Feifield, fellow officer of the Ninth Precinct, after a "trouble" call had been sent from his house. Marlar was suspended from the force, pending action of the Police Trial Board.

Work Starts Soon On Cape Henry Job

New Fog Signal Building to Be Constructed.

The Bureau of Lighthouses said yesterday, according to the Associated Press, that work would begin "almost immediately" on construction of a new fog signal building at Cape Henry, Va., where the Government plans to conduct extensive fog signal tests.

Construction of the building and the experiments to be made there after the building is completed were made possible by a $35,000 public works allotment, bureau officials said.

The new building will replace the present fog signal house at the Cape Henry Lighthouse and will be used for sounding signals as aids to navigation as well as for the experimental purposes.

The bureau said the experiments would require no additional staff at Cape Henry, but would be made by the men of the Fifth Lighthouse District under the direction of bureau engineers from Washington.

G. W. Coaches, Wary of Vanderbilt 'Cripples,' Drive Squad in Drill

Pixlee Points To Colonial Injuries

Rathjen Definitely Out; Pettit, His Hand in Cast, May Play.

GEORGE WASHINGTON University coaches, paying no heed to "bear" stories that have preceded the coming of Vanderbilt's Commodores, yesterday drove the Colonials at a furious pace in practice for the Griffith Stadium battle Saturday.

Reports from the Southland advising Washington fans that Vanderbilt will send a crippled team into the game are commanding little respect from Coach Pixlee, who has heard from the lips of his scouts the power Coach Dan McGugin can muster for Vanderbilt.

Despite word from Nashville that Capt. Gene Beck, of Vanderbilt, who was hurt in the Auburn game, is not expected to play in the back field tomorrow, Pixlee is prepared for his presence in the line-up.

Is Warned of Ends.

Pixlee minimizes, too, the dispatch from Nashville announcing that Matt Carloss and Carl Earl, the Vanderbilt ends who started against Louisiana State, are injured will not oppose the Colonials. Neither of these two is a regular, according to Pixlee's scouts who have warned him to beware of Dick Plaszman, 6 feet 5 inches, and Willie Geny, the first-string ends, who are both in excellent health.

George Washington countered yesterday with a few "bear" stories on its own account. Pixlee registered glumness as he announced that Red Rathjen, brilliant center, was on crutches and assuredly out of the game. Rathjen's absence from the line-up, together with the absence of Sid Kolker, at guard, reduced the average poundage of the G. W. line from 196 to 188, as contrasted to the 205-pound average of Vanderbilt, which G. W. men are quoting.

Sid Kolker Demoted.

Line Coach Len Walsh yesterday demoted the 204-pound Kolker to the second team, due to the former Tech High star's lethargic play, and gave the post to Dave Parrack, fast, but light second-string guard.

With Rathjen on the bench, Pixlee is forced to resort to the services of Bernie Witucki, 173-pound third-string center from South Bend, who was on the Notre Dame squad of 1932, but failed to break into the line-up. Witucki, amateur light-heavyweight wrestling champion of Indiana, is fast and alert, but hardly compared with Rathjen in defensive ability.

Pixlee pointed, too, to the injury of Horace Pettit, who recently graduated to a regular post in the G. W. back field. Trainer Roland Logan yesterday declared that the only hope for Pettit's presence in the line-up tomorrow lay in the possibility that he might obviate further injury to his broken hand by binding it in a cast.

The Colonials' practice yesterday saw emphasized Pixlee's defense against the Vanderbilt passing attack. Aside from the Commodore backs, the elongated Plaszman and Willie Geny, his co-worker at the ends, are both adept pass-receivers, according to Pixlee's scouts.

The replacement of Kolker with the speedy Parrack, who played one season at Columbia, indicates that G. W. holds hopes of scoring with its running attack built around Tuffy Leemans. Parrack is one of the men who will be pulled out of the line to lead the interference for the running backs, a duty which Kolker in recent games and practice sessions has not performed to the coaches' liking.

Virginia's Alumni Hold Rally Tonight

Swanson Guest of Honor; Fenwick in Charge.

Preceding the Maryland-Virginia football game tomorrow at College Park, former Cavaliers football stars will speak at an alumni rally at 8 o'clock tonight at the University Club.

Charles Fenwick, all-Southern tackle in 1922, is in charge of the program, and has invited Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson, also a Virginia alumnus, as guest of honor. Gus Tebell, coach of the Cavaliers, will be one of the principal speakers.

Among those who will be heard are William C. Gloth, captain of the 1908 team, Virginia's only undefeated eleven; Hardy Todd, captain of the 1912 team; Dr. Charles B. Crawford, star of the 1907 team, and later assistant coach; Peyton Evans, on the 1915 team; Dr. A. Y. P. Garnett, Col. Henry Cabell Maddux, and M. Carter Hall and Herbert Bryant, star in recent years in football, baseball, track and boxing.

36 W. & L. Men Leave For Annapolis Today

Lexington, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—The Generals had a light workout today, polishing up the last few rough edges before Washington and Lee and Navy meet Saturday at Annapolis. The squad appeared in good condition and in fine spirits. Thirty-six players are scheduled to leave for Annapolis at 1 p. m. tomorrow.

Grid Scramble Due to Bring Headaches

Army Tiger, Green, Pitt, Alabama and Chicago on Victory List.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Unless the law of averages has lost its last vestige of potency the punch-drunk football prognosticators are in line for a fresh set of purple-tinged headaches on Sunday morning.

For two weeks now the Nation's autumnal pastime has traveled along the ruts made by wagons loaded with form. That's just about one week longer than the average, so its an odds-on bet that a new collection of football score gasps are in store before sundown Saturday.

Nowhere does the fan find such an elegant chance for form reversal as here along the Atlantic seaboard. Consider just three games: Princeton-Harvard, Dartmouth-Yale, Pitt-Notre Dame.

Princeton Should Win.

Now Princeton and Harvard are taking up where signet rings and snide jibes left off back in 1926. Harvard, in its games thus far has seemed uninspired and powerless to cope even with a fair opponent. Princeton, except for its lamentable lapse which nearly lost the W. and L. game, has shown a world of potential scoring. So Princeton is the big favorite.

Dartmouth has never beaten Yale in the bowl where these ancient foemen are battling once again. Yale will present a makeshift team; Dartmouth an undefeated, untied combination. So, despite the bowl jinx Dartmouth is a heavy favorite. But so has Dartmouth been a favorite in the bowl in other years (in 1933, for example), so what?

The Pitt-Notre Dame things is something else. Most Easterners say "Pitt." So do some Midwesterners. Enough say "Pitt" so that the Panther must be called favorite. But plenty of impartial observers expect the Irish (Notre Dame) to bop the Pitt all the way from the hilly fastness of the stadium to the point. Pitt is picked here but with several thousand misgivings.

One Vote for Army.

Move west a bit and study Illinois-Army. Both undefeated; both untied. They have played somewhat similar schedules, with Illinois having the the tougher row. Who'll win? Why Army, says this corner, and the vote is nearly drowned by Midwestern nays.

Another gem to consider is the contest involving highriding Chicago with its perfect record and the twice-beaten Purdue. Looks like Chi ought to be it hands down, but this department's "operative three-faces-East" who patrols the Midwest sector says that Purdue is going to "puncture the Maroon bubble." So Purdue it is.

Down South the main debates center around Georgia Tech vs. No'th Ca'lina with best guesses going to the rambling wrecks. The Southwest is pretty much agreed that Arkansas should beat the Texas Aggies in a stand-out game of that area. On the coast Stanford is a distinct favorite over U. C. L. A., while California is rated above Santa Clara despite the latter's imposing record.

Take Your Choice.

Some more: Washington (undefeated and untied) over Oregon State, St. Mary's over Washington State, Florida over Georgia, Alabama (undefeated and untied) over Kentucky, Duke over Auburn, Louisiana State over Mississippi State. Tulane over Mississippi, Vanderbilt over George Washington, Texas Christian over Baylor, Rice over Texas A. and I., Texas over S. M. U., Minnesota over Michigan, Indiana over Iowa, Wisconsin over Northwestern, Michigan State over Marquette, Columbia over Cornell, Navy over W. and L., Syracuse over Penn State, Penn over Lafayette, Tennessee over Fordham.

Dodgers Not for Sale, Says Steve McKeever

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—The Brooklyn Club of the National League is not for sale.

So says Steve McKeever, president of the club, in commenting upon reports that Col. T. L. Huston, former part-owner of the Yankees, would like to buy the Dodgers and make Babe Ruth manag[illegible].

40,000 Expected to Watch Tiger-Harvard "Love Feast"

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 1 (AP).—Eight years may be much too short a time for nations and humans to cease hating enemies but that is two full generations in intercollegiate football, long enough to erase all of the bitterness that resulted from the Harvard-Princeton athletic break and forever silence the haranguers who had an unofficial part in the famous "Big Three" smashup.

The current Harvard and Princeton players and undergraduates were in their early teens back in 1926, and at this late date, for them, the real casus belli may be dim.

Magazine Causes Split.

The biting satires of the Harvard Lampoon, the magazine articles of former Harvard players which reflected on Princeton sportsmanship and the "signet ring" assault charges of the State Street Quarter Backs Association were merely thorns in the paw of the angry Tiger, who was chiefly concerned with the Crimson's blunt refusal to rotate the Princeton and Yale games.

But much water has flowed beneath college bridges since then and on Saturday, when the Tiger eleven returns to the stadium for the first time since the break, it will be under vastly changed conditions.

For one thing, this reunion of ancient rivals is not going to be a game for blood, much to Harvard's chagrin. The twice-beaten Crimson does not appear to have any weapon capable of making any impression against the Tigers, whose football star is in the ascendant.

The financial aspect of this game has also changed. When last played here, a capacity crowd was eager to pay $4 for any kind of a stadium seat. This year the stadium will be only comfortably filled by a crowd not expected to exceed 40,000 and half of these spectators will pay but $1.65 to witness the reunion festivities.

While the unbeaten Tigers were putting on their final polish before advancing on the stadium, the student editors of the Harvard and Princeton comic publications were patching up their ancient differences and getting out a joint issue.

The final touch to this feast of mutual forgiveness will be applied Saturday night when the two football squads dine together in one of the new Harvard houses. Coach Eddie Casey's players appear to dread this more than they do the game itself, for, as one gridster asked, "What cheerful word can you say during the soup course to some burly Princetonian who has been pushing you around all afternoon?"

Manager of Phils Pleased by Deal

Wilson Expects Watkins to Regain Form.

Bradenton, Fla., Nov. 1 (AP).—Jimmy Wilson, manager of the Philadelphia National League Club, today expressed satisfaction over the deal that sent Dick Bartell to the Giants in exchange for four players and cash estimated at $75,000.

Wilson has faith in George Watkins, the outfielder obtained in the swap, and believes he will regain his batting form at the Philly park.

Gillette Signed To Meet Zwick

Al Gillette, of New York, will meet Phil Zwick, of Wisconsin, in one of four 8-rounders that comprise the boxing card at the Riding and Hunt Club next Monday night.

Gillette decisioned Charley VonReedon in his last appearance here. Zwick lost on a foul to Benny Victor in his debut here after having the Philadelphia featherweight on the floor four times.

In two other fours, Sid Silas will engage Ralampo Saguero and Joe Izzo will box Tony Lopez. The fourth bout will be announced later.

Ray Gardner Bats .419 in Blue Ridge

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—Batting .419 for the 30 games in which he participated, Ray Gardner former major league ball player, led the Blue Ridge League batters this season, according to the averages announced by President Frank Colley, of the circuit. Gardner nosed out a teammate, McKenzie, who had an average of .413 for 28 games.

Other leading batters were Shockey, Martinsburg, who played in only 5 games, for an average of .444; Gregory, Martinsburg, in 33 games, with .374, and Ryan, Hagerstown, playing in 14 games, with an average of .364.

Burch, Winchester, led in sacrifice hits with 9, and Hickey, of Hagerstown, drew the greatest number of passes with 28, while Frank Six, Frederick, was hit by pitched ball oftenest, with 6.

Al Brown Knocks Out Young Perez in Tunis

Tunis, Tunisia, Nov. 1 (AP).—Panama Al Brown, recognized in some countries as bantam-weight champion of the world, today retained his disputed title by knocking out young Perez, of Spain, in the tenth round of a scheduled 15-round championship fight.

Perez, former European flyweight champion, was beaten by the elongated Panama Negro in a previous meeting at Paris last February. Brown won that one on points.

Redbirds Stop 'Shepherd' In Drill

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Two freshmen backs with the name "Shepherd" written across their jerseys, were knocked colder than a December night as the varsity smashed through the wavering yearling line to smear the pseudo Terror ace on every play. Western Maryland's running plays netted a 30-yard loss throughout the lengthy workout which, because of a school holiday, was two and a half hours longer than usual.

Satisfied though he was with their rugged defense against running plays, Coach Dutch Bergman raved and stormed at the ragged pass defense erected by the secondary. It was as ineffective as a popgun in a pitched battle, and Bergman, determined to thwart the Terrors' aerial game, has rescheduled a similar drill for this afternoon.

Scout Injury Reports.

Stories that Dick Harlows' undefeated and unscored-on aggregation will be weakened by injuries were scouted by the C. U. mentor yesterday. Bergman dubbed them "bear" stories and pointed out that even though Western Maryland has been hit by injuries, Harlow has enough reserve material to bolster the starting eleven for C. U.

If spirit and determination are to be factors in tomorrow's game, then Catholic U. is home. The squad is in perfect physical condition and views the contest as a real opportunity to regain its place in the Eastern football ranks. Bill Shepherd, who has been running wild all season, will have to show some fancy stepping to get by those inspired Redbirds. He may do it, he may succeed in adding to the point-score that leads the Nations' best, but he'll have to show more than ordinary ability to succeed.

Proved Its Mettle.

Catholic U. will outweigh Western Maryland in the line, and, man for man, it will match, if not outdo, what Harlow has to offer. The line proved its mettle against Holy Cross when the Crusaders were obliged to go into the air for their margin of victory.

Dempsey Off Road Jaunts For Good

No More Refereeing or Fight Managing, Says Husband-Papa.

Is Building Big Tavern; Sees Baer Defeated Only by Idleness.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 (AP).—The wandering warrior, William Harrison Dempsey, has taken his last tour, hopped his last rattler for parts North, South and West.

The man who rolled off the underpart of freight trains to launch his fighting career, and rode a million miles first class thereafter, won't travel farther North than New Rochelle, nearer the West than Brooklyn or farther South than Manhattan Transfer, if he can help it now.

"I'm just a fellow named Dempsey from here on," he said today. "No more refereeing tours, no more vaudeville, no more fight managing. I'm a home man now. I've settled down. I'm off the road for good."

Building Huge Tavern.

Dempsey has leased a home here for himself, his wife, and their 3-month-old daughter, Joan. The former champion is building a huge tavern and restaurant on Eighth avenue, opposite Madison Square Garden, and he owns 51 per cent of a proposition that involves $3,500,000, including the purchase price of the land. He's all choked up with business, the thrills of brand new fatherhood, and the fun of furnishing the first real home he's ever had.

He isn't even thinking about the fight game. That is, not until some one starts talking about it. Then he's the same old Dempsey.

Forced Inactivity.

"Who'll lick Baer? No one but Baer and the heavyweight championship. As a fighter, Baer can rule the heavyweight division for the next 20 years. As a champion, it's just a question of time before the forced inactivity that goes with the title beats him.

"Baer can knock out men like Hamas and Lasky in three rounds at the most. That's the Baer we saw against Schmeling and Carnera. But that's not the Baer we're going to see the next time out, and the time after that.

"By next June he'll have fought two fights in three years. That's what licks you. I know. I never cracked up in the ring. I cracked up in training, trying to make up in six weeks all the work I hadn't done in a year. Your body won't stand it. You try to do too much in too short a time. You crack up.

Will Last as Champion.

"Some day a heavyweight champion is going to be smart enough to demand a title fight every six months. He's going to fight once in the winter, once in the summer. He's going to get that winter fight if he has to pay money out of his own pocket for it. Then he'll last as a champion."

The way things are, Dempsey isn't interested in promoting a fight for Baer after the champion completes his contract with Madison Square Garden in June.

"Nope," he said. "Not against the kind of fighters that are around now. But some day some one will come marching in out of the canebrakes, an iron man with cement in his soul, bred for fighting. I'll want that fellow, want to be around him."

It sounded as if he were talking about another Dempsey.

Grid Pro Gates To Surpass Colleges'

New York Money Elevens Near Peak; Rivals Past Theirs.

By Jimmy Powers.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The clanking of stadium concrete mixers may be stilled, tickets for solid Pullman de luxe specials may be canceled, fat college coaching contracts may be sliced lean and all syndicate movie and magazine gravy cut off if profootball gains at its present rate.

Today's survey of the tax list of paid admissions to New York City box offices reveals the amazing fact that college football for the first time in history will draw a smaller per game average attendance than profootball.

In a list obtained by the Chicago Tribune Press Service, the college teams have played to an average to date of 14,210. The pros have played to 14,083. The pros have all their cream gates ahead of them, including contests which feature such box-office magnates as Beattie Feathers, Red Grange, the game which will decide the champion of the East and the Thanksgiving Dodge-Giant battle. The college reached early peaks and are now in a decline due to the sudden and mysterious collapse of Columbia, Fordham and Manhattan.

270,000 In 19 Games.

The college boys have played to a gross of 270,000 admissions in 19 contests. The pros have played to 84,500 in six contests.

The pros have stabilized themselves and have gained chiefly because they produce better football, put all-American line-ups on the field and are able to avoid graduation casualties.

Fordham overmatched itself with an ambitious intersectional schedule that was smeared with the first of its out-of-town opponents—St. Mary's. Games are still to be played with Tennessee and Purdue.

Prestige Shrinks.

Columbia had its Rose Bowl box office luster rubbed off by Buzz Borries, of Navy. A lucky last-minute rally against Penn State saved a ball game for the harried Lou Little, but his prestige took a further shrinking.

Manhattan, relying on the prospects of a strong team of incoming sophomores, fizzled dismally against Michigan State and Georgetown. The costly regime of Chick Meehan faces still more setbacks and slimmer gates with such formidable opponents as Holy Cross and Villanova in the offing.

Joins Tilden For Winter Matches

Star Rejects $10,000 Cash for Gate Receipt Percentage.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—George M. Lott, of Chicago, greatest doubles player tennis ever knew, turned professional today and joined the troupe of Tilden-O'Brien commercial players.

Announcement that the veteran Davis Cup star had deserted amateur ranks was made in a joint statement by "Big Bill" Tilden and Bill O'Brien, the promoters.

Lott signed to make a professional tour in 1935, opening at Madison Square Garden January 9. Terms of his agreement were not revealed, but it is understood the fiery Midwesterner refused a $10,000 straight guarantee and insisted instead upon playing on a percentage basis.

After Lester Stoefen.

O'Brien said he and Tilden were trying to sign up Lester Stoefen, the Los Angeles giant, who paired with Lott in the last Davis Cup final to win the doubles match from England.

In his first professional appearance at Madison Square Garden, Lott will meet Tilden in a single contest. He and Tilden have been unfriendly for years. Lott first rose to fame as a singles player and did well during the last outdoor campaign as a solo artist. For years he has been ranked among the Nation's first ten singles performers.

O'Brien said the tour on which Lott will embark is certain to include at least 70 cities. After that Lott intends going to Europe or the Orient to teach at leading clubs during the summer.

Lott's joining with Tilden and O'Brien was somewhat surprising because only recently Tilden had declared he and O'Brien did not want him with their troupe. He said Lott had offered to join up, but they had declined his offer. Lott denied this vigorously. Most tennis writers considered it merely a "sour grapes" statement on Tilden's part—recalling the bad feeling between the two.

During 1934 Lott and Stoefen swept most of the world's doubles titles, winning at Wimbledon, in the Davis Cup matches and defending their National title successfully in the United States. In addition, they won the indoor national crown.

Lott is 28 and has been a top-ranker since 1927. That he still is proficient in the singles was demonstrated last summer when he scored the biggest upset of the outdoor season by beating Frank Shields, of New York, the country's No. 1 play-

Maryland U. Starts Its Powerful 'Shock Troops' Against Virginia Tomorrow

Work in Tilt With 'Gators Pleasing

Second Team Is Almost as Strong as First; Johnson Spotted.

FOLLOWING up last Saturday's successful experiments with "shock" troops, Jack Faber, Maryland's youthful professor of bacteriology and football, intends to use his shockmen in the opening period against Virginia tomorrow at College Park, he revealed yesterday.

Now that is, at best, small consolation for the gay Cavaliers who entertain hopes of having Terrapin soup for dinner, for Maryland's reserves are about as good as the regulars. If the so-called first team had started against Florida last week the so-called second team no doubt would have done just as well in that second period when Maryland shoved over a pair of touchdowns.

Speed, Drive, Deception.

Take the back field of Widmyer, Nelson, Headley and Crecca or Daly. It has speed, drive and as much deception as a magician. Defensively it also gets a good rating. The line, too, looks good with Ellinger and Buscher, ends; McCaw and Fletcher, guards; Farrell and Callahan, tackles and Gretz, center. It wore out Florida in the first period last week, stopping everything the 'Gators started.

In ordinary years this combination would be considered a good first team at the Old Line school. Now, if the Terps boast another team supposed to be better, it looks like a dull, very dull, afternoon for Coach Gus Tebell's men.

Placing Sothoron, Guckeyson, Sachs and Gormley in the other team's back field still leaves Jack Stonebreaker without a berth, and Stonebreaker admittedly is as talented as any of the others. He has not the experience, to be sure, but against Navy he proved his ability to carry the ball.

Relies on Johnson.

Virginia must rely on Tom Johnson, its 200-pound full back and captain, for most of its gains, but, unless a week of strenuous drilling goes for naught, Maryland will be ready for the husky line-smasher. Yesterday's practice session was devoted largely to defensive work on plays centering around Johnson, who does everything but carry the water bucket.

Faber and the Terps are looking beyond Virginia, beyond V. M. I. next week, to the game with Indiana. Victory in this game, they feel, would definitely establish Maryland as an important factor in the upper strain of the collegiate grid world. And if the Old Line is still unbroken after the Hoosier game, chances for winning the remaining game with Georgetown will be brighter than ever.

Cavaliers Complete Drill.

University, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—Virginia spent the early part of the afternoon putting finishing touches on the attack that will be tried against Maryland Saturday and then devoted a long period to defensive drill against Old Line plays as interpreted by the third-stringers.

The varsity Coach Gus Tebell chose for this afternoon, and the eleven he probably will start against Maryland at College Park, included John Leys and Wier Tucker, ends; Edward Andrews and Leonard Trell, tackles; Peyton Hoge and Fred Cramer, guards; Horace Hallett, center; Randolph Garnett, quarter back; Vincent Cardwell and Griffith Dodson, half backs, and Spencer Berger, full back.

The Cavaliers will hold a final brief workout tomorrow and the squad will go to Washington Saturday morning.

Friend School Beats Ballston

Repulsed a determined march down the field by the Virginians in the first and second quarters, the Friends boys came back in the final period to force over the winning touchdown. Jack Barr, quarter back, went over fro mthe 6-yard line for the score, but missed the extra point. Jim Smith, half back, was instrumental with Barr in advancing the ball to the 6-yard stripe.

He is famous as a court comedian and is a grand showman. His antics during the last Wimbledon tourney caused the King and Queen of England to laugh in the royal box. He never took the game too seriously and poked fun at the amateur business. It was he who coined the phrase "tennis bums" in referring to the amateurs who traveled from tournament to tournament, living upon the various clubs.

He was divorced from Mrs. Abigail Allen Lott in March, 1932. They were married after an elopement in October, 1930.

America's Cup Yacht Races Off in '35

Time Limit for Challenge Expires; New Event Now Planned.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Neither Tom Sopwith nor any other Britisher will challenge for the America's Cup next year, and there will be no international race in the "giant" class in 1935. Time limit for a challenge expired today.

Circumstances surrounding the September matches off Newport, the controversy surrounding Sopwith's protests, and charges of lack of sportsmanship by the New York Yach Club's race committee, together with the expense and trouble of rigging another sloop to meet the Americans, operated to choke off any prospective British challenges for the 83-year-old silver mug.

Substitute Is Planned.

Instead, however, it became known today that an international race for 12-meter yachts, for a cup to be presented by the North American Yacht Racing Union, probably will take the place of the historic races and may create a regatta as large and important as any ever held at Kiel or Cowes.

The union, which is not dominated by the New Yorkers, comprizes 168 clubs in the United States and Canada. Its cup may be challenged for by any nation, but there will be only one contender for each nation. Dominions, such as Canada or Australia, may each have an entrant, however. It is expected that Bermuda, Argentina, Spain, Canada and Germany will be sure entrants. The challenging yachts must be built and owned in the country they represent.

Are Not Small Craft.

Although the yachts are called "12-meter boats" they are not small craft. Their approximate length is 70 feet, and their masts are as tall as an eight-story building. They cost about $50,000 each to build, and the limit of paid hands allowed on them is four—although there is no limit to the number of amateurs who may be aboard.

Fordham Will Start 5 Sophs Against Vols

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Hoping to upset Tennessee on Saturday, Fordham's Rams worked for hours today, mostly in scrimmage against the freshmen who used Tennessee plays. Jim Crowley announced he definitely had settled on a starting line-up, which will include five sophomores. Joe Maniaci, fleet and elusive half back, will not be available for duty.

Cornell Squad Leaves For Columbia Contest

Army to Drill Today In Illinois Stadium

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 1 (AP).—Army's varsity squad entrained at 2:45 p. m. today for the Illinois game. Arriving in Urbana at 11 a. m. tomorrow, the Cadets will engage in a brief drill in the Illini stadium at 1:30 p. m. Army's coaches expect a spectacular game, marked by much passing. Only a limbering up was held today.

Yale Captain Is Shifted To Old Tackle Position

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 1 (AP).—Clare Curtin, Yale captain, went back to his old tackle post today after a tryout at guard as the Elis staged their usual light drill. Charley Strauss returned to guard. The varsity spent some time practicing its new plays. Kim Whitehead hobbled around with a cane nad will not be able to face Dartmouth.

Six Southern Conference Rivals Will Clash Among Selves.

RICHMOND, Nov. 1 (AP).—While Washington and Lee's air-minded Generals are trying to sink the Navy at Annapolis, Duke's Blue Devils, striking the comeback trail, will battle Auburn's Plainsmen Saturday in a pair of headlining attractions for Southern Conference teams.

Navy, remembering full well the scare it got from another aerially inclined eleven, the Old Liners of Maryland University, was polishing up its pass defense while the Generals were devising ways and means of getting receivers out in the clear for Monk Mattox's accurate tosses.

The Midshipmen will be a top-heavy favorite, but the Generals, leading the conference parade with Duke, may cause trouble, just as they did against another undefeated team, Princeton. Washington and Lee, with no injuries to hurt its chances, will be playing a Navy eleven whose strength may be lessened a bit by hurts to several players. At last reports, however, Buzz Borries, recognized as one of the East's most expert ball carriers, was ready to go.

Duke, outplayed by a Tennessee team which held the great Corky Cornelius in check, doesn't expect it to happen again and optimistically rounded out preparations for the meeting with Auburn at Birmingham. Ace Parker, sophomore quarter back whose running and passing were below par because of a badly sprained wrist, was pronounced in first-class shape and was expected to join Cornelius and Jack Alexander, 165-pound full back, in ground gaining.

North Caholina's Tarheels, deprived of the services of their fine half back, Charlie Shaffer, will play Georgia Tech at Atlanta while six other Southern Conference teams will battle among themselves.

N. C. State's Wolfpack, heartened by their 7-7 tie with Carolina a week ago, may find just as tough an opponent in Clemson's ferocious Tigers, but Virginia's Cavaliers, temporarily at the head of the parade along with Washington and Lee and Duke, aren't expected to be there after they run afoul of Maryland's Old Liners at College Park.

The Clemson-State battle should be a thriller, with Clemson's injured Randy Hinson, hailed as one of the best backs in the conference, ready for duty. Hinson didn't last long in the Tigers' victory over South Carolina, but before he was carried out of the game, injured, he broke loose for a 43-yard run, the longest of the game.

The Tigers will bring a powerful forewall to Raleigh and while their back field won't be near as heavy as State's big boys, including the 215-pound Ray Rex, it may be a bit more versatile. Clemson will have to watch Venice Farrar, State's ace ball carrier.

Virginia is conceded little chance against Maryland's great team, paced by Norwood Sothoron. Spectators, however, should get an eyeful of passes. The light Virginians have depended on aerials all season, principally because their running attack has bogged down Marylanders, whose running attack was exhibited in all its brilliance against opposing forewalls. The for the benefit of a badly beaten Florida eleven, have one of the finest passing attacks in the South.

Virginia Tech and South Carolina will meet in another conference game at Columbia with the Techmen bemoaning the loss of their star back, Duncan Holsclaw, but by no means disheartened. On the strength of a fine battle against a superior Washington and Lee team and South Carolina's rout by Clemson, Tech will be the favorite.

Virginia Military Institute, long overdue after five consecutive defeats—the last two after outgaining the opposition by a wide margin—will meet another tough foe in William and Mary's Indians at Norfolk.

Holy Cross Practices At Length on Defense

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 1 (AP).—Holy Cross staged another long drill on defense today and prepared to leave for Philadelphia tomorrow. Although Capt. Buzz Harvey still is bothered by an injured knee he is expected to start against Temple.

Fox Lair Wins Stakes.

Newmarket, England, Nov. 1 (AP).—Mrs. C. Glorney's Fox Lair, at 40 to 1, today won the Richmond Nursery Stakes of £300 with extras by a half-length from James de Rothschild's Cartolina and 11 others.

Football Fans Are Urged To Curb Drinking at Games

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 1 (AP).—President Lotus D. Coffman, of the University of Minnesota, charging "a great increase in intemperance" at football games, urged today that patrons of Minnesota contests maintain "decent behavior."

Issuing a formal statement, Dr. Coffman said:

"I have had reports that there has been a great increase of intemperance at football games throughout the country this fall.

"Those who enjoy the game of football and the sportsmanship connected with it should protect their favorite sport by throwing their influence on the side of decent behavior at all football games.

"It will be hard to defend a sport, no matter how much we enjoy it, if public games show a tendency to become public orgies. I hope the true football enthusiasts will see that now is the time to keep the game what it should be."

Injuries Force Light Hampden Sidney Drill

Hampden Sidney, Va., Nov. 1 (AP). Numerous injuries in the squad caused Coach Bernier to call off scrimmage for the Hampden Sidney team today. A long signal practice was held in preparation for Saturday's game with St. John's of Annapolis at Lynchburg.

Entire V. M. I. Corps Cheers Team in Drill

Lexington, Va., Nov. 1 (AP).—The entire corps was excused from dress parade today and marched on alumni field to give the V. M. I. team a rousing send-off for the William and Mary game. Music and cheers made the final dummy scrimmage seem like a real game and at conclusion of the practices Coaches Bill Raftery and Ed. Hess received an enthusiastic welcome at the mess hall.

St. John's Prep Shut Out by Bullis

BULLIS PREP, newest competitor in Washington scholastic sports, defeated St. John's Prep yesterday, 18 to 0, at Eastern High stadium. The school, boasting but 40 boys on its registry, made plain that it must henceforth be reckoned with in the prep school grid race.

Coached by Morris Gouge, former Navy captain and quarter back, the Bullis youngsters, exhibited a well-ordered offensive centered around hard-driving Charlie Rosser, of Ohio, full back, who scored all three touchdowns.

The Naval Academy aspirants threw the Johnnies on the defensive in the second quarter when Barnes, center, recovered a fumble by Bob Barrett, St. John's full back, on the St. John's 24-yard line. An exchange of kicks only set the Bullis back 11 yards.

Rosser Gets Spotlight.

Rosser made a first down on the 25 and Grant Connell, half back, went around left end to the 12. On the next play Rosser tore off right end for a touchdown, but his buck for the extra point failed.

Bullis let out with another drive in the last period with Rosser finally plunging over from the 1-yard line, where a penalty had been placed on the ball. In the dying moments, Rosser intercepted Barrett's pass at midfield and ran 48 yards behind quickly formed interference for his third touchdown.

The Johnnies never threatened seriously, penetrating as far as the Bullis 30-yard line in the third period.

Syracuse Eleven Ready.

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 1 (AP).—Sherwood Johnson today regained his varsity end berth, lled last week by Joe Minsavage, as Syracuse completed its preparations for the Penn State game. Barney Nevins, injured full back, will make the trip, but is not expected to play.

Jack Johnson, a Politician At 56, Champions Roosevelt

DETROIT, Nov. 1 (AP).—If you've wondered what ever became of Jack Johnson, the fistic champion of 1910 and thereabouts, just ask anyone who attended a meeting of the Universal Negro Improvement Association last night.

He's in politics now, championing the Democratic party with forensic knockouts and, if cheers count, he is far from a forgotten idol to members of his race.

Now 56 and weighing in for his political engagements at 226 pounds, the smiling giant who knocked out Jim Jeffries for the heavyweight championship of the world in 1910 still doesn't pull his punches.

"The Democrats," he told his audience, "are the ones who helped Jack Johnson climb to the top of his profession. Jim Jeffries, like all Republicans, tried to dodge the issue, but the Democratic papers just laid on his doorstep until he had to give in. And I'm going to lay right on your doorstep until you decide to vote the Democratic ticket.

"Franklin D. Roosevelt is champion now and wearing the belt. Abraham Lincoln was a good fighter in his prime, but he can't help us now. Always string along with the champion."

Michigan Squad Leaves.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 1 (AP).—The Michigan football team, geared to high speed by the combined efforts of Coach Harry G. Kipke and Athletic Director Fielding Yost, departed for Minneapolis tonight for Saturday's game with Minnesota.

Blossom Again, $4.50, Defeats Waldron Hopes at Pimlico

Bradley Ace Rallies in Stretch

Carl Hanford Slightly Hurt; Bubblesome Returns $100.50.

By Walter Haight.

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Nov. 1. The green and white of the E. R. Bradley stable on the back of Jockey Don Meade, who was on the back of Blossom Again, dominated the stretch run of the Tasker, today's feature race at this historic track. It was the second successive day that a Bradley-owned filly took the measure of nominees for Saturday's $7,500 added Waldron Handicap.

Blossom Again did not win as impressively as did Black Helen the day before, but her victory was noteworthy in view of the fact that she was not thought of sufficient caliber to run in the Waldron.

By a margin of a length over Our Reigh, Meade brought the daughter of North Star II to the wire. A tiring third came Enthusiasm, a long shot, which gave the favorite players many anxious moments.

Rushed to Front.

In fact, Enthusiasm had the situation in control for at least four of the six furlongs. Johnny Gilbert rushed him to the front and Blossom Again made several futile efforts to dislodge him.

However, with the stretch reached, Enthusiasm drifted back and Blossom Again went on to take the purse. Our Reigh, far back in the early running, closed a big gap to take the place money from the lagging Enthusiasm.

Blossom Again, the favorite, paid $4.50.

Carl Hanford, who took up race riding after his brother, Buddy, was killed here during the spring of last year, had a narrow escape from serious injury in the third race. Hanford suffered a painful cut on his right arm when Marcella H., his mount, stumbled and sent him sprawling to the track. Fortunately, the horse was near the rear of the field and Hanford fell clear of the other racers although he was struck by Marcella H.

Soon on His Feet.

The mishap occurred near the three-quarter pole and just a few yards from where Buddy Hanford fell to his death from Apprehensive. Carl was soon on his feet, however, and was walking back to the judges' stand when the track ambulance arrived.

He will be unable to ride for two weeks, track physicians said.

The race saw the defeat of My Dress, the favorite, which finished sixth in the field of seven. Big Show, under the skillful handling of the Apprentice Fallon, was the winner by a length over Pass Shot. Brilliant Rose was third.

The "moonshoots," those who seek the long shots, came into their glory in the fourth race when Bubblesome, winner of two distance races, scored in a thrilling nose finish with Band Wagon. Bubblesome, with every well played horse out of the money, made the mutuel board tilt with an across the board display of $100.50, $31, $12.50. Haggerson nosed out the favorite Dreel for the third money. Bubblesome was on top a few yards from the start and was never headed thereafter.

Kummel Wins at 7 to 1.

The day's steeplechase provided a surprise when Kummel, a 7-to-1 shot, defeated Tanaringo and Tourist II, a pair of heavily played leapers. Christian, who had the mount, did not hurry the ultimate winner but moved up steadily during the last trip around, caught Tanaringo at the laast jump and then drew away on the flat. Red Flash, the early pace-setter, crashed at the tenth fence. Jockey Bellhouse was not injured.

The favorite players were right in the second race. Mario, at 45 cents on the dollar, triumphed in a drive with Memorable. Yehonala was third in the field of Maryland-bred maidens.

Sun Abbot, racing for a new owner, made good at the first asking with a slashing stretch run that downed Luck In, the public choice in the fifth race. Triolet closed with a rush to take the show money. The winner paid $12.70.

The little colored apprentice rider, C. Reid, found it an easy matter to bring Fairly Wild home on the front end in the seventh. The combination clicked by two lengths and returned $8.90. Wedding Ring, the early pacemaker, held on to be an easy second, three lengths before Smooth Crossing. Reid sent Fairly Wild into command around the final bend and the gelding romped clear after entering the stretch.

Don Meade scored a double by winning the last race aboard the $11.90-for-$2-shot Tightwad. Our David was second, two lengths back and a like margin before Repeal.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KUMMEL, $15.90, $5.80, $3.00; TANARINGO, $3.60, $2.50; TOURIST II, $2.40.

KUMMEL, taken under steadying restraint when unable to reach the front after the start, drove up in the inside of the leaders when entering contention with the leaders, fenced boldly and then finishing with good speed on the flat after the final jump, outstayed TANARINGO. Latter, in close attendance of RED FLASH, took command when the latter lost his rider, swerved out after clearing the final fence and hung under a hard drive. TOURIST II bettered his position steadily on the outside, made several determined challenges, but was not good enough. SPINACH bobbled at several of his fences then dropped back after going a mile. LAVISBY was always far back. RED FLASH unseated his rider at the tenth fence.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. For 2-year-olds maidens foaled in Maryland. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:00. Off at 2:04. Winner, Wm. Ziegler's ch. c. (2), by Canter—Marat. Trained by J. F. Schorr. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 2-5, 1:15 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARIO, $2.90, $2.30, $2.30; MEMORABLE, $3.30, $3.30; YEHONALA, $5.60.

MARIO, taken under mild restraint after going into a forward position, wore YEHONALA down entering the home stretch, drew clear, but had to be placed to punishment to stall off MEMORABLE. Latter, prominent in the early stages, responded to punishment in the last quarter-mile and came with good courage on the inside of the winner during the stretch drive. YEHONALA was rated in front, but failed to rally when put to a drive. HAPPY TOM could not threaten at any stage. ITALIAN HARRY went evenly. The others were far back for the entire journey.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. The Timonium. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:30. Off at 2:31. Winner, A. G. Vanderbilt's ch. g. (3), by Dress Parade—Mabel Curtis. Trained by J. H. Trotter. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:39 3-5, 1:46 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIG SHOW, $14.60, $10.30, $5.20; PASS SHOT, $6.90, $4.70; BRILLIANT ROSE, $10.30.

BIG SHOW, away quickly and having good speed to gain command at once, raced in front under slight restraint while meeting contention from BRILLIANT ROSE, was shaken up mildly for the final drive and held PASS SHOT safe nearing the end. PASS SHOT worked his way up gradually and closed with good courage. BRILLIANT ROSE went nicely placed in the early stages and continued gamely when hard ridden. POTION lacked early speed and was never dangerous. FLYING WATCH dropped back steadily after reaching the back stretch. MY BOSS bled and fell back. MARCELLA H stumbled while racing on the inside approaching the home stretch and unseated her rider.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:56. Off at 2:59. Winner, J. Lowenstein's ch. g. (3), by Bubbling Over—Samothrace. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:12 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUBBLESOME, $100.50, $31.00, $12.50; BAND WAGON, $8.80, $7.70; HAGGERSON, $12.20.

BUBBLESOME, strongly handled to hold a brief lead while racing on the inside, held on determinedly after resisting stiff contention and outstayed BAND WAGON after a hard drive. BAND WAGON went strongly while forcing the pace and fought it out desperately nearing the finish. HAGGERSON, moved up stoutly nearing the home stretch, came through on the inside and then came stoutly, but was unable to stride freely at the end when finishing behind leaders. DREEL timidly ridden, was eased back out of contention when leaving the back stretch, then was steered to the outside for the final drive. He finished on his own courage. GOLDEN SPUR was held safe in the final drive. CAN'T REMEMBER had early speed. BRIGHT HAVEN tired.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:25. Off at once. Winner, Mrs. M. N. Bond's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN ABBOT, $12.70, $4.00, $3.00; LUCK IN, $3.10, $2.40; TRIOLET, $2.90.

SUN ABBOT, permitted to settle into his best stride before approaching the leaders, went up on the outside in the last half-mile, swung around the leaders at midstretch and came out under pressure. LUCK IN, rated in front and saving much ground, held on well when placed to punishment in the closing furlong. TRIOLET, far out of contention early, circled her field to close a big gap. STEPBROTHER made a strong move midway of the final turn, but quit under pressure. SUN WAY was held safe. HAIR TRIGGER tired early, as did BRINY DEEP. GALYARROW was done after six furlongs.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500; allowances. The Tasher. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:49. Off at 3:52½. Winner, E. R. Bradley's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLOSSOM AGAIN, $4.50, $3.00, $2.80; OUR REIGH, $5.70, $4.30; ENTHUSIASM, $6.30.

BLOSSOM AGAIN, rated smoothly back of ENTHUSIASM until midway of the turn, responded nicely to gain command, then came out when mildly shaken up. OUR REIGH worked his way up steadily and came resolutely when reaching the home stretch. ENTHUSIASM was hurried into command, but weakened slowly during the last quarter-mile. BOSTON BROOK showed a good effort. MOISSON lacked early speed and went wide for the entire trip. APERITIF raced below her best form She was permitted to race wide all the way. SABLIN went nicely place, but tired when urged.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:16. Off at 4:17½. Winner W. Sachsenmaier's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIRLY WILD, $8.90, $5.00, $2.90; WEDDING RING, $6.30, $3.10; SMOOTH CROSSING, $2.80.

FAIRLY WILD moved strongly midway of the back stretch, was kept on the outside when engaging the leaders, wore WEDDING RING down and drew out under urging. WEDDING RING sprinted clear after reaching the wire, was all out until challenged, then held on gamely. SMOOTH CROSSING, intermittently punished to maintain a forward position, tired badly when the final drive came. AIRWAY bettered his position while saving ground and continued to make up ground at the end. TIEMPO, forced to race on the outside, could not threaten in the final drive. KALOLA began dropping back after five furlongs.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:45. Off at 4:47. Winner, G. L. Hamilton's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIGHT WAD, $11.90, $4.50, $3.50; OUR DAVID, $3.80, $3.00; REPEAL, $4.30.

TIGHT WAD moved up stoutly when midway of the back stretch, crowded over on OUR DAVID when moving to the front approaching the home stretch, disposed of REPEAL and came out slowly. OUR DAVID followed REPEAL closely during the early running, recovered after being interfered with by TIGHT WAD nearing the home stretch, then came willingly after recovering. Merritt made a claim of foul that was not allowed. REPEAL was rushed to the front, but tired when the real test came. KOZAK lacked speed and was very sluggish for the first six furlongs. RETRIBUTION had no excuses. PROTAGONIST stopped.

Jockey Escapes Death Near Spot Fatal to Brother

CARL HANFORD,

younger brother of the late Buddy Hanford, who suffered a severely cutar m yesterday at Pimlico in a spill on the same turn where his more famous brother met death in the spring of 1933. One hundred yards beyond the spot where Apprehensive toppled Buddy Hanford to his death, the younger Hanford yesterday went down when his mount, Marcella H., stumbled. A glancing blow from a hoof of his mount caused the jockey's injury. He will beou t of the saddle for two weeks.

'Gansett Feature To Sweet Mollie

Filly Pays $27.50 Mutuel; Rains Cut Crowd.

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, R. I., Nov. 1 (AP).—Sweet Mollie, an outsider, won the feature race here today before one of the smallest crowds of the current meeting.

The filly won handily in a field of seven, with Chewawa second, and This Way third, and paid $27.50 for $2.

N. Y. U. Tapers Off.

Dear Al: Pimlico Race Track, Nov. 1.

Don Meade is the king of the jockeys, and, evidently, the king can do no wrong. He lived a charmed life at Laurel and his mounts escaped disqualification on occasions when it appeared to many that they had fouled. In today's sixth race, Blossom Again shut off Boston Brook in the lower stretch, although opinion was divided as to whether Dougherty had made a bad choice of direction by running his horse into a pocket against the rail. In the seventh race, Tight Wad was out in front with Meade up when Our David, with Merritt in the saddle, attempted to pass. Tight Wad was crowded over on the favorite, which failed to recover in time to win. Merritt climbed the steps and registered his complaint, but the red lights were lighted, indicating that Tight Wad's victory stood. There is a fine line between what constitutes a foul and what does not constitute a foul. The stewards might simplify matters by giving the press-box boys their reasons for allowing or disallowing a foul claim so that they might pass it along. Until the public is let in on the real dope, people will go molding their own thoughts and expressing them at the top of their lungs. BILL.

First race—Help Me was about to win over a field of this caliber last out when he lost his rider at the last fence. A solid bet here if he stands up. No Frills has been collecting the odds and ends of purses hereabouts, mainly because he survives the jumps. A good chance for second money tomorrow. Brad made a nice move in fair company.

Second race—Mary's May gathered a purse over at Laurel and appears to be the speed of the party here. The unreliable Bokie B. earns his way in these cheap fields and will be close at the finish. Wickliffe may draw Gilbert for the saddle work and would be dangerous.

Third race—Advantage is the probable favorite, and his backing will be justified. Has done about everything asked this fall. Tiddlewink has been working fast, according to Clocker Mike, and may be the surprise of the sprint. Bloodroot comes from that good E. R. Bradley barn and has to be reckoned with.

Fourth race—I'm going to string along with Trainer Bedwell's magic. He made Red Wagon defeat the best of them at Laurel and I'm stringing along. Carbina and Only One figure to complete the money bracket.

Fifth race—Lealette meets a field that may suit his purposes. Ran encouragingly in stiffer company. Tartan Betsy was a keen juvenile in the West and may be heard from here. Goldin has a fighting chance to upset the favorites.

Sixth race—Judge Schilling (I'm going to run him down) is ready. Don't let those Laurel races fool you. He will have Waterset and Towee as his chief rivals. Should track conditions change, Luna Mica goes on top.

Seventh race—Squeeze Out shapes up as the best this sprint has to offer. Gets in with light weight and I see no reason for excuses. Ned O., providing he escapes the also eligible group, would be dangerous. Zipalong has been working briskly. If he draws a good rider, he may squeeze into the money.

Eighth race—Frumper is too keen a horse at this time to be placed anywhere except first in this field. Corrymeela and Stone Martin are good now. Mud would enhance their chances.

Pelican Wins Feature at Arlington

ARLINGTON DOWNS, Tex., Nov. 1 (AP).—The Pelican, carrying 109 pounds, with O. Harbert up, finished with driving speed today to win the $1,000 Worth Hotel Purse, the feature race of Arlington Downs' eight-race program.

The winner rushed with a burst of speed to beat Bedight, in second place, and Captain Joy, trailing in third position. Most of the race was a neck-and-neck affair between Bedight and Captain Joy.

An estimated crowd of 9,000 cheered the winner, running his first race on a Texas track. He ran the Waggoner course in 1:08 3-5, to pay mutuels of $7, $2.80 and $2.40.

Tech and Western, Tied for Inter-High Grid Leadership, Play This Afternoon

Odds Favor Maroons to Win

WESTERN and Tech High High School, tied for the leadership of the inter-high series, meet this afternoon at Central Stadium in probably the decisive game of the championship chase.

Tech is a heavy favorite to win and only an overwhelming upset on the part of the Georgetowners could keep the pregame predictions from materializing.

Western stock dropped further last night with announcement by Coach Dan Ahearn that his regular left tackle, big Buzz Parker, is definitely on the sidelnies with an injured knee; that Logan Owens, the squad's punter, will not even be in uniform, and that his regular guards, George Love and Ed Schleicher are crippled.

Owens, the back who punted 74 yards against Eastern to pave the way for the score which gave Western a 6-to-6 tie, is out with a pulled tendon. The injured Love worked out yesterday in uniform for the first time in a week. Schleicher, with an ankle injury, will probably not be in the starting line-up.

Tech, on the other hand, is serenely free from injured men and anxious to end a week and a half of inactivity. The manner in which the Manual Trainers defeated Central, 45 to 0, holds no good for Western. Eastern, however, with an indomitable spirit, showed what the proper fighting attitude could do even against a team like Tech by earning a 0-0 tie.

Pete Alley, Tech's full back, Holmes (Blackie) Heatwole, half back; Monroe, end, and Paul Lynch and George Bogan, sprinting backs, figure to be among the shining lights today. For Western, Phil Maloney, big quarter back; Bill Summerbell, half back, and Huck Wynne, end, should earn their share of the laurels.

Calvert Dickey Wins Rotary Title Golf

Cards 76 to Take Medal; Winslow Is Awarded Low Net Prize.

V. CALVERT DICKEY, Washington Golf and Country Club's golf star, played his home course in 76 strokes yesterday to win medal honors in the Rotary Club tournament. Dickey, aided by a birdie deuce on the second hole, shot the first nine in 39 and parred seven of the next nine holes for a 37. His 10 handicap also gave him the low net prize, but he elected to take the gross award.

W. R. Winslow, of Columbia Country Club, captured the low net prize with his 42, 41—83—16—67. M. E. Horton, with 45, 44—89—16—73; Dan Moorman, of Congressional, with 41, 53—94—17—77, and L. Claggett, with 52, 45—97—20—77, were the other low net winners.

The tournament was the last of the season for the Rotarians.

Dickey's card:

The 27-hole medal play handicap tournament for the Clarence Charest Cup, staged yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club by the General Council Bureau of Internal Revenue ended in a tie between Thomas Mather and Eldan McFarland. Mather scored 44, 41, 39—124, and McFarland, 45, 36, 43—124.

Among other low scores were: W. Hunt, 132; Paul Rogers, 132; Jim Williamson, 136; O. W. Swecker, 133; Frank Gibbs, 133; B. Vogel, 140; John Burrus, 135; Eldan Hansen, 126, and Frank Gibbs, 133.

Harry Pitt is favored to win the Manor Club golf championship, and Jimmy Drain the Washington Golf and Country Club title in their finals matches tomorrow. Pitt will meet Bill Harvey and Drain will oppose Dr. C. E. Buck. Pitt defeated Harvey last spring in the play-off of the medal of the Belle Haven invitation tournament, which Pitt won. Following the finals between Pitt and Harvey, Manor Club will stage its annual celebration, at which various tournament champions during the year will be honored.

Holly Stover expects close to 75 golfers to participate in the annual Harvest tournament tomorrow at Burning Tree Club. Commissioner George Allen, winner last season, will be on hand to defend his title. Other outstanding contestants are Senator Pat Harrison, Steve Early, Merle Thorpe and Marvin McIntyre. The tournament will start at 12 noon. At 6:40 p. m. the boys will imbibe apple cider in keeping with an old custom.

Emory Squad Drills For Wake Forest

Emory, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—The Emory and Henry College football line, generally considered one of the best in Virginia, will battle the heaviest and most powerful wall ever to play on Fullerton Field when Coach Weaver brings his strong Wake Forest eleven to Emory Saturday night. The Wake Forest line averages 191 pounds from end to end.

Postilion Grid Contest Fans Give Army Eleven Heavy Vote

THE difficulty of picking the winner of the Army-Illinois game, which has caused a new crop of gray hairs to sprout on the heads of most of the so-called football experts, is not bothering the Postilion contest predicters. Almost to a man, woman and child they are nominating the Kaydets to romp over the Illini in the all-important grid game of the week.

As in the past, 15 choice seats to the choicest gridiron attraction of the following week will be the reward of the fans who select the greatest number of winning teams. Winners of this week's tickets will see the G. W.-Louisiana State game a week from Saturday.

Below are 25 games selected by Shirley L. Povich, sports editor of The Post, upon which the contest is based. The blank below is for your convenience, although it is not necessary to use The Post chart.

To the entrant predicting correctly the outcome of the greatest number of games will be given four seats to the George Washington-Louisiana State game. The second-place winner will receive three seats.

Third, fourth, fifth and sixth place winners each will be awarded two seats.

In case of a tie, priority of receipt will determine the winner.

On Saturday night, Harris B. Hull, the Postilion broadcaster, will include scores of the games in his radio program over Station WMAL.

Gobblers Forego Heavy Practices

Conserve Battered Forces for Gamecock Tilt.

Blacksburg, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—The belief at Virginia Tech that a midweek scrimmage is the finest tonic to give gridmen before a big game has gone overboard. The Gobblers are prepping for the South Carolina Gamecocks without rough work.

Coaches Redd, Younger and Tilson are conserving their battered forces for the invasion of Columbia's new municipal stadium.

Benny Botnick probably will be ready to go at running guard and Jim Ottaway likely will be available at half back. But George Sodaro, the stocky sophomore who played a great game against Maryland, is definitely out for another week or more.

Capt. Clark's Net 67 Wins Golf Title

CAPT. HOWARD F. CLARK won the annual District Government Department golf tournament yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club's course. He finished with a net of 67 as a result of his 48—49—97 gross and his 30 handicap.

Capt. Clark, who played in the most prominent foursome of the day, one that included District Commissioner George Allen, Ed Brooke, former Middle Atlantic champion, and Maj. Paul Hodgson, nosed out J. F. Hoover, Wednesday's pacesetter, by one stroke. Hoover, an assistant engineer of the highway department, shot 40—47—87—19—68 and was awarded the medal prize.

Other Winners.

Other low net honors went to F. Xanten, who posted 50—49—99—30—69; Lieut. R. E. York, 100—30—70; F. M. Davison, 96—26—70; J. Q. Rosseau, 102—30—72; S. R. Harrison, 49—52—101—28—73; J. Dardell, 53—49—102—30—72, and Maj. Hodgson, 50—44—94—20—74.

W. W. Rice, with 45—43—88— was the second low gross winner.

Commissioner Allen missed winning a prize by a few strokes. An eight on the 445-yard fifteenth, where he flirted with trouble from hole to green, caused his downfall. He went out in 44 and came home in 46 for a 90, and his 12 handicap gave him a 78.

HIGH school football for nearby Virginia recahes its season's peak this afternoon with Washington and Lee High, of Ballston, and Alexandria High renewing their old rivalry at Ballston. The game will start at 3:30 p. m.

Interest was running high yesterday as the two teams tapered off their drills, concentrating on defensive formations. Both schools have scouted one another closely throughout the season in preparation for the big game of their schedules.

The contest will be held in the new stadium of the Little Generals and the State championship hinges on the outcome.

On their past performances, the teams appear fairly evenly matched. The veteran back field of the Alexandrians, however, is thought to give them a slight edge on the offensive angle. Such aces as Paul Shu and Lee Fones have been for the Twins all season.

Coach Maurice Givens, of Alexandria, brought his proteges to a fine edge with a dummy workout yesterday. Seeking even greater speed in his back field, he has moved Nugent to right half and has put Pullman at right end.

The only team which both elevens have played is Central High. Alexandria beat the Washingtonians, 12 to 0, and Central defeated Washington-Lee, 7 to 6. Central's touchdown was the only one scored on the Little Generals this year.

Bid to Babe

House of David Promoter Offers Him $35,000.

MUSCATINE, Iowa, Nov. 1 (AP).—Ray L. Doan, Muscatine sports promoter, today announced he had cabled an offer to Babe Ruth of $35,000 to play with his House of David baseball team, a traveling independent club of bearded players, next season.

Doan said he sent his offer to Ruth, now aboard the Empress of Japan, leading a team of all-star major leaguers on a tour of the Orient.

Middleburg's Opening Hunt Draws 50

Three Foxes Are Jumped in 3½-Hour Chase Over 3 Estates.

MIDDLEBURG, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—The Middleburg Hunt, in the first official run of the season today had a field of 50 following the hounds, which started at the school house at Middleburg at 10 a. m. Before the hunt was over at 1:30 p. m. three foxes were jumped and denned.

Forty-five minutes after the meet started a fox was jumped and after a merry chase of half an hour Sir Reynard was denned. Later another fox was jumped and gave the riders a good, hard run for an hour when he, too, found shelter in his den.

A third fox was started and the chase lasted more than half an hour when the hounds drove him to cover.

The chase took the riders over the Aldrich Dudley farm, across S. Roger Fred's place and through D. C. Sands' estate.

Among those riding were Miss Charlotte Noland and D. C. Sands, Joint Master Fox Hounds, Jack Skinner, J. B. Skinner, Mrs. Amory Perkins, Mrs. Charles Sabin, Miss Eleanor Mackubin, and a number of girls from the Foxcroft School; Paul Llewellyn, Mrs. J. B. Anderson, Maj. W. L. Clifford, L. C. Leith, Capt. H. D. Whitfield, Miss Laura Sprague, Miss Fred, Miss Anne Leithe, Otto Furr and Norris Royston.

Game at Alexandria.

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.).—The local colored high school football season makes its bow here tomorrow afternoon. The Parker Gray eleven will meet Mayfield High School at Baggett's Stadium at 3:30 p. m.

Repeal Robs New York Garden Of Financial, Social Prestige

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—An event of considerable social importance is scheduled here tomorrow evening, one that in many ways resembles the opening of the Metropolitan Opera season. Madison Square Garden, the world's best-known palace of punch, is inaugurating its indoor season.

Impresario Johnston has selected a so-called all-star lightweight card for his first presentation of the season which will be a little disappointing to many of the veterans. Not that lightweights are declasse, but opening nights at Madison Square Garden have more or less been connected with aristocrats of the ring, champions or outstanding, colorful fighters, men like Delaney and Berlenbach and Walker and Terris and Singer, in the old days. The artists engaged for this first of the season's productions, I note, are mainly journeymen of the lightweight class with the exception of an import from the Pacific Coast, an African star named Young Peter Jackson.

Status Is Altered.

Alas, I fear that audiences to these fiestas have degenerated in color and class along with the performers. The advent of repeal has altered the financial and social status of many who in the dear departed days were listed as our more prominent citizens. When again will we see such a front row as used to occupy subscription seats at the first night cauliflower soirees, when the millionaire's neighbor was the town's most prominent wholesale purveyor of illicit liquor, and next to him would sit a movie queen, a snatch racketeer, an interdicted brewer of forbidden beer, two thugs, possibly a graduate or two of that long-term university at Ossining, N. Y., then a couple of hijackers, an itinerant machine gunner or two, looking for work, then a society lady rubbing elbows with some gang leader's fille de joie? Perhaps never.

The charm of these democratic gatherings was undeniable. The presence of gun bearers and men with reputations of being irascible and short-tempered in public places, such as the late lamented "Hotsy-Totsy Club," lent more than a small fillip to the evening's proceedings.

No Resort to Firearms.

Alas, with repeal, social lines already have begun to change. The purveyor of our liquor has as much color and interest as our green grocer and about as much wealth. The brewers remain among their copper kettles and are able to ply their ancient and honorable trade without resort to firearms or black powder bombs. An ex-soda jerker by the name of Melvin Purvis, now working for the Government, has bled most of the romance and sentimental appeal out of the professional naughty-boys and there is a feeling when examining one of these nowadays that you are looking not upon some dramatic Dick Turpin or Robin Hood, but merely getting a glimpse at what will likely some day be another of Mr. Purvis' elegant corpses, festooned over a slab.

I remember the grisly thrill at one fight when the ringside was invaded by a man from the local side who said he had been sent up by the city desk on a tip that Mad Dog Vincent Coll, who later was bisected by machine gun bullets quite cozily in a telephone booth, was in the audience, looking, I believe, either for a Mr. Schultz or a Mr. Madden. As it happened, Coll was not there that evening, but he might have been. Nearly everybody else was.

Were Colorful Days.

Those were indeed colorful days. The town's finest society, the greatest merchants and bankers, the most important actors and actresses, and finally the biggest rascals, attended the prize fights, and if there was no story enacted in the four-cornered roped boxing pit there was usually one to be picked up in the lobby, or from the inhabitants of the first two rows. I am curious to see that percentage of these great gatherings report at ringside tomorrow evening.

Two of the headliners on the evening's card are members of the "I-got-licked-by-Canzoneri Club." Both of them fall more or less into the class of suckers also, since each, having whipped Canzoneri, gave him an immediate return bout and suffered a prime shellacking. These are the Messrs. Dublinsky and Klick, who are paired together in a sort of a consolation match.

The debut of the African Young Peter Jackson, who, they say, has the shoulders and the kick of a middleweight, also will be watched with interest, though it is doubtful whether we will be permitted to see the young man in too good a performance. His skin being pigmented as it is, he must not be too devastating or he won't get work. Two graduates of the Golden Gloves amateur ranks will be seen in major engagements. One is Al Roth, and the other Len Del Genio, the young Italian boy, who was a sensation as an amateur novice. These are the high lights of the evening. The audience may yet be the story.

Stocks Retreat Fraction in Slight Changes

Market Pays Little Heed to Wheat Rally; Sales, 541,690 Shares.

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—The stock market picked its way hesitantly along a narrow path today, paying little heed to a brisk rally in wheat and brighter business prophecies.

Except for grains, a recovery in rubber futures and scattered strength in the share list, the main drift of prices was downward.

Stocks were indifferent in the face of Henry Ford's buoyant view of his 1935 sales prospects, an advance in tire prices and efforts to stabilize the crude oil and gasoline market. Nor did speculative markets seem to be impressed after further study of the implications of the move to raise Federal Government salaries next July in anticipation of rising prices.

Trading Expands Slightly.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks for the fifth day moved within a range of less than a point. It dipped two-tenths of a point, to 69.7.

Rail and utility shares retreated before a steady dribble of liquidation. Industrials did comparatively better, but gains were small.

Prospects of a seasonal decline in freight traffic restricted support for carrier shares. Central of New Jersey fell 6 points on a few transfers. Union Pacific lost 2¼, Louisville & Nashville nearly 3 and Boston & Maine dropped a point, to a new 1934 low.

Other Weak Spots.

Other weak spots were International Silver preferred, off about 5 points; Beechnut Packing, down 2; Penick & Ford, down more than a point, and United Fruit, off 1½.

American Can, American Telephone, United States Steel, Chrysler and other leaders of the list moved narrowly, finishing with fractional changes up and down.

Briggs Manufacturing among auto accessory shares perked up on the Ford announcement that its 1935 production scheduled would be set at a million units or more. Copper shares were soft.

New York Bankers Hopeful That Permanent Insurance Scheme Will Be Changed Before It Goes Into Effect on Scheduled Day, July 1, 1935.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York, Nov. 1.—New York bankers are more hopeful than at any previous time that the permanent deposit insurance scheme now on the statute books will be changed before it goes into effect on the scheduled day, July 1, 1935. They believe that Congress, probably in the closing days of the coming session, will pass a bill, to be introduced with the approval of Chairman Crowley of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, removing what they regard as its most objectionable features.

The permanent plan, which replaces the present temporary plan on July 1 next, is found objectionable in two chief respects. First, and most important, it provides for unlimited assessments on solvent banks when more money is needed to pay losses to depositors of insolvent institutions. Secondly, it increases deposit insurance from the present limit of $5,000 per account to $10,000, and in addition provides for 75 per cent insurance of the excess above $10,000 to $50,000, and 50 per cent of all the excess above $50,000.

Mr. Crowley told the American Bankers Association convention last week that he favors the substitution of a fixed annual premium for the unlimited assessments provided in the permanent plan of insurance, or the initial assessment of ¼ of 1 per cent of insured deposits, with possible additional calls up to an aggregate of 1 per cent of insured deposits, under the present temporary plan. In this respect, Mr. Crowley would approximate in bank deposit insurance the principles of ordinary life and fire insurance.

Parallel Called More Apparent Than Real.

The parallel, however, is more apparent than real. Life and fire insurance premiums are based upon experience tables, carefully compiled by actuaries and covering experience over a long period of years. These give a scientific basis for the appraisal of risks and the determination of premium rates. Bank deposit insurance, on the other hand, furnishes no comparable basis in experience. If premiums were made high enough to furnish adequate reserves to pay losses to depositors on the scale that would have been necessary during the past 12 years, the banks would not now be in in position to pay them. However, fortunately, there is very good reason to believe that a smaller rate of premium will prove sufficient for at least some time in the future.

A fixed annual premium will prove desirable from the viewpoint of the banks, because it substitutes a fixed and certain obligation for the intolerable unlimited assessment to which they would be subject under the permanent insurance plan. However, deposit insurance imposes a definite obligation upon the F. D. I. C. to pay stated sums to insured depositors where banks close. It is highly important that the premiums received by it shall be large enough to cover possible losses, if the F. D. I. C. itself is to remain solvent under all conditions, and if we are to avoid saddling the cost of deposit insurance on the Federal Government.

There are approximately $32,000,000,000 of deposits in commercial banks at the present time, of which about $16,000,000,000 are insured within the $5,000 limit. The present payment of ¼ of 1 per cent of insured deposits provides only $40,000,000, which may be increased to a maximum of $160,000,000 if the FDIC so requires. Obviously, a sum of this size would be altogether inadequate to meet the calls that will be made on the insurance corporation in the event of the recurrence of any material number of bank failures.

Proposals have been made that the annual premium under the revised permanent insurance plan now under consideration shall be based upon all deposits of insured banks, rather than only insurable deposits up to $5,000. This will cause the large city banks, which hold the bulk of the deposits above $5,000, to contribute very much more than they now do to the deposit insurance fund. If the annual premium should be made 1-20 of 1 per cent of all deposits, the FDIC would obtain $16,000,000 a year. A heavier rate of premium would constitute a severe burden upon the weaker and smaller banks of the country, since such payments would have to be made every year out of their meager earnings.

Increment Would Form An Insufficient Sum.

An annual increment of only $16,000,000 to the insurance fund would constitute an altogether insufficient sum with which to build anything like an adequate reserve against future losses. Accordingly, serious consideration has been given to the proposal of allocating the 2 cents tax on bank checks, which lapses on December 31 of this year, to the deposit insurance fund.

This tax yields about $40,000,000 annually. It comes from bank depositors. Accordingly, this is considered a good way, since the Federal Government is giving it up in any event, to strengthen deposit insurance through contributions from bank depositors. Objections to the check tax from depositors are said to have been few and far between.

If the F. D. I. C. can obtain the 2-cent check tax proceeds, along with an assessment of one-twentieth of 1 per cent of all deposits of insured banks, it will obtain some $56,000,000 annually. With earnings on this fund, which will be invested in Government bonds, a more nearly adequate fund could be built up over a period of years so that eventually the banks would be relieved of paying premiums. They would then be asked for further contributions only in case of actual need.

Efforts will be made in Congress, when these changes are being made, to lift the limit of insurance from $5,000 to $10,000 per account. Bankers strongly oppose this as unnecessary, pointing out that about 98 per cent of all individual bank accounts amount to less than $5,000.

Bonds Decline One-Tenth as Sales Advance

Heaviness in Federals Tend to Soften Market; Trading, $16,099,000.

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Heaviness of United States Government securities and scattered railway liens today gave the bond market a somewhat softer appearance.

Owing to the increased activity in the Federal list, transfers totaled $16,099,000, par value, against $12,906,000 in the previous session.

The turnover of Governments accounted for $9,000,000 of the aggregate. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate issues was off one-tenth of a point at 84.1.

Federal List Loses.

Losses in the Government section ranged from three thirty-seconds to thirteen thirty-seconds of a point. More than $2,000,000 of Treasury 3s of 1946-48 changed hands at a decline of ten thirty-seconds.

Most of the Home Owners Loan and Federal farm bonds were active and moderately lower. Because of the relatively low yields of the majority of the Federals, dealers reported there had lately been some switching to other types of securities.

Possibilities of currency inflation and an unbalanced budget were not stressed particularly.

While prime corporation bonds were about unchanged to slightly higher in many instances, a number of secondary carrier issues were under pressure.

Issues Under Pressure.

Among these were New Haven 4s, off 3⅛ points at 41, a new year's low; Baltimore & Ohio 5s, off 1½ at 68¼; Central of Georgia 5s, off 4¾ at 18 ¾; St. Paul 5s, off ⅝ at 6⅜; Chicago & North Western 4¾s, off ½ at 25½; Erie 5s, off 1 at 65½; N. Y. Central 5s, off 1¼ at 64¼; N. Y., Westchester & Boston 4½s off 2 at 35; Pennsylvania Debenture 4½s, off ⅞ at 87½; Southern Pacific 4½s, off 1⅝ at 58¾; Texas & Pacific 5s, off 2 at 82, and Virginia Railway 5s, off 1¾ at 108.

A steady to firmer tone was displayed by some loans of American Telephone, Union Pacific, Santa Fe, Hudson Gas, Inland Steel, Pure Oil and Wheeling Steel.

In the foreign division, Argentine bonds dropped a point or so, but most of the Germans were up as much.

Curb Trading Turns Mixed; Activity Rises

New York, Nov. 1. (AP).—A mixture of small gains and losses prevailed at the close of the curb market today. Activity was slightly ahead of the previous day. A few specialties fluctuated widely.

Slight recessions were recorded by utilities, metals and alcohols. Oils ruled somewhat steadier. In the specialty list, Great Atlantic & Pacific 6 per cent preferred dipped 3 points, while Singer Manufacturing advanced almost as much. The declaration of a dividend of $5.25 on accumulations by directors of Montgomery Ward failed to attract much demand for the shares, which closed but a point higher.

Aluminum Co. of America dipped 1. News of the declaration of a $1 extra dividend along with the regular 75 cents quarterly by Parker Rust Proof came too late to effect the price of the stock, which finished fractionally lower.

Stocks—Trading plodded along in a narrow range, paying little heed to the rally in wheat and business prophecies. Stocks averaged two-tenths of a point down. Sales increased to 541,690 shares.

Bonds—Heaviness in Federals and railway liens gave the bond market a somewhat softer appearance. Prices made an average loss of one-tenth of a point. Sales advanced to $16,099,000.

Wheat—Active buying, apparently associated with closing up of trade spreads between Chicago and Winnipeg, led to sharp upturns in wheat. All grains closed higher. December wheat sold at 97¾; May at 96.

Cotton—Continued liquidation pushed cotton prices still lower. New low ground was touched for the movement. December sold at 12.00. The general market declined 11 to 16 points. January sold at 12.03.

Dollar—The United States dollar was fairly steady on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $4.98⅜ to the English pound; 6.58½ cents to the French franc, and 40.20 cents to the German mark.

Daily Credit of Reserve Banks Averages Five Million Lower

The daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding during the week ended October 31, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,455,000,000, a decrease of $5,000,000 compared with the preceding week and of $94,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1933.

On October 31, total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,455,000,000, an increase of $3,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $18,000,000 in money in circulation and $21,000,000 in member bank reserve balances, offset in part by increases of $9,000,000 in monetary gold stock and $5,000,000 in Treasury and National bank currency and decreases of $19,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks and $3,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts.

There were practically no changes in the system's holdings of bills discounted, bills bought in open market and United States Government securities.

During the week the Secretary of the Treasury made payments to three Federal Reserve banks, in accordance with the provisions of Treasury regulations issued pursuant to subsection E of Section 13b of the Federal reserve act, for the purpose of enabling such banks to make industrial advances. Similar payments will be made to other Federal Reserve banks upon receipt of their requests by the Secretary of the Treasury. The amount of the payments so made to the Federal Reserve banks is shown in the weekly statements against the caption "Surplus (Section 13b)" to distinguish such surplus derived from earnings which is shown against the caption "Surplus (Section 7)."

Changes in the amount of Reserve bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the year ended October 31, 1934, were as follows.

Standard Oil Of N. J. Votes Extra Dividend

American Tobacco Lists Two $1.25 Returns, Payable Dec. 1.

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—The board of directors of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey today declared an extra dividend of 25 cents a share on the capital stock in addition to the regular semiannual disbursement of 50 cents a share.

Both dividends are payable December 25, to stockholders of record November 15.

Directors of the American Tobacco Co. have declared the regular quarterly dividends of $1.25 on the common and common "B" stocks, both payable December 1 to stock of record November 10.

Fox Film Co. and wholly owned subsidiaries, not including Wesco Corporation and its subsidiaries, report net profit in the 39 weeks ended September 29 of $1,506,212, after charges, equal to 61 cents a share on combined class "A" and "B" stock. This compares with a loss of $226,345 before Federal taxes in the same period last year.

Wheat Driven Up as Buying Turns Active

Chicago, Nov. 1 (AP).—Active buying that apparently was associated with closing up of trade spreads between Chicago and Winnipeg led to sharp upturns of prices today for wheat.

Although Canadian government action putting wheat minimum prices into effect at Winnipeg was variously construed in Chicago, many traders acted on belief that the step would result at least temporarily in arresting declines in European markets. Considerable notice, too, was taken of British semiofficial estimates indicating a decrease of 44,000,000 bushels in world export surplus supplies of wheat.

Closing quotations in Chicago for wheat were firm at about the day's top level, 1 cent to 2⅜ above yesterday's finish, May, 95⅞-96; corn unchanged to 1½ higher; oats, ⅝-½ up, and provisions showing 12 to 35 cents gain.

Cotton Market

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—There was a further decline in cotton today under continued liquidation, which carried prices into new low ground for the movement with December selling at 11.99 or within 7 points of the record low touched early last week.

The action of the market yesterday brought in considerable liquidation of long accounts in early trading, and there was a little Southern selling. Offerings were fairly well taken by the trade and Liverpool was credited with buying May and July on the differences. The volume of business tapered off after the close of the English market and prices weakened under continued liquidation of December and some of the other more active old crop positions.

The lowest levels of the day were reached in the late trading, with March selling off to 12.08 and closing at that figure. October, after declining to 11.74 at the opening, rallied to 11.87 and closed at 11.77, or within 5 points of yesterday's final quotations, while old crop deliveries showed net losses of about 11 to 16 points.

Exports today, 22,727 bales, making 1,350,256 bales so far this season. Port receipts, 27,106 bales; United States port stocks, 3,167,003 bales.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was strong today, closing 5 to 10 points net higher, and at new highs for the season on further covering and commission house buying. The strong crude oil markets, with sales at 7¼ cents in the valley, the firmness of grain and Memphis reports that the seed market was at new highs for the season were contributing factors. Sales, 2,391 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; December closed 8.68; January, 8.67; March, 8.81, and May, 8.94.

Trade Outlook Lists Easing Of Food Prices

New York, Nov. 1.—The first of the month outlook for various important divisions of industry is summarized by the Standard Statistics Co., of New York, as follows:

Advertising—Space sales in both newspapers and magazines are reflecting the restrictive effects of recent dullness in general industrial activity, but small gains over a year ago for the newspaper division and moderate improvement for magazines are in medium term prospect.

Agricultural machinery—Substantially higher prices for farm products this year, combined with benefit payments and favorable late crops in drought areas, are expected to increase total farm income for 1934 to about 28 per cent above the 1933 level. This indicates materially increased demand for farm machinery during 1935, especially in the early spring.

Aircraft—With mail revenues still substantially below 1933 levels and passenger traffic now receding seasonally, operations of leading air transport companies for the rest of this year will undoubtedly be highly unprofitable. Manufacturers of aircraft are likely to receive some increased volume from expanded military purchases, but earnings generally will remain limited for a further period.

Automobiles—Current output remains extremely low, while the seasonal reduction of field stocks proceeds, and manufacturers prepare for 1935 offerings. Nevertheless, the full year will show unit gain of fully 40 per cent over 1933 and the expected resumption of factory activities by several important units late in this quarter should gain considerable momentum during the earlier months of next year.

Building—The seasonal decline in public works contracts and operations will be relatively moderate in coming months and activity in the nonresidential field may be equally well sustained. Residential building will be bolstered by repairs under the housing program and later will reflect Federal promotion of new home construction.

Coal—Seasonal demand should cause a further increase in bituminous shipments during the next several months. Prices are expected to remain firm, although a general advance is highly improbable. Anthracite sales are showing an upward tendency in line with colder weather conditions. No change in prices of the latter is expected.

Food products—Price advances during coming months will be less pronounced than those thus far this year, although delayed adjustments will be reflected occasionally in retail prices. Volumes and operating returns will exhibit characteristic stability, but inventory profits will be smaller.

Crusade Expected To Improve Films Through Classics

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Hollywood's "so-called sexy types" might have dominated the movies for years if the morality crusade had not started the producers into new channels, Basil Rathbone, the actor, said tonight.

Now, Rathbone asserted, the producers will turn more eagerly to the classical material they previously neglected, and from the "meat of these stories" fashion some truly worth-while pictures.

"Thackeray, Dickens and Scott—and many of the others," he said. "Splendid stories packed away in those old volumes."

Illinois and Iowa Pick Corn Husking Champs

Earlville, Ill., Nov. 1 (AP).—Simon Oltman, of Woodford County, captured the State corn-husking championship today, husking 23.243 bushels in 80 minutes. Oltman and L. D. Kahle, of McLean County, who placed second with 22.869 bushels, will represent Illinois in the National contest at Fairmont, Minn., November 8. About 25,000 spectators saw the contest.

Waterloo, Iowa, Nov. 1 (AP).—Lee Stodgell, 38, of Morning Sun, was crowned Iowa State corn-husking champion today, besting a field of 25, sectional winners in the State contest.

Window Soapers Slip And Miss a Big Feed

San Francisco, Nov. 1 (AP).—Halloweening small boys, who soaped downtown shop windows last night were going to get a big feed Saturday, but now they're not.

Jubilant window cleaners planned the little testimonial to the business-makers—until they found the little urchins were soliciting windows to wash at two-bits each, under the professional scale.

Bell, Tennis Player, Held on Gun Charge

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Richard Berkeley Bell, 29, the tennis player, was held in $500 bail today for further hearing on November 9 on a charge of illegally possessing two pistols.

Bell told Magistrate Anna M. Kross that the weapons, found in his hotel room, were not his property and that they were in a closet when he rented the room several months ago.

Walt Mason Himself

For Diversion.

I called upon the parish rector, to talk of moral ills, and he was reading "Hot Gun Hector, the Terror of the Hills." It was a tale of cowboys gory, who shot up desert towns, and thus achieved a sort of glory, in blood-stained hand-me-downs. "I do a lot of heavy reading," the blushing rector said; "I nearly always am proceeding through volumes dull and dread. I study those who wrote profoundly on subjects deep and vast, who argued questions firmly, roundly, far back in ages past. And as a change of jurisdiction, to soothe my weary breast, I like to read some cowboy fiction, a story of the West. I like to read of crime and murder, and all they're standing for, as when a cowboy shoots a herder and starts a cattle war. I like to read of cowboys ganging the rustlers on the leas, and then behold those rustlers hanging from swaying poplar trees. And when I've read a red hot story of guns and fighting men, I concentrate upon the glory of noble books again." I called upon the learned physician, to talk of certain glands, and he was in gay condition, a sleuth tale in his hands. It was a tale of crime and passion, the gallows and the chair, and he, in quite a cheerful fashion, pronounced it passing fair. "I get so tired of narmal voters," the learned physician said, "who earn their coin and tool their motors and routine pathways tread, that I at times am fairly driven to reading such a book, wherein the hempen noose is given to some poor hapless crook."

On the Air Today

By George M. Adams, Jr.

WHO remembers the family scramble for the only set of earphones? The lucky person who finally clamped the phones to his ears would often have his persistence rewarded by hearing faint signals and music from KDKA, the Nation's pioneer radio station.

Tonight from midnight until 1 o'clock, KDKA, now one of N. B. C.'s proudest boasts, will present its twelfth anniversary broadcast with a dazzling array of radio's talent. Richard C. Patterson, jr., N. B. C. executive, will read a message from David Sarnoff, president of R. C. A., and will introduce Dr. Frank Conrad, who put on the first program from KDKA on November 2, 1920.

Entertainers will include Paul Whiteman, George Ilsen and Don Bestor and their orchestras, Ethel Shutta, the Pickens sisters, Honeyboy and Sassafras, Irene Beasley, Vic and Sade, Howard Claney, Twenty Fingers of Harmony and Little Jackie Heller. Pat Barnes will act as master of ceremonies.

ARCH MacDONALD'S young hopeful, whose name is also Arch, but who's known as "Sandy," was watching his daddy a few minutes before he went on WJSV the other night. Bob Trout, announcer, launched the usual introduction prior to Arch's 6:15 p. m. spot and just as he wound up young "Sandy," aged 6, piped into the mike:

"I now turn the microphone over to my old man."

Arch will have as guest of his program today Col. Dan McGugin, coach of Vanderbilt's football team. He won't have Sandy.

Your Announcer Is . . .

Born in Youngstown,, Ohio, 36 years ago, he came here at the age of 7, graduated from Tech High School and attended George Washington U. until ill health caused his withdrawal. Sold cars for seven years, sang in church choirs—he now leads the choir of McKendree Methodist Episcopal Church — and finally joined up with WMAL, where he learned every angle of radio broadcasting. Under WMAL's C. B. S. regime he served as Presidential announcer during the Coolidge and Hoover terms, put Radio Joe's first program on the air seven years ago, did hundreds of "outside jobs," put Government heads, Cabinet members and every ambassador and foreign minister in Washington on the air. Shines in local civic broadcasts. Tall, hefty, blue-eyed, genial, his familiar spot announcement, "WMAL in Washington," is known to thousands of listeners. His style is smooth, even, melodious . . . he's something of a singer, though now a bit out of practice.

Stan celebrates his eighth anniversary with WMAL next January 22. The vibration of a transmitter is music to his ears. If WMAL broke down, Stan could put it together again and not miss a loose coupler.

The possibility of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt broadcasting from WJSV's studies—a thing she hasn't done to date—is being discussed with the announcement that the typewriter industry will present the First Lady in a new series on child education over the Columbia network from 7:45 to 8 p. m., starting November 11.

Mrs. Roosevelt's first broadcast is expected to be made from New York with her later programs originating from Warm Springs, Ga., and Washington, D. C.

MARY HOWE, pianist and composer, of Washington, D. C., whose composition, "Sand," will be played today over C. B. S. networks at 3 p. m. by Leopold Stokowski and his Philadelphia Orchestra, has this to say of her three-minute novelty, which was originally scored for a much smaller orchestra:

"As to 'Sand'—it is an imaginative piece on the substance itself—its consistency, grains, bulk, grittiness and its potential scattering quality; more or less what it appears to be when sifting through your fingers on the shore or at close gaze, having either Lilliput or Brobdingnag in mind. I might just say 'Sand-as-is' and let it go at that."

JEWS throughout the country will hear religious services in accordance with orthodox ritual, prayers and addresses by leaders of Jewry in a new series, entitled "The Message of Israel," starting today at 10:30 p. m. on WMAL.

For the first five broadcasts on Friday evenings during November, the speaker will be Rabbi Jonah B. Wise, of the Central Synagogue, New York. Noted cantors and choruses will sing the best of synagogue music during the series.

DICK LIEBERT, about a year and a half ago, was just another young organist from the West. Roxy's mammoth music hall was being completed in New York and one day Dick wandered in and asked for a job . . . with hundreds of other applicants . . . as head organist of the new theater. Roxy heard him play . . . mused, scratched his head and asked him when he would like to report for work.

Today he starts his own musical revue, bringing his organ music, Robert Ambruster and Milton Kraus and the songs of Mary Courtland to N. B. C. networks at 8:15 p. m. (WMAL locally).

Mother Is Held In Slaying Case

Mrs. Rena Johnson Says Fatal Shot Was Fired in Self-Defense.

Winchester, Va., Nov. 1 (Spl.). Mrs. Rena Johnson, 31, the mother of two children, who was taken in custody last Monday on a charge of slaying Lewis Washington, colored, in her home here, pleaded not guilty today, but was held over for the grand jury on the testimony of four witnesses when she was granted a hearing before Judge Donald Weems.

Shortly after her arrest, Mrs. Johnson declared she had acted in self defense to ward off an alleged attempt to assault her. The evidence offered today by John Ash, colored, and Mrs. Norine Dunlap, a neighbor, was alleged to show that Washington and Ash went to the house to purchase a pint of liquor and that the fatal shot was fired when Washington grabbed the bottle from Mrs. Johnson's arms and started to leave the house without making payment.

Attorney Loses Comb in Court, But Not Dignity

A prominent Washington attorney, who is almost totaly bald, lost a hair comb yesterday rather than take a chance on retrieving it and upsetting the dignity and solemnity of the United States Supreme Court.

The lawyer appeared before the court to move the admission of a colleague. He stood on the dais in front of the justices, suggested the admission be allowed, and while there dropped a small comb.

"That comb can stay there. I'll never live it down if I take this bald head of mine in there and start looking for a comb," the attorney said as he walked away.

Foreign Trade Recovery Vital, Hull Declares

World Markets Needed for Full Reemployment, Says Secretary.

New York, Nov. 1 (U.P.).—Full reemployment and return to predepression standards of living for Americans demand unhampered revival of foreign trade, Secretary of State Cordell Hull declared tonight at a National foreign trade council dinner.

Not only will unemployment continue until we recover foreign markets, Hull warned, but production will become regimented according to imports allowed to be brought into each nation. He said:

"If the trend toward this intensified regimentation and control of foreign commerce, and the close bilateral balancing of trade is not checked, the whole economic system will be forced over a period of years to make a violent structural shift in international division of labor. During this transition, economic conditions will necessarily be seriously disturbed.

"When, at last, this structural adjustment has been made, the inevitable result will be a materially lower standard of living than might have been achieved under a liberal commercial policy."

The Secretary said advances should be made on "many fronts" before revived foreign trade could be called successful for the entire world. Included in these fronts he listed reestablishment of equilibrium in the international price structure, currency and exchange stability, and removal of current close regulation of foreign trade through quotas, import licenses, exchange control, and clearing and compensation agreements.

Hull said the "merry game of booming business by both selling on credit and buying from ourselves" had emphasized to American business that imports were as important as exports. He declared that now the tariff is "no longer a purely domestic issue."

Hull predicted that "extreme nationalism, if persisted in, is destined soon to wreck our entire structure of Western civilization."

IT HAS BEEN LITERALLY EATEN AWAY BY PEASANT WOMEN WHO BELIEVE A TASTE OF THE STONE WILL ENABLE THEM TO BEAR CHILDREN...

MISS MADELINE LANGLEY- Gallipolis, Ohio - HAS ATTENDED SUNDAY SCHOOL EVERY SUNDAY SINCE AUGUST, 1897...

Marking the grave of an unknown aristocrat of the middle ages, the tombstone in the above drawing has had the curious fate of being literally eaten away by human beings. No one knows whose grave it marked, or when or why the person it honored met his or her death, yet somehow the story was circulated through the peasant districts around Sarajevo that a taste of the stone would enable women to bear children.

Hopeful women came from far and near to chip away a bit of this precious stone. This they took home and ground to a powder, then mixed it with milk or water and drank the mixture, feeling certain that it would bring them happiness.

Whatever success or failure came of this strange prescription, the faith of barren women continued Little by little the gravestone was worn away until finally authorities put a stop to it. The birthrate of the district seems to have suffered little because women were forbidden to continue eating the tombstone.

Strange as it seems, vanilla flavoring is tasteless—its odor gives rise to a sensation which you mistake for taste when you eat foods flavored with vanilla. Vanillin, the distinctive fragrant constituent of vanilla, is so strong that it can be detected when present in a ratio of one part in 10,000,000 parts of air.

Ickes Is Amused By G .O. P. Attack

Says Request for Him to Quit Party Is 'Touching.'

A "touching and pathetic spectacle" was Secretary Ickes' description yesterday of the action of the Cook County Republican central committee in asking his resignation from the Republican party, the Associated Press says.

Ickes returned to the Capital after a two weeks' speaking trip. He made this comment at a press conference:

"The naivete of the Republican Cook County central committee is delightful. * * * The committee, collecting its dying strength, requested me to resign from the Republican party or something of the sort.

Thieves Get $165 Ring, Cash and Seven Dresses

Mrs. Mary Ella Baxter, 2015 O street northwest, reported to police last night some one had entered her home and stolen a diamond ring, valued at $165, and $7 from her purse which was on a piano.

Lieut. R. G. Stern, on duty at Fort George G. Meade, told police he parked his automobile at Tenth and I streets northwest late last night and when he returned to the vehicle he found some thief had broken into the car and stolen a box of seven women's dresses. They were valued at $75.

Victim of Horse's Kick Dies From Lockjaw

Lockjaw yesterday caused the death of Paul Brooks, colored, 26, in Gallinger Hospital, a month after he was kicked in the abdomen by a horse, police said.
